Gold Bricks Pave The Way

By JAMES TURNER

The financial road that will lead to a new Virginia Beach Little Theatre will be paved with gold. Gold bricks, that is.

"The bricks are sort of symbolic of the fact that people are helping to build something when they buy one," said 17-year-old Chris Wall, chairman of a youthful fund drive for the theatre.

"We've got about 500 bricks that we will be selling to merchants through the Chamber of Commerce and at the Boardwalk Art Show, and we expect to raise about $2,000," he said.

The project, which began about a month ago, stemmed from what Larry Williams, a director of the theatre's board, called a "desire to be involved."

"This is the first time young people have been organized in the theatre," he said. "There's a need on their part for this type thing, and all that needs to be done is give it to them."

"There are hundreds more like these kids who want to work but have no outlet," he said. One of the hundreds who found the outlet is Peter Kostopoulos, 17, who had handled publicity for the Virginia Beach Arts Festival and heard about the theatre project.

"I got involved because we need a theatre badly. Virginia Beach professes to be the largest resort city but it doesn't have anything for somebody who wants to see something more cultural than Bill Deal and the Rhondels," Kostopoulos said.

"Culture breeds better living," he said. "It teaches you how to think and affects the way you think, and there's not enough of that in this city."

"When people come here for visits and see nothing but little places that serve beer along Atlantic Avenue, they think that that's all Virginia Beach has to offer," Kostopoulos said.

The city needs a permanent theatre that will fill the "cultural gap," he said. "I'm not an actor and I'm not in any of the theatre projects, but I think that we need to have something like this; that's why I'm involved."

Wall said there are about 20 other young people working in this project and he expects that the actors in the group will be presenting a show sometime in August.

"But it's hard to get people to put money into something that isn't concrete," Kostopoulos said.

He said that the new theatre, with the barest of necessities, will cost about $70,000. Thus far, approximately $11,000 has been raised. When the total hits about $25,000 work will begin on the theatre, to be located at 24th Street and Barber-ton Drive.

The agreements specify that Virginia Beach will take Norfolk garbage for $3.12 a ton and that Norfolk will sell water to the resort borough at 32 cents per 1,000 gallons.

The contracts expired Tuesday. Virginia Beach is presently negotiating to build a joint water system to serve the two cities. These negotiations are still underway.

The government is requiring that we assume more and more of the care for a patient that it is financially responsible for," he said, "and it just isn't working out."

Willis said that government payments for Medicare and Medicaid are made on the basis of patient care per day. That figure is derived by adding up all the hospital expenses for a day and dividing by the number of patient care per day.

The problem is that few Medicare and Medicaid patients are treated in emergency, obstetrics or pediatric facilities. Therefore, the government does not consider these to be "true costs" and subtracts them from overall costs, even though they still exist for the hospital, he said.

The government pays only the bare minimum for patient care and doesn't leave any room for needed funds for expansion, he said, and if the hospital wasn't able to spread patient costs out fairly evenly, then instead of paying $65 for the obstetrics

George Rawlings, one of three candidates vying for the Democratic nomination for U.S. Senator, has received the endorsement of two Virginia Beach political leaders.

Councilman-elect Frank D. Tarral and Cornelius D. "Bud" Scully, a staunch Democratic supporter, both publicly endorsed Rawlings this week.

Tarral based his support on the candidate's honesty and sincerity, he said.

"I have learned to respect George Rawlings because of his conduct in this campaign," he said. "He has spoken out forthrightly on every issue from drug abuse, respect for law and order and protection for both young and senior consumer."

Scully praised Rawlings as "a man who has waged the battle for consumer protection, betterment of our working people and the overall good for the majority of all of our citizens."

Friday Is Holiday For Many

The Independence Day holiday in Virginia Beach will be marked by a variety of office closures and disruption of some services as a result of July 4th falling on a Saturday this year.

Since Independence Day falls on Saturday, the City of Virginia Beach will observe the holiday Friday, with all offices being closed.

Friday will also be observed as a holiday by the City's Municipal Court as well as the Juvenile and Domestic Court. Court's Clerk's offices will also be closed. The Virginia Beach Circuit Court will not be in session Friday, however that Court's Clerk's office will be open for business as usual.

The City's Sanitation Department will conduct the regular garbage and refuse collections on Friday and Saturday.

The Virginia Beach Post Office will conduct normal operations on Friday but will not make home mail delivery on Saturday. However there will be the normal holiday schedule of mail collection on Saturday.

Virginia State ABC Stores will conduct business as usual on Friday, observing normal hours of operation, but will be closed all day Saturday.

Contracts Extended

There has been another delay in settling the water and sewage contracts between Virginia Beach and Norfolk.

Norfolk City Council Tuesday approved another six-month extension of the contracts and Virginia Beach City Council is expected to do the same at its July 13 meeting.

The agreements specify that Virginia Beach will take Norfolk garbage for $3.12 a ton and that Norfolk will sell water to the resort borough at 32 cents per 1,000 gallons.

The contracts expired Tuesday.

Virginia Beach is presently negotiating to build a joint water system to serve the two cities. These negotiations are still underway.

Hill-Burton Funds

Would Help But Not Entire Answer

Virginia Beach General Hospital Administrator Earl Willis said Wednesday that even though the Senate vetoed a Presidential veto of the Hill-Burton bill, hospitals will still not be able to meet expansion needs to service the nation's sick.

"The government is not appropriating enough to go around in Virginia or in any other states," he said, and added that there have never been enough funds to go around.

Willis said that if larger loan guarantees were made or if Federal loan subsidies were made available, it would ease the money situation for hospital construction, but that won't be the case with the passed legislation.

The Virginia Beach hospital has applied for Hill-Burton for the past two years and been refused both times.

Willis said the reason for refusal is that the Virginia Beach hospital is not high on a priority list set up by the state for hospitals.

The bill, passed in the Senate with a vote of 76 to 19, provides for $1.5 billion to underwrite local plans for hospital construction and $1.26 billion for grants. It was the first time the Senate has overridden a Presidential veto in 10 years.

Willis said the state uses a complex formula that determines the number of acceptable hospital beds available in a ratio to the area population, and the beach hospital doesn't rank high on the list.

Another problem facing hospitals is that of Medicare and Medicaid patients.

"The government is requiring that we assume more and more of the care for a patient that it is financially responsible for," he said, "and it just isn't working out."

Willis said that government payments for Medicare and Medicaid are made on the basis suite it would probably cost the patient about $200.

Willis said that the national average for federally subsidized patient use is about 30 per cent, while Virginia Beach General's average is about 25 per cent, in addition to 15 per cent of the patients being assisted under Medicaid plans.

"If there are no Hill-Burton funds available and unless hospitals have endowment funds, I don't know how we will be able to expand to meet the needs," Willis said.

The only option open to hospitals to continue meeting existing needs will be to raise the cost of a paying patient's services, he said.

Rawlings Supported

George Rawlings, one of three candidates vying for the Democratic nomination for U.S. Senator, has received the endorsement of two Virginia Beach political leaders.

Councilman-elect Frank D. Tarral and Cornelius D. "Bud" Scully, a staunch Democratic supporter, both publicly endorsed Rawlings this week.

Tarral based his support on the candidate's honesty and sincerity, he said.

"I have learned to respect George Rawlings because of his conduct in this campaign," he said. "He has spoken out forthrightly on every issue from drug abuse, respect for law and order and protection for both young and senior consumer."

Scully praised Rawlings as "a man who has waged the battle for consumer protection, betterment of our working people and the overall good for the majority of all of our citizens."

DuVal Names Gawrys

Delegate Clive L. DuVal, candidate for the Democratic nomination for the U. S. Senate, has named Joseph A. Gawrys as campaign manager in Virginia Beach.

A member of the Virginia Beach Executive Democratic Committee, Gawrys supported William C. Battle in the gubernatorial primary and runoff last year, the Battle-Reynolds-Miller ticket in the general election, and Senator William B. Spong in 1966. In 1967 he was a candidate for the Virginia House of Delegates, losing by only 400 votes.

Gawrys, a former aircraft carrier pilot, is a commander in the Naval Reserve and is currently commanding officer of an airborne Early-Warning squadron. He is an attorney and received both his undergraduate and law degrees from the University of Virginia.

Originally from Massachusetts and New Hampshire, Gawrys has lived in Virginia Beach since 1949. He is married to the former Alva L. Hulise, also a native of Massachusetts. The couple has five children.

"I appreciate the confidence Mr. Gawrys has expressed in my candidacy," said DuVal. "It is the willingness of able and outstanding citizens like Mr. Gawrys to work in political campaigns that helps make our Democratic system work."

DuVal will be at Pembroke Mall Shopping Center this afternoon from 4:45 to 5:30 p.m. and will meet with State Senator Edward T. Caton III and other Virginia Beach supporters for dinner between 5:30 and 6:30 p.m.

At 7 p.m. he will speak at a young people's rally at the home of Wyatt Andrews, 1397 Emory Place, Lakewood and will hold a cocktail party and rally at the Admiralty Motel in Norfolk from 8 to 10 p.m. for more than 500 invited guests.

Undercover Agent Tells of Life in City's Drug World

By LES LEHIGH

A law enforcement officer who recently worked as an undercover agent during investigations of narcotic and/or drug law violations in the City of Virginia Beach this week said "the Beach" definitely has a drug problem."

The officer's "under cover" assignment involved the purchase of drugs and observing other individuals who bought drugs, to gain necessary information to enable police to make arrests and obtain necessary evidence for prosecution in the Courts.

He said that the main source of drugs moving into the city has now moved as close as Norfolk and Richmond, and the drug pushers operating in the resort city now include juveniles, aged 13 to 18, as well as adults, aged 18-25.

This agent gained his knowledge of the drug and narcotic situation in Virginia Beach by virtually living the same life as those involved in the trafficking of drugs.

He found that the main source of drugs in Virginia Beach are "people who come into the city to push drugs and go out the same night."

These drug "pushers" fall into three categories, he said. The "high class pushers," are convicted felons who have no qualms in bringing supplies of drugs into the city to sell in any manner possible. The "middle-aged pushers" are adults 18-25 years of age who make short trips out of the city to "make a score" (pick up a small supply of drugs) then return to the city to "push"

(sell) their merchandise. The "juvenile pushers" are 13-18 year olds who are easily persuaded by older pushers to peddle drugs for a small fee or a supply of drugs for their own use.

The agent said that hashish (a concentrated form of marijuana) is now being the drug most prevalently being pushed in Virginia Beach, with grass (marijuana) running a close second.

He said however, that the heavy crack down by Virginia Beach police is resulting in marijuana becoming more scarce than in the past.

When questioned about locations in the resort city which are being used most heavily in street sales of drugs, he said "most of the sales are taking place in the Beach area. Most of the pushers hang around the area between 21st and 22nd Streets and Atlantic and Pacific Avenues."

The officer also said that a number of residences between 16th and 23rd Streets were being used for illegal sale and/or use of narcotics and drugs.

He elaborated on this point by saying that his experience showed that "a number of apartments and motel units are being maintained for this specific purpose."

The agent described members of the Virginia Beach Police Department's vice squad as "topnotch men" who "know what is going on and who will eventually get what they are after."

The concentration of individuals associated with drugs in this particular section of the Beach Borough, has had a detrimental affect on the overall appearance of the area in attracting and holding tourists, he said.

He summarized this by saying "I feel this is hurting your tourist business because of a lack of desire of visitors to associate with this element, to have to walk the streets with them."

This officer said his assignment also proved to him that a large portion of those persons who are drug users in the resort city have now also become drug pushers.

When asked what type persons are included in this ever-widening circle of those affiliated with the drug movement he replied "users and pushers come from every class of society... from the high income levels and the low income levels... from individuals who don't have the chance to be accepted. Drugs actually become a common factor for them to be accepted by a group."

He said that the use of drugs in Virginia Beach has "gotten to the point that parents will turn on (use drugs) with their kids during parties in their own home."

The question was raised as to what threat those who associate with drugs pose to other citizens of the city. The agent replied "the possibility of violence among the drug circle is very high. They will brag about who they got their money from (to purchase drugs), how they got the money, and what they did under the influence of drugs."

A Grim Reminder

Virginia Beach firemen remove debris from a single car accident on Laskin Road Sunday that resulted in the death of 22-year-old Andrew C. Johnson Jr. of Virginia Beach. Police said that Johnson, the driver of the small sports car, was pinned under the vehicle and that Richard N. Peltier, also 22, was thrown clear of the car and sustained cuts on the face and body. Johnson's death brings the city's traffic fatality count to 13 for the year. Facing a heavy Fourth of July weekend, National Safety Council officials advise travelers to be on guard for signs of exhaustion, to always wear safety belts, not to drink and drive and to keep alert.

Case Tried In Absentia Will Be Retried July 15

Paul J. Dolan of Richmond was found guilty of violating a number of boating ordinances in Municipal Court Wednesday morning. However, a motion to set aside the verdict and continue the case has been granted.

Dolan, 46, was charged by Virginia Beach police last Tuesday night at the conclusion of a four-hour incident which involved a chase between Dolan's 38-foot cabin cruiser, the Virginia Beach police patrol boat and U.S. Coast Guard boats.

Falling to appear for his scheduled trial in Municipal Court Wednesday, he was tried in his absence and found guilty by Judge P. B. White of two charges of reckless and negligent boat operation; a charge of disturbing the peace; cursing and abusing police officers; resisting arrest; and fined a total of $400 and costs and given a 30 day suspended jail sentence.

Representatives of the U.S. Coast Guard were in Court Wednesday as observers of the proceedings. Coast Guard officials said their organization is continuing their investigation into the incident involving Dolan and his cabin cruiser. These officials said the Coast Guard expects to reach a conclusion in the matter and take any necessary action within one week.

Would-Be Fireman Is Thief

A search is underway for the person, or persons, responsible for the theft of fire fighting equipment from the Chesapeake Beach Volunteer Fire Department Sunday night.

Dept. Chief Fred Quist said a fireman's complete uniform of "turn out gear", valued at $151 was taken from the department's headquarters building on Pleasure House Road. Quist said the thieves also took the Rescue Squad's ambulance on an unauthorized trip of 28 miles, then returned the ambulance to the station house.

Residents of Lake Shores reported witnessing the ambulance being driven through their area, with siren sounding and red warning lights flashing, for about 30 minutes.

Quist says he wishes to thank residents of that region for their assistance in the investigation into the incident and offers his apology for their having been disturbed by the ambulance.

DRUGS

on drugs, he'll eventually be anything in order to obtain his supply." He added "from one five or six good agitators in Virginia Beach and you're going to have a problem."

The agent also warned against being misled by persons in the drug movement who appear tranquil and to be advocates of the so-called "peace movement".

He said, "Their attitude toward peace goes as far and as long as they get what they want. After someone becomes involved in drugs, he reaches a point of having no respect for the rights of others."

As an under cover agent the officer gained an insight not only into the feelings of those who associated with drugs, but also the attitude of people toward the drug situation in the resort city.

"I don't think the people look at this the way they should, or they would demand more action and support from the courts," he explained.

He was asked what he felt should be the major move to combat the illegal drug and/or narcotic movement. He unhesitatingly replied, "I would demand from the courts of Virginia Beach stiffer penalties for drug offenses. The courts have to give stiffer penalties to frighten these people dealing in drugs and give 100 per cent support and cooperation to the police."

He qualified his opinion by saying that he felt that "as long as these people are permitted to return to the streets to roam free we will experience an increase in drug traffic."

Shirkey at work.

He Took a Chance and Found Life

Almost two years ago, 28-year-old Paul Shirkey decided that it was time to change the stains on his hands from grease to leather dye and walked away from a solid mechanic's job to take a chance.

"I'd had enough of mechanics," he said. "But I didn't know whether we were going to make it or not; there was no way of telling."

Working with his wife Linda, Shirkey said he had held the mechanic's job and worked at home on several leather jobs until the early hours of the morning before he quit. Then they opened the House of Leather on 12nd Street.

"It wasn't as if I went out and quit one day," he said. "But the risk was still there." Shirkey is the father of two boys and two girls.

He said that a lot of people seem to think that his type of business is "hippie." "That's not true at all. I come to work every morning seven days a week and work until 6 p.m. We can't take off and go somewhere whenever we want. This is a responsibility," he said.

"That part hasn't changed for me; it's got to be treated like a job, because in the back of my mind I have the thought that I have four kids to support."

But what has changed is the feeling. "It's good to know that you're working for yourself," he said.

Shirkey said that the aspect of leather work that appeals most to him is the creation of new items. "You're actually an artist; you can create things that nobody else has ever done."

"If I wasn't working with my hands I don't think I could take it," Shirkey started working with his hands as a mechanic when he was 20 years old; leather work came after he moved to California.

"I picked a lot of it up from a really good teacher when I worked in a small shop in Hermosa Beach. I met Linda as a result of the leather business. She was working in another shop there," he said.

"We came back here in December, 1967; that summer we were making sandals in Al's Surf Shop on Atlantic Avenue."

The next year we were making more stuff for other boutiques on the beach and then last year we decided we'd try it and see how it went."

"Finally, it got to be too much for Linda to handle the shop by herself," he said, "and I asked the service manager at Beach Ford for a leave of absence."

"He told me that I could have it if I wanted, that he liked to see anybody get ahead," Shirkey said, "and that I could have my old job back if things didn't work out for me."

"I knew exactly what we were going to do," he said. "People today have had enough of factory machine made stuff; now they want hand-crafted stuff."

"What I'm trying to do is put out hand-crafted products that look like machine-made stuff. What kills me is all the stuff out there that looks hand-butchered," he said.

"I want to put out quality stuff, even if it's only a few things at a time," Shirkey said. He said that one thing that's very rare about his business is that his wife works with him.

"It's rare that a wife would work side by side with her husband. I really like it that way."

"Linda is really good; she can make anything that's in the shop," he said. "The thing she works on are the suede things—skirts, pants, vests—that type thing."

Shirkey said that if everything goes right for the shop, they will have two or three items in the January Boutique Show in New York. That, he said, will present the opportunity to go on a larger scale.

"This fall, we plan to expand the shop and take in some other people. The operation is getting too big. We're backlogged with stuff we have to get out," he said.

"You know, the money isn't really important. Sure, I have the kids to take care of, but it's still not that much. If they have what they need, that's fine."

"We knew that if we made it through the last winter it would be all right. We had some money in the bank and I knew we would have to use some of it, but we were prepared for that."

"But what really counts is that I'm doing what I enjoy," Shirkey said.

The Price of 'Pot'

While the debate over marijuana rages, teenagers play a dangerous game of attempting to beat the law by using it.

What if they get caught? Probably, on first offense, they'd get a suspended sentence and never serve a day in jail. So what difference does that first offense make?

The Carbon Copy, a college newspaper at Frank Phillips College at Borger came up with food for thought for the youngsters who think they're getting away free with the first conviction:

"A youth was stopped for a traffic violation. The officer recognized the odor in the violator's car. The defendant had a few joints (of marijuana) with him.

He was convicted of possession, a felony, and received a suspended sentence.

Did he lose anything?

All he lost was the right to vote, the right to own a gun, and the right to run for public office.

He lost the opportunity of ever being a licensed doctor, dentist, CPA, engineer, lawyer, architect, realtor, osteopath, physical therapist, private detective, pharmacist, school teacher, barber, funeral director, masseur, or stock broker.

He can never get any job where he has to be bonded or licensed.

He can't work for the city, county or federal government.

He can enlist in the military service, but will not have a choice of service and will possibly be assigned to a labor battalion.

If this happened to you, would you think you had lost anything?"

Resort Needs More Shows Like Follies

For the past few months Sam Scott, director of the Virginia Beach Civic Center, has been fighting a battle all his own to bring the International Water Follies to the resort over the Fourth of July holiday.

Since it was an outdoor show to be set up on the parking lot at the center, an unbelievable amount of red tape had to be cut to clear the way.

But he finally made it. The follies, billed as the world's greatest water and stage show, opened Tuesday night. And it was well worth the battle.

The technical aspects alone are worth seeing... the two gigantic portable pools which, combined, hold 50,000 gallons of water; the special lighting; the portable stage; and the whole business can supposedly be dismantled in six hours.

Perhaps the most amazing thing about the show is that it has no carnival air. There is no flimsiness in staging and costuming. The performers seem to be the "friend-next-door" type (no con artists here). It's quality and all of the participants, from the sound man to the diving champions, are proud of the fact.

The show itself is just plain, wholesome entertainment, the kind that pleases the kiddies as well as the young-in-heart. It is bright and gay and relaxing.

It would be difficult to say which acts are the highlights. They are all good. There are a few slow moments in the first part of the show, but the second half more than makes up for it.

The water ballets are colorful and graceful and the young women in the troupe are truly an eyeful. Men and women alike will enjoy the parade of swimsuits from the 1800's to the briefest of today's bikinis (worn by a former Miss Sweden, guys).

The comic antics of Roger Nadeau is perhaps the show-stealer, especially the diving segment in the second part. The man is a very talented comedian.

Among the divers--Charlie Diehl, Clive Dyson, Mickey Barnett, Rick White--Diehl is the most noticed, not because his diving feats are more outstanding, but because of his size. He amazes the audience with the graceful movement of his 250-pound frame.

The very attractive Papsie Georgian, a many-medaled synchronized swimming champion, is a most accomplished water nymph and songs by Anne Carter keep the show moving.

But there were two non-aquatic acts that this reviewer thought most entertaining... impersonations by Dick Burgess and Dick Coffin. Burgess manipulated the trumpet into sounds of the many famous musicians and Coffin converted his voice and face into those of such personalities as Walter Brennan, Robert Mitchum (an excellent look-alike) and Elvis Presley (what a scream!).

Virginia Beach needs more entertainment like the Water Follies. It was hard work on the part of many people, of that there's no doubt. Scott was operating a forklift. Tuesday, assistant Jimmy Mathias was doing a multitude of jobs and the last touches were being completed as the crowds swarmed in that night.

Producer Sam Snyder said "We've tried to put together a show for the entire family with top notch performers who are also nice people." And that's exactly what he has done.

Scott knew it was a good show when he started fighting his battle. That was his incentive. Without it he surely would have given up early in the game. From the look of Tuesday night's crowd, the show is going to be a favorite attraction over the week-end. It will appeal to the tourist and resident alike--of all ages. (The show will continue through Sunday with two performances daily.)

Running for public office has become one of the most popular sports in the country today. When you count all the local district, state and national offices that politicians seek election to, it amounts to thousands. Campaigning has become big business.

Politics in our country is a winner-take-all sport. To the victor belongs the spoils, such as they are. About all the poor loser gets is a one way ticket to nowhere until the next election. Of course the loser has lost weight, most of which can be felt in his wallet which is considerably lighter than before the election. He has lost a lot of sleep, his voice will never be the same again and it will take a while for the smile on his face to melt.

Since everyone can't win, we have more losers every election than winners. The winners know what they must do and say. They know they must start running for re-election even before they take office.

What about the poor loser? Is it better to have run and lost than to have never run at all? Was it all worth the head colds caught by kissing all those sniffling babies? Was working the fickle voters worth spending themselves right up to the edge of bankruptcy? Only the losers can answer those questions.

Probably the most annoying thing the poor losers have to face after the votes have been counted is having to congratulate the man who beat them.

Why must the poor loser suffer not only the humiliation of being rejected by the voters but the indignity of congratulating the person who beat him? He suffers this fate because it is all a part of the game. Politics is as ceremonial in this country as drinking tea in Asia. One of our rituals is that the loser must be graceful and a good sport.

Not only must the loser be graceful about his defeat, he is expected to smile and have something nice to say about the person he has built up a real hatred for over months of campaigning.

The fickle voters expect to see the loser, all smiles, say such as "The voters have spoken. My opponent is to be congratulated on his victory. Now is the time to close ranks and everyone work for a better future."

That is a lot of bunk! Nobody can believe that the poor loser feels anything but pure cold hate for the nut that beat him. He has to feel that he was robbed. How can he feel any kindness in his heart after all the mean, nasty things the opposition said about him?

It is about time we changed the ritual of the loser smiling and saying nice things. Let the poor man get what is really on his chest off. What we need is a lot more sorehead losers. Let the defeated man have at least one last slug at the person who beat him. Let him get the sour grapes out of his mouth.

Just think how interesting it would make our political games if after the votes were counted a sorehead loser came on the T. V. and made his statement and said: "You call this an election? I tell you it was robbery."

Let him shake his finger at the audience and say: "During the campaign I called my opponent a no good bum. I still say it. All I can add is that he is a lucky bum! The poor suckers that voted for him are no better."

Instead of glancing around at his loyal supporters and thanking them, let him say: "Instead of thanking my supporters who labored long and hard in my behalf, let me say that if I had anyone like that I never knew about it. All those no good bums who promised to vote for me must have been drunk on election day. As for those jerks who were on my payroll and worked for me, I hope they choke on the olives in their drinks. If I ever find that nut who was supposed to be my campaign manager I will recommend him for a job with my opponent. I am not so sure they haven't been working together all along."

He might add: "If anyone is interested, my future plans are firming up. I am going to take off this tie, unbutton my collar, take a drink, kick my dog, slap my nagging wife, scream at my kids for a while and then I will feel better."

Just to be sure everyone got the message, I think he should add a final statement: "I have one final thing to say to all the people and I mean it with all my heart--DROP DEAD!"

Be Safe-And Alive

Virginia Beach is the place to enjoy a Fourth of July weekend. It is a fun-loving resort that offers much for the entire family. A full schedule of entertainment is planned and, weather permitting, thousands of visitors can be expected to flock to the city the next few days.

A holiday is a welcome release from the pressures of business, a change from the routine, and it generates the excitement and exhilaration at being free of responsibility. If only for a short time.

There is no freedom of responsibility of careful driving, however, and as tourists and residents alike travel Virginia's highway's this holiday it is hoped they will be ever aware of the other driver. It is hoped they will keep caution first and foremost in their minds so that families that have played together might return home safely together.

Last year twenty-three persons died in Virginia over the Fourth of July weekend. Admittedly, it was a long holiday since the Fourth fell on Friday. But statistics show that a holiday is deadly for the motorist, no matter how brief it might be. And a summer weekend treacherous at the very best.

Drinking, speed and exhaustion are the most common killers during holidays and most of course, be avoided. A driver should never get behind the wheel of an automobile when not in the very best physical condition. But there are a few other precautions that merit a reminder: avoid driving at night; drive defensively; and wear seatbelts.

Above all, use plain old common sense...the other driver might not.

Sun Review

From Virginia Beach Library

These are all quickies - some of the new books we've just received that are or were on the best seller lists.

"Love Story," by Erich Segal. A very short and very touching novel about the love between two young people - he, a not quite typical Ivy Leaguer, and she, an unconventional, independent woman.

"The Inheritors," by Harold Robbins. Third and final in the series of Robbins' fictional history of the film industry. First was "The Dream Merchants," second "The Carpetbaggers," Critics may scoff at Robbins, but he writes a book which is interesting and reads well. This one is about Steve Gaunt, who begins in the television industry, unlike Jonas Cord of the "Carpetbaggers." Like Cord however, he has vision and determination.

"Up the Organization," by Robert Townsend. Number One on the best seller list for non-fiction, this is the tale of what to do with a corporation by the man who brought us into national prominence with "we're only Number 2 but we try harder." His ideas would make the hardest corporate executive cry - and maybe sit back and reshuffle things a little!

Fee favored despite strong opposition

The city manager apparently introduced a controversial ruling when he proposed that the city penalize businessmen for falsely setting off burglar alarms in their places of business.

Roger Scott proposed recently that council set a fee of $50 on each false alarm over one per month per business.

The proposal was made, he said, because of the growing number of false alarms being handled by the police department.

The Sun readers fell right into line with the controversy and though the response was about 90 per cent in favor of imposing the fee, those who were against it were adamantly against it.

An entirely different subject is introduced this week, a subject which as yet has had very little airing...a possible access to Princess Anne from the Expressway.

The possibility of such a spur was the subject of an editorial in the June 11 edition of the Sun. It pointed out that the bulk of the city's population is located in the area north of Virginia Beach Boulevard, the center of government is located approximately eight miles to the south and that more adequate roads are needed to connect the two.

It also pointed out that this road would ease the traffic problems to and from City Hall and would open up the large land areas to the south for further development.

What do you think?

Education Loses a Friend

The Virginia Beach Public Schools have lost a friend, a driving spirit, in the passing of Miss Meta Louise Luxford.

This lovely, charming woman, so often described as "a true lady", was a stalwart in education for 44 years, each given with devotion far beyond the required responsibilities. Education was her life. She knew the field as few leaders will ever know it for she had the advantage of having "grown up" in the Virginia Beach school system.

Miss Luxford began her teaching career in the small Charly Elementary School near Pungo. She had not yet completed her own education but she continued until she earned a bachelor of science degree from Madison College and a master of arts degree from the University of Virginia.

Twenty-four years ago she entered school administration. She had behind her eight years of teaching and one year as an elementary principal. She was elementary school supervisor for 24 years and for the past 11 years has been director of personnel.

It was Miss Luxford's responsibility to oversee the hiring of teachers. Some 200 teachers are usually needed by the school system to fill new and vacated positions. Many hundreds may apply and each must be interviewed. Miss Luxford, in her determination to find the best qualified personnel, has always interviewed each of these applicants personally. Such was her devotion to duty and to the quality of education in Virginia Beach. It was such devotion that prompted the School Board in 1961 to name an elementary school for her.

Early in 1969 the sun did a feature article on Miss Luxford. She said at that time that she would not have a picture made until she retired. The picture was never made. She did not have a chance to retire. Six weeks ago illness took her from her office and she didn't return. But to the many, many people who knew her, the loveliness of Louise Luxford will always be pictured in their memory of her.

A NAVY WITH WHEELS?—An Oceana-based fighter squadron has gone into four-wheel vehicle production on its own. But they will hardly compete with the Detroit car manufacturers. The business they have gone into is the Soap Box Derby. Members of Fighter Squadron FOURTEEN (VF-14) provided the materials for three cars to be entered in the upcoming Soap Box Derby at the Norfolk Naval Shipyard. As an added bonus, the three recipients of assistance in building their cars got a tour of the squadron and the Oceana Naval Air Station. The three boys: Joe Tully, son of LCDR and Mrs. Joseph Tully, 201 Great Neck Road; Donald Damon, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Damon, 4420 Delco Rd.; and Henry C. (Bubba) Robinson, III, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry C. Robinson, Jr., 2525 Delmar Drive, Virginia Beach are shown here talking to LTJG John Cline and LT Dick Marsden. The project is one of many community programs that the famous TOPHATTERS are involved in. The squadron is also closely connected with a local Headstart Program.

Bogey man from Vepco gas

R. A. Murphy, gas sales engineer, works up bogeys (detailed statistical projections of natural gas consumption) from such widely diverse sources as the Weather Bureau, building contractors and his own knowledge of gas usage in the area.

With this information he and two other bogey men at Vepco Gas are able to calculate for many months in advance the needs of industrial, commercial and residential natural gas customers. Since bogey men make orderly growth easier through good planning, they are nice guys to have around.

And they're so friendly, the word bogey does them an injustice. But then nobody knows how the word came to be used at Vepco Gas.

Ambassadors Exchange Homes

Virginia Beach will have its own "German ambassador" for the summer, and the Tidewater area is returning representation through 17-year-old Nancy Longworth of Windward Shore Drive, who will spend her summer in the German City of Emden.

Both Nancy and her German counterpart, 16-year-old Gisela Scheffs, are participating in a summer youth exchange program sponsored by Hilltop Volkswagen, Inc., of Virginia Beach in cooperation with the VW factory. Both students joined 82 other "young ambassadors" from America and Germany, who will swap homes, families and friends for six weeks. The program got underway here this week when Gisela arrived from Germany and was greeted by Nancy and her Virginia Beach "foster parents."

According to Harold Hilschober, president of Hilltop Volkswagen, Inc., Nancy, a junior at Frank W. Cox High School, left for Washington, D.C., on July 1st to join 41 other students from the United States and Canada who are enroute to their German summer homes. After touring Washington, he said, the American youngsters will spend a day in New York City, arriving in Germany on the fourth of July.

Hilschober noted that Nancy was selected for participation in the exchange program by school officials who considered both academic achievement and participation in school activities. The objective of the annual exchange is to increase international understanding by permitting young people to experience differing environments, disciplines, customs and manners.

He said that more than 500 youngsters have taken part in the Volkswagen Youth Exchange since the program was initiated in 1962 by the late Dr. Heinz Nordhoff. A man dedicated to improving international understanding, Nordhoff was long-time president of Volkswagen. He initiated the first exchange with two students, and the number has increased each year since. All costs for the visiting and area students, except normal living expenses, are paid by Hilltop Volkswagen.

Gisela will remain in Virginia Beach until Aug. 3, when she will rejoin her fellow German Youth Exchange students in Washington. Nancy is scheduled to return to Virginia Beach on August 18.

The two students were honored at a dinner at the Cavalier Golf and Yacht Club by Mr. and Mrs. Harold Hilschober on Thursday evening. Others attending the dinner were Mr. and Mrs. E.E. Brickell, Superintendent of Schools; Mr. and Mrs. James W. French, principal, Frank W. Cox High School; Mr. and Mrs. William H. Longworth, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Jones, Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Luch, of Hilltop Volkswagen and James D. Peters of Volkswagen South Atlantic Distributors.

Show to Benefit School

Carolyn Jones and her brother Selby have been invited to participate in a talent show at Ocracoke, N.C. Monday night which will help raise funds for a school addition for Hyde County.

Carolyn, a member of the Virginia Beach Ballet company, and Selby both dance and play the piano. They perform a minuet together. This year Carolyn presented a bouquet to the Azalea Queen at the Azalea Festival.

Everybody participating in the show will be dressed in colonial costumes. Their father, Sam Jones, has been instrumental in organizing the show, and it is being choreographed by Gene Hammett.

traffic at the intersection of 18th Street and Cypress Avenue, then forcing him out of the car and taking his wallet which contained $169.
Guilty of Arson
A Circuit Court jury has found Barbara J. Ange, 28, of 18th Street, Chesapeake, guilty of arson in connection with a fire in her house trailer on June 23, 1968. Judge Robert S. Wahab, Jr., withheld imposition of any sentence on condition of her good behavior for five years.

Two Charged in Raid
A police raid on a 51st Street apartment early Saturday morning resulted in the arrest of two persons on charges of violating narcotic and drug control laws.
According to officials they charged Linda M. Shaner, 20, of 51st Street with possession of marijuana and James F. Smith, Jr., 23, of Minneapolis, Minn., with possession of dangerous drugs.

BADGES & BANNER

Capt. G.C. Riley, 1st Police Precinct C.O., is beaming with pride over the latest accomplishment of his son, who has been commissioned a 2nd Lieutenant in the Virginia National Guard. Lt. David M. Riley received his bars during a special graduation exercise at the conclusion of the Guard's annual summer training session at Camp Pendleton and will assume duties with the U.S. Army's 11th Field Artillery Battalion. Chesapeake Beach Volunteer Fire Department Chief Fred Quist says the unit is making some progress in obtaining a new boat for the Rescue Squad to use in emergencies in Chesapeake Bay. The new boat will replace the DUKW which the unit had to retire from service due to its reaching the point of not being safe to operate.
A new name was added to the police department's duty roster this past week. Neil Stevenson has taken up duties as a new identification clerk, with primary duties of issuing "I.D. Cards to those persons requiring them, at the 2nd Police Precinct.
The son of CPO L. Williams, attached to the Virginia Beach Shore Patrol Detachment, made his first real catch this past week during a fishing trip near the Chesapeake Bay Bridge-Tunnel. We understand six-year-old Lee A. Williams landed a three-and-a-half foot long shark, which weighed about 15 pounds and was so proud of the catch that he talked Dad into taking it home to show to his mother.
We offer our apologies to 3rd Police Precinct C.O. Capt. H.C. Terry for our oversight last week. We failed to include Capt. Terry's name among the list of Virginia Beach police supervisors who successfully completed the Police Supervisory Management Course at Old Dominion University in Norfolk. Dispatcher Robert Hill, 2nd Police Precinct, successfully completed his third baby delivery this week. Hill says that while on duty with the Davis Corner Volunteer Rescue Squad the unit was dispatched to transport an expectant mother to DePaul Hospital. When Hill and Squadman John Scanlon left the elevator on the floor of the hospital delivery room with the expectant mother the child chose that particular moment to begin its life. Scanlon assisted Hill in his delivery of a six pound ten ounce baby girl. Mother, child, Hill and Scanlon are all reportedly doing fine.

Officer S. F. Bennett, Jr., 2nd Police Precinct, tells us he and officer F. R. Scarborough went fishing off Eastern Shore this past week, and the outcome of the trip was sad enough to dampen the eye of the saltiest man of the sea. According to Bennett Scarborough landed a 50 pound Cobia which they secured to the boat with a line of sturdy rope. When they checked on the condition of the catch a short time later they discovered the Cobia had slipped from the line and disappeared. Scarborough becoming understandably downcast over his loss decided to call it a day, and they returned to Shore. Reaching port the pair were met by Bennett's brother Tommy who expressed a desire to try his luck. Scarborough made Tommy a loan of his rod and reel, and the Bennett brothers returned to fishing grounds. A short time later they returned to land with Tommy Bennett proudly displaying a 70 pound Cobia he landed which not only earned him a citation but gave him the leading position in the Cobia Class of the Virginia Salt Water Fishing Tournament.

Even Violators Like Patrol

One of the less publicized services provided by the Virginia Beach police department is that of a "beach patrol" conducted along the city's shore line from the Chesapeake Bay Bridge-Tunnel to the North Carolina border.
Police officers continually patrol the beach front in Jeep "Bronco" vehicles to offer protection and assistance to swimmers and sunbathers, as well as reminding those using the beaches of city ordinances prohibiting the drinking of alcoholic beverages on the beach, littering and laws established for surfing.
Some of the most important services provided by the patrol include searching for children who become separated from their parents, assisting lifeguards and helping property owners along the beach front with problems.
Officer John Steadman relates his observing a group of five young men acting suspiciously around small sand dunes at Croatan Beach. His investigation of the group indicated they were possibly attempting to assault a young couple on the beach at a location which offered them concealment. The couple moved to a more visible place after being warned of the danger to which they were exposing themselves, and the group of young men were dispersed.

Steadman also relates of the effort necessary in removing trash, litter and debris from the Croatan Beach area which, until recently, was referred to by many as "Tin Can Alley". Now it is virtually free of debris.
This patrol of the beaches is divided into three segments with the 1st Police Precinct covering Croatan Beach to Fort Story and Seashore State Park to the Chesapeake Bay Bridge-Tunnel being patrolled by the 3rd Police Precinct.
Officers F.P. Baggett, W.R. Caudle, J. Vergera, J.W. Mobley, T.R. Cooke, H.D. Suggs, J.A. Woolard, R.S. Bennett, S.H. Held, and R.H. Cheatwood maintain the 1st Precinct patrol devoting the majority of their time to Sandbridge and the Game Refuge.
Most of the problem in this area reportedly comes from the influx of visitors who are not familiar with provisions of the City ordinances. These involve parking in unauthorized places, littering, building of fires on the beach and occasional violations of surfing laws.
The 2nd Precinct area is patrolled by officers Ronald White, John Steadman and Thomas Edwards. Here protection of swimmers is of major concern as well as enforcing surfing regulations and observing boaters to assure their keeping a safe distance from shore.

Officers R.W. Hooker and G.B. St. Amand have the responsibility of the 3rd Precinct area. The make up of their territory results in devoting more attention to swimmers, boaters, crabbers and fishermen lining the shores, littering and the building of fires on the beach.
Perhaps the best testimony regarding the efficiency these 15 men display in the performance of their duties, which to a great degree involves public relations, might best be the manner in which they are treated by those they come in contact with.
The men constantly receive friendly waves and cheerful greetings from people on the beaches. There is, of course, an occasional humorous chiding from some individual who received a summons for an infraction of the law. For example a young man who earlier in the day had received a summons from officer Steadman for a surfing violation happened upon Steadman later that afternoon. He called to Steadman, "Hey, I remember you. You gave me a ticket this morning and I've got to go to court in the morning. You gonna be there? Okay, see you then. So long."

Distances Complicate Wedding

For some girls who are trying to complete their education in one city, live in another city and want to be married in another city, it might be easier to "just get married," but for Sally O'Neill this was not so. She had always wanted a beautiful wedding and she intended to accomplish just that.

She and Philip Larrabee, Jr., of Virginia Beach met at Elon College, N.C., where the romance began. After marriage was proposed, Sally began making decisions. However, she knew her studies could not go lacking, so arrangements for the wedding had to be made during school breaks, via letters and phone calls.

She came to Virginia Beach to visit Philip's parents and Mrs. Larrabee brought her to Rose Hall where Mrs. Larrabee has been employed for the past nine years. She found the bridal gown of her choice which had to be ordered in her size in candlelight.

She was also able to choose gowns for her bridesmaids as well as matching headpieces. With all these decisions behind her, there was still much to be done. Size for her bridesmaids had to be accurate for her bridesmaids were scattered from Illinois, Washington, Florida, New York and California. After much correspondence and a lot of measurements, correct sizes were determined and the gowns ordered.

When Sally's gown arrived, she and Philip waited until the next school break to come to Virginia Beach, at which time Sally's gown was fitted and a date set for it to be completed to coincide with her next break from school and the date scheduled for her formal portrait sitting. On this visit Sally selected the most part of her trousseau with the assistance of Mrs. Larrabee, and consulted with Mrs. Evie Myatt, bridal consultant for Rose Hall.

regarding invitations, florist, photographer and reception. Many major decisions were being made at this point and even more credit is due both Philip and Sally since they also managed to arrange for counselling sessions with Rev. John Lyles of First Presbyterian Church.

Philip's mother was the go-between for everything since Sally and Philip had to complete their schooling and Philip had to decide on a university for graduate school in optometry. The Southern School of Optometry in Memphis, Tenn. was the final decision and trips were made there to visit the university and to find an apartment in which to live after they returned from their honeymoon.

Three weeks prior to their wedding, Sally and Philip graduated from Elon College. Mr. and Mrs. Larrabee and Mr. and Mrs. O'Neill attended the commencement exercises. Immediately after graduation, Sally and her parents returned to their home in Sycamore, Ill. Sally sent out all of her invitations, attended showers and luncheons given in her honor and attended to many details during a busy, but fun-filled week.

Since the wedding was taking place in Philip's home town, his mother set up a display table for their gifts.

It became a matter of time before the big day. Mrs. Myatt was invited to the rehearsal dinner after assisting them through the rehearsal and found the dinner was more a family reunion. Some of the friends and relatives had not seen one another for 20 years and everyone had a delightful time.

The day of the wedding on June 14 was gorgeous, and as the couple took their vows and turned to leave the altar, they stopped momentarily to pick up something lying on the altar rail but hidden by the palms decorating the altar. As they reached the front pew they paused again to offer the "something" (a beautiful red rose, to signify love) to their mothers respectively.

The guest list included Sally's grandfather, Sheridan P. Wait, Sr., of Saratoga, N.Y., who is 81 years old. He says he lived to see Sally graduate and then to see her married. Perhaps he will also live to bounce his great-grandchildren on his knee. He had 12 grandchildren present at the wedding.

Sally and Philip left the Cavalier amid a shower of rice and spent a week's honeymoon in Washington, D.C. They took time to collect things from Illinois and Virginia Beach, then continued on to Memphis where they will reside until Philip gets his degree in optometry. They will even work together during the summer until Philip begins classes.

There's plenty of peanut butter

There's nothing like coming home from vacation and:

Getting caught in a storm. We flew into Memphis during a tornado alert. We flew from Atlanta during a thunderstorm. An hour after we got back to Virginia Beach a severe thunderstorm struck here.

Find nothing to eat. There was a small package of shrimp but not enough for five of us. There were little cans of vegetables, but not two of any one kind and one by itself wasn't enough. No milk. Two Eggs. No bread. One can of biscuits. No oleomargarine. Peanut butter.

Find six men's dress shirts to iron. And a closet full of dirty clothes in addition to the ones we had on vacation. The next morning the seven-year-old asked if she could have something else to wear--she had on the same shorts and shirt for three days.

Find an "azalea" pink bathroom. May I say I've never seen an azalea that color--sort of a dark "shocking" rose rather than shocking pink--and I do mean shocking. However, it doesn't glow in the dark. All the men in the neighborhood think it's great. Their wives, though, are somewhat less enthusiastic. I'd like to see some of the men try it in their own homes.

Find the house in pretty good shape--except for sand on the floor from the beach.

Discover that the leak in the roof has finally and successfully been fixed. There's no more drip onto the middle of the dining room table for the first time in a year and a half. That in itself is worth being away two weeks.

Federation picks officers

Lanette Rainey of Dinwiddie County 4-H Club, one of eight 4-H members in the United States who have been named "Reporter to the Nation," told of his 4-H experiences saying that his eight years of 4-H work have greatly improved his ability to cooperate.

Mrs. Ray Allen, new president of the Friends of Kempsville Club, was welcomed.

All members of home demonstration clubs have been invited to attend the state Federation meeting on the campus of Virginia Polytechnic Institute in Blacksburg on July 20-24. Reservations must be in by July 9.

Macanemie of the Air Force, and Bruce Cool, the bridegroom's brother, of Colorado Springs.

Following a reception in Colorado Springs, the couple left on a wedding trip to Las Vegas and San Francisco. They will live in Colorado Springs where the bride is a staff member of a Colorado Springs newspaper and the bridegroom has his own business.

The bride is a graduate of Princess Anne High School and graduate Magna cum Laude from the University of Colorado where she majored in journalism. While there she was president of Delta Gamma social sorority and was named to Who's Who in Colleges and Universities.

SEASIDE STRIPES -- Bright multi-color stripes give added zing to the classic tank top and short shorts in carefree cotton terry. Styled by White Stag, the outfit lets milady soak up the sun in high fashion.

Take along a terry

It's that time of year when sandy white beaches and the soothing sound of the surf are no longer idle winter dreams but delightful summer realities.

If you plan to be a summer '70 siren, rest assured. While you were dreaming of a whole summer of sun days, sportswear designers were working to make those dreams come true in style. What they've come up with is enough to make any career girl leave her typewriter and head for the beach, reports the National Cotton Council.

This year you can leave your beach towel at home unless you want to sit on it. Summer's most smashing sportswear looks are decked out in carefree cotton terry--a fabric known for its ability to soak up moisture as well as fashion.

The newest terries shape up in bold stripes and luscious solids for pull-on flare-leg pants, scooter skirts, short shorts, breezy midrifts, and classic tank tops. In lighter weights and soft, fine textures, they have a new-found style and zip that make getting dry after a swim a luxurious experience.

Designers see the new cotton terry fashions as part of the whole new approach to soft casual clothes for every hour of the day. Some predict they'll be worn away from the beach for twilight and evening hours as well as for day.

So be advised: if you want to vacation in style, take along a terry.

Hibachi becomes a favorite

A long-established American tradition, the barbecue is a perfect summer approach to the dinner party. The Great Western Test Kitchens at Hammondsport, N.Y., found that the barbecue provides many interesting opportunities for combining wine, easily prepared summer dishes, and the relaxed atmosphere of an outdoor gathering.

You may be interested to know the background of the hibachi, a small, portable grill used by the Japanese for centuries of outdoor and indoor cooking. In America, the hibachi has become available and popular with barbecue enthusiasts who appreciate its convenience and compactness.

In Japanese, the word "hibachi" means "firebowl" or "fire basin." It was originally used as a heater in Japanese rooms, but was adapted when the Americans began to use the small charcoal stoves as outdoor grills. It is large enough in most cases to suit a barbecue party, and small enough to be moved indoors to a fireplace in the winter, or in case of rain.

In Japan, the hibachi is a metal or earthen basin which contains burning coal used for warmth. Much like our fireplaces, the Japanese family will gather around the hibachi for a cozy, warm feeling.

In America, we use the charcoal of "wood turned to coal" for our cooking on the grill. The distinctive flavor of charcoal grilling has made the barbecue an American favorite.

It is important in cooking on any outdoor grill to keep turning and basting the meat at frequent intervals. This keeps the meat evenly cooked, and basting with our fine wine marinades insures you of tender and tasty barbecued treats.

You will be able to find a small inexpensive hibachi at your local hardware or cutlery store. Soon this timeless Japanese tradition will become a familiar and welcome sight for your family and dinner guests.

CHAMPAGNE COOLER

Put cherry or fruit slices in old-fashioned glass; add an ice cube. Fill with chilled GREAT WESTERN Champagne.

Peanut butter flavors parfait

Peanut butter is much more than a favorite spread! It is an ingredient in countless good recipes to which it gives its rich flavor. Chunky peanut butter also adds the interesting texture crispness of chopped peanuts.

Nothing could be easier than the Peanut Butter Parfait and Peanut Butter Ice Cream featured here which was developed in the Sippy Test Kitchens.

The parfait calls for preparing instant vanilla pudding according to package instructions, chilling and then folding in crushed pineapple. Peanut Butter is mixed with graham cracker crumbs and the pudding and crumb mixture are layered alternately in clear glasses to show off the interesting contrast in color and texture.

The Peanut Butter Ice Cream consists of beating air into peanut butter in a mixer until it is very soft and light in color and adding vanilla ice cream a little at a time, beating after each addition. This special ice cream treat is then refrozen.

PEANUT BUTTER PARFAIT

- 1 (3 3/4-oz.) package vanilla instant pudding
- 1 (8 3/4-oz.) can crushed pineapple, drained
- 1/2 cup creamy or chunk style peanut butter
- 1 1/2 cups vanilla wafer or graham cracker crumbs
- Whipped cream or topping

Prepare pudding according to package directions. Chill. Fold in pineapple. Mix together peanut butter and crumbs. Spoon alternate layers of crumbs and

PEANUT BUTTER ICE CREAM

- 1 cup creamy peanut butter
- 1 qt. vanilla ice cream, softened

Beat peanut butter with mixer at high speed until soft and light in color. Add ice cream a little at a time, beating well after each addition. Beat until light and fluffy. Pour into ungreased (9 x 5 x 3-inch) metal loaf pan. Freeze about 2 hours or until firm. Makes 8 (1/2-cup) servings.

It's not too late for zinnias

(Editor's note: Here is another of the series on home horticulture by Wesley P. Judkins, extension horticulturist at Virginia Tech.)

Zinnias will add bright colors to your garden, and provide a wealth of flowers for arrangements in the home.

Like many other plants, zinnias have been improved tremendously by breeders during recent years.

The zinnia, native to North and South America, probably originated in Mexico. It grows best in a warm climate, and is one of the most widely grown annuals in U.S. gardens.

The flowers of the zinnia are quite unique. Each one is a collection of dozens of small florets clustered tightly together in a head-type inflorescence. This is somewhat as if you took a large spike of snapdragon and squeezed it down into a compact flat ball.

and during the process each separate flower became quite small.

You can observe the interesting form of the zinnia flower by slicing one in half with a sharp knife.

The zinnia is a tender annual which should be planted when the weather becomes warm after all danger of frost is past. You can plant the dwarf types as late as July and still have blooms in your fall garden.

It is quite amazing to consider the range in size, and the variation in color available in zinnias. The plants vary in height from 6 to 34 inches.

You can secure varieties in any color except blue, with yellow, orange and red being the most popular.

The Thumbellina is the smallest zinnia. These plants are only six inches tall and are useful as a border for the flower bed. They may also be used as small potted flowering plants in the home.

The Cupid and Button zinnias grow to a height of twelve inches. These are fine in a flower bed or as border plants. They produce an abundance of blooms which may be used in small and medium size arrangements.

If you have zinnias in your garden, be sure to cut the flowers as soon as they fade. This is necessary to promote continued blooming during the summer and early fall.

The Persian Carpet zinnia has delightful flowers on fifteen inch plants. The blooms are similar to small bi-colored dahlias. Other attractive bi-colors are the Whirligig and Merry-go-round. These produce flowers about four inches across, with bright centers and petals tipped with white or yellow.

The Envy zinnia is a new and unique variety. This plant produces beautiful apple green flowers which help give a new dimension to arrangements. Another interesting color variation is the Peppermint Stick. This zinnia has flowers which are boldly striped in contrasting colors of yellow, red and white.

The Dahlia-flowered zinnias are popular because of their great size and excellent form. A well-grown flower will be six inches across and four inches deep. Another large type is the Cactus zinnia which has rolled petals forming tube-like points.

And last, do not forget the California Giants. These beautiful flowers have soft pastel tones in contrast to the usual strong yellow, orange and red colors. They produce long stemmed flowers about six inches across on plants which are three or four feet tall.

Did you know that you are required by law to have lifesaving devices on board your motorboat? The law requires every motorboat to have on board one Coast Guard approved lifesaving device in serviceable condition and readily available for each person, whether on board or afloat. For motorboats of less than 40 feet not carrying passengers for hire, the device may be a life preserver, buoyant vest, buoyant cushion, ring buoy or special purpose water safety buoyant device. The required devices on motorboats of 40 feet to not more than 65 feet must be either life preservers or ring buoys.

Why? In 1969 there were 1260 drowning victims in boating accidents throughout the United States. 48% of them were known to have had lifesaving devices available, 21% were known not to have had lifesaving devices available and for 31% it is not known whether or not they were available. 468 of those who drowned did have lifesaving devices available but did not use them or used them improperly.

In order to enjoy "safety afloat" you should be sure that you have the necessary number of Coast Guard approved lifesaving devices.

Types of lifesaving devices which the Coast Guard has approved are:

a. Life Preserver - These devices are most often of kapok type, but are also made of other material. This term is used technically to describe a lifesaving device that is worn like a jacket or bib.

b. Buoyant Vest - These are manufactured in several designs of kapok, fibrous glass or other buoyant material. This is the horse-collar type and is worn like a bib.

c. Buoyant Cushion - These devices are various buoyant materials in a variety of sizes, shapes and colors. They are fitted with straps to assist in tossing and to provide a handhold. They are designed to be grasped. They ARE NOT designed to be worn.

d. Ring Buoy - This device is a circular type of the familiar life saver shape fitted with a grabber to permit a person to grasp the device. It is made of cork, balsam wood or uncellular plastic foam.

e. Special Purpose Devices - These devices are made in many styles depending on their intended purpose. Some examples are hunter's vests, water ski jump vests, racing vests, and flotation jackets.

Take care of your lifesaving devices and they will take care of you. Do not use your devices as cushions unless they were designed as cushions, and make sure they are readily available in case they're needed. Examine your lifesaving devices now and see if they are what you should have aboard, both in numbers and in Coast Guard approved styles. And be sure everybody in your boat knows how to use the lifesaving devices you have aboard your boat.

RADIO CHECKS? 2182 kHz has long been recognized as the international calling and distress frequency at sea. It was never intended to be used otherwise. Coast Guard radio stations maintain a listening watch on 2182 kHz around the clock, and have been answering radio checks on that frequency for some time.

In order to increase the Coast Guard's effectiveness in maintaining the listening watch on 2182 kHz, radio checks will be prohibited on that frequency after 1 June, 1970 except (a) during inspection by FCC representatives, or (b) when qualified technicians are installing equipment or correcting deficiencies.

DID YOU KNOW... That beginning June 26, 1970, the fee for registering motorboats in Virginia will be increased from five dollars to eight dollars?

That your certificate of number must be carried on board your boat at all times?

That a civil penalty may be imposed by the Coast Guard for failure to comply with the numbering requirements, failure to observe the Rules of the Road, failure to comply with equipment requirements, failure to report a boating accident, and others.

...That a vessel underway, upon being hailed by a Coast Guard vessel, is required to stop immediately and lay to, or maneuver in such a way as to permit the boarding officer to come aboard. Failure to stop to permit boarding may subject the owner or operator to a penalty.

Since then he has shot his way to the Interservice Skeet-Shooting Championships in Colorado Springs held from May 24 through May 30. He took first place at the Interservice in international - style shooting. (The international style means the man must pull the rifle up from the waist to shoot.)

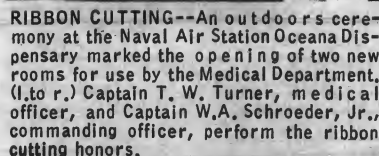

Prior to the championships at Colorado Springs, Jenkins was a member of the five-mantle team that won the All-Navy Championships at Newport, R.I. He shot a fifth in the Fifth Naval District Skeet Tournament held at NAS Oceana and a second place in the Atlantic Fleet Championships in Newport. He has done a lot of skeet-shooting in the past year in Navy com-

Actually he just made up his mind to be good. "I've shot so many practice rounds that I couldn't begin to count them," says Jenkins. "John Calhoun, an All-Navy shooter from NAS Norfolk, helped me out a lot also."

Jenkins' determination to be a good skeet-shooter has paid off. He is one of those people that can make a sport look so easy. In the 24th Annual Norfolk Open Match held at Isaac Walton Gun Club he shot a perfect score. This is shooting 100 consecutive "birds".

A native of Escondido, Calif., Jenkins is presently attached to Fighter Squadron Thirty-Two at NAS Oceana. He will be reporting to Naval Air Station Key West at the end of this month.

Next Week in Sun

New Column Planned
For Astrology Fans

In response to numerous requests, and due to an obviously growing interest, the Sun will next week launch a column specifically written for this publication by Virginia Beach astrologer Raymond Williams.

The column is designed to answer questions either on the ancient science of astrology or to offer possible solutions based on individual charts, to problems submitted by the readers.

Questions need not be signed, only initialed, but they must, of course, be in good taste and the reader must supply his date, time and place of birth. They should be submitted to Williams in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 657, Virginia Beach, Va. 23461. Those included in the column will be selected jointly by the editor and the astrologer.

Williams is a native of St. Louis, Missouri where a curiosity about astrology was passed on to him by his parents. He began studying under Charles Luntz, author of VOCATIONAL GUIDANCE BY ASTROLOGY, a well known text book on the subject. At the time, Luntz was offering classes through the Theosophical Society.

Armed with this knowledge, Williams moved to California and continued to study astrology under several nationally known teachers. His growing proficiency soon brought him students of his own and he began to teach in Los Angeles and San Francisco. As his reputation spread, he was invited as guest speaker by various colleges and universities and by local social and professional groups. He also became a frequent guest on many radio and television programs, but as Williams says, "fame at that time was not in my stars."

A reading of his own chart brought him to Virginia Beach, he said, and last December he opened a small printing business for the purpose of publishing material on astrology.

In the short time he has been here Williams has gained wide recognition, teaching classes in astrology and lecturing for local clubs. He has also appeared on numerous television and radio shows, often being called back for second appearances by popular demand.

His main interest is personal horoscopes, however, because he enjoys dealing with, and helping, people.

The Sun is pleased to offer this new column for its readers and believes it will become one of the paper's most popular features.

Names Two

George C. Rawlings, Jr., candidate for the Democratic nomination to the United States Senate, has announced that Gerald (Jerry) Rubinger will be his campaign chairman for Virginia Beach, and that Susan Stratton will be his volunteer coordinator.

Rubinger is a Virginia Beach attorney and is a former Assistant Commonwealth's Attorney for Virginia Beach. He is executive vice president of Virginia Young Democratic Clubs. He has long been active in Virginia Democratic politics, most recently in behalf of the gubernatorial campaign of Senator Henry Howell and the race for state Attorney General of Andrew Miller.

Miss Stratton is president of the Young Democratic Club of Mary Washington College of the University of Virginia, where she is a senior. She worked in the Virginia Beach headquarters for Senator Henry Howell's gubernatorial campaign and for Democratic gubernatorial nominee William Battle during last fall's campaign.

Bars Might Improve
Sandbridge Surfing

By CAROLYN MCALLEN

Surfing at Sandbridge might be improved through establishing artificial offshore bars to increase wave action, suggested Parks and Recreation Commission Chairman Maury Rigato at Tuesday's meeting of the group.

"I know it can be done because it's been done before at other places," Rigato said. "It might solve our surfing problems."

He asked that the Parks and Recreation Department find out how the bars are established and if they would be feasible at Sandbridge. The city has two sections of beach at Sandbridge. One is 1,200 feet long and the other is 2,200 feet.

The formal dedication for the new city horse show rings is now planned for Sept. 12 when the first show will open there. It been renamed Princess Anne Park.

Besides the show ring, which will include stables and a restaurant, the park will also have five playgrounds and two ball fields.

Marion Renn, a commission member, asked that the Recreation Department check the size of the culverts which are being put under the new Kemps Landing Bridge. Renn said they do not appear to be the eight by ten foot size which were originally planned for the bridge, and he fears that boats will not have access to the lake and planned marina behind Arrowhead Park. Plans called for small boat channels from the lake into the Elizabeth River and into the James River.

It was reported that the new jet observation park on London Bridge Road is now open. However, tulip poplar trees planted on land which was formerly Green Run Farm and has now there were destroyed the first day and had to be replanted. Kenneth Cole of the Parks and Recreation Department reported that 235 adults are enrolled in summer classes; 400 teens have registered so far with registrations not closed yet. In addition some 5,500 children signed up for programs at playgrounds during the first week.

There are 1,800 fourth and fifth graders signed up for the Tri-H-Y summer camp which offers nature and science, arts and crafts and swimming. Transportation is by school bus.

Park attendance has been high. There were 48,170 at Redwing Park in June and 43,322 at Little Island Park through June 5. Cole estimated that revenue from Little Island Park will total at least $14,000 this summer. Another 14,900 rode the Boardwalk train.

Drugs In Home A 'Living Hell' Says
Mother Who Knows

By LES LEHIGH

"It's a living hell when drugs come into your home."

This is how a Virginia Beach mother described the way she watched her son turn into a nearly complete stranger after he began regular use of drugs, and witnessed life in the home turn into an existence of nightmarish proportions.

The young man involved in this experience has been charged by police with a number of violations of state narcotic and drug laws. He will be referred to only as "Joe"; his parents will be identified as "Mr. and Mrs. X."

Joe's parents said they watched his life change from participation in activities which normally attract a young man with ambition and purposeful goals in life to one of shunning everyone excepting those who he knew used drugs, and/or dealt in them, and going through a complete personality change to the point of pushing his parents and younger brother completely out of his life.

Joe's mother said she first discovered he was using drugs when police questioned him, in her presence, during an investigation following the discovery of a quantity of marijuana in the city.

Shortly afterwards, his parents realized that Joe had turned to the regular use of marijuana and hashish through a complete change in his life pattern.

This, according to his parents included keeping to himself for long periods of time in his room; sleeping during the day; staying out all night long; the constant receiving of strange phone calls during all hours of the day and night; and the eating of very little food.

Joe's parents said his regular use of drugs came into the open after his mother received repeated phone calls from a man claiming he had something for Joe and wanted to contact him at once.

When Joe came home, according to his mother, she said a friend of his was trying to contact him with "some stuff." She said Joe apparently realized that she was referring to drugs and reacted by "turning white and staring at me in fright."

This is when Joe's bedroom, according to his parents, became a sanctuary for him to "take trips."

His mother tells of watching Joe during these "trips" wander about his room, flailing his arms about aimlessly, his body twitching uncontrollably, and continually talking out loud to himself, at times nearly incoherently. She said she also watched him reach a point of having no control over himself, such as the time he "put his fist through a closet door."

Joe's parents said they "watched Joe lose 25 pounds in six months" as the result of his not eating, staying away from home for long periods of time without proper rest, and the complete disregard of his own welfare.

The constant phone calls into the home suddenly took on a new aspect, especially during his long periods of absence. His parents said that every time the phone rang they tensed and were afraid to answer for fear the call was to tell them of his having been injured, or "freaked out on a bad trip," or having been arrested.

When he was absent from home their life entered a pattern of constantly sitting by the phone waiting for it to ring. The affect of this on his parents is reflected in the words of his mother. "I don't think I'll ever get over it. When the phone rings I still jump."

Mr. and Mrs. X said this disruption of a normal home life not only placed them under an unbearable strain, but also "had an emotional influence on Joe's younger brother."

The social life of Joe's pa-

Ex-Israeli Fighter Predicts 2nd Cuba

By JIM TURNER

A former member of the Israeli underground said Tuesday that the Middle East crisis will result in another "Cuban Confrontation" between the United States and Russia before the conflict will ever be solved.

"You can't appease the Russians," said Bo Frieden. "They're going to press to the hilt and continue buildups but they'll back away when the United States moves."

"The Arabs are the same way. The only thing they understand is force."

Frieden, who is visiting relatives in Virginia Beach, is an American citizen but was raised in Palestine and first left that country during World War II to join the United States Army Air Force.

When the Israeli War of Independence broke out "like everybody else I joined the underground." He was attending UCLA in Los Angeles at the time.

"I did a great deal of thinking at the time. There was a degree of vacuum at the time, but I thought of weaving my career with the creation of a state."

When the war ended abruptly, Frieden said he felt disappointed. The problem, he said, was that he was 24 and had expected to find his life's work in helping develop a nation. "Where do you go from there?"

Even though Frieden came back to the United States and eventually ended up in investment banking in Los Angeles, he said he still feels a strong sense of moral obligation to Israel.

"It's probably the only cause in my life I was totally committed to," Frieden said.

That commitment has carried over through the years and Frieden returns periodically to talk with friends in the military and government.

When he was in Israel last year, Frieden said that the man in the street couldn't understand why the United States hadn't intervened in the conflict.

"When he asked himself the question, I suppose the only answers he could come up with were that it's the influence of the oil companies and the traditional pro-Arab attitude of the State Department in the United States that holds us back."

In fact, Frieden said, the United States is probably naive enough to think that they can get some concessions out of Russia and the Arabs by holding back any military hardware sales to Israel.

"The problems there are ones of political expediency," he said. "The Soviet Union is solidly entrenched in the Middle East and the Indian and Mediterranean Oceans and it is not going to give up anything."

"It's not so much economic and as it strategic," Frieden said. Russia wants to develop a strong control of the area, and its doing it by making the Arab countries totally dependent for military hardware on the Soviet Union," he added.

"Russia is setting themselves up in a military/political fashion so that they have unchallenged political control," he said.

"The thing with the United States is that it's been too late and not enough. What a simple thing it was to help Israel when the thing started, but they didn't do it."

"It's unfortunate that the United States didn't react in a stronger way four or five months ago," Frieden said, referring to the sale of Phantom jets to Israel.

Frieden said that what people don't understand is that Israel isn't asking for troops or free weapons. "All Israel wants to do is be able to buy certain types of armaments that would be paid for with cash.

"Even if the United States made a declaration to sell Israel the planes it would be a start," he said.

Frieden said he would have to limit the blame for the lack of sale on the "stupidity of the State Department."

Frieden said that the Israeli air strikes could probably take care of the new Russian missile installations designed to knock out the jets, but the losses might be high. "Israel can't afford to lose three planes a week like it did last week."

Even if the United States made the losses of the planes good, there would still be a problem with morale and finances, he said.

"Israel has learned to live with it (death); it's not easy to do but you brush it off," Frieden said. "After you've

Water Toys Can Be Deadly Crutch

A Red Cross water safety instructor said Monday that plastic inner tubes, floats, beach balls and other water toys that children use on the ocean are crutches and can be killers.

Mrs. Marilyn Kleintop, a swimming instructor in the Virginia Beach YWCA's swimming program, said that children get in the water with the toys and don't make mental or physical adjustments to the water.

"They rely on the toys," she said, "and are in trouble when they lose them in the water."

The best thing for a child to wear if he can't swim is a life jacket, but even that isn't the answer, Mrs. Kleintop said. "The currents are tricky and they can carry the child out to sea along the beach," she said.

Mrs. Kleintop said that the biggest obstacles that face a swimmer who isn't used to the ocean are wave action and bottom conditions.

"They don't realize it but they can't learn to swim in ocean and they're not going to be safe," she said. "Something that people aren't aware of is that bottom conditions change daily and with the changes the currents change."

Most people who come to the beach, particularly tourists, have no idea about tides and currents and don't bother to check, she said.

"Whenever I take my children to the beach, I always check the paper to see when it's going to be low tide," she said, and added that it's the safest time to go swimming.

Mrs. Kleintop said that if a child goes in the water, he should be told to keep an eye on where he went into the water so he won't be carried down the beach and get lost.

And if the child gets out to the point where the waves break he should be told to let the water hit him sideways. "Too many people let the wave hit them in the chest and get knocked down or turn their backs to the wave and hurt their backs."

And if a child does get lost, Mrs. Kleintop said the first direction a parent should look in is the direction in which the on-shore currents are moving.

"It's a funny thing, but the kids tend to walk in the direction of the currents. They just follow the water as it moves along the beach," she said.

And if the child is in the water and gets carried by the currents he should be told not to try to come directly into the beach but let the currents carry him and try to angle into the beach further down, she said.

"It's better to walk back up the beach a long way than to try to swim straight in and end up drowned,"

Mrs. Kleintop said that even if a child doesn't know how to swim, he should be trained in water safety, and this is the goal of the summer swimming program being conducted by the Virginia Beach YWCA.

The best age to begin teaching a child how to swim is between the ages of seven or eight, she said, because the child has been in a classroom situation and is competitive. "They respond particularly well at that age."

But she doesn't discourage parents from teaching children how to swim at an earlier age. "In this area, it's a necessity for a person to learn how to swim." More than 1,000 children and adults have applied for classes this summer.

The hardest youngsters to teach are those who are between 12 and 14 years of age. "If they haven't learned how to swim up to that age, they tend to be self-conscious about it and they shy away from a training program," she said.

Mrs. Kleintop said that the hardest thing for a beginning swimmer to learn is how to breathe while he's swimming. "It's the hardest to get across and the one that takes the most effort to learn."

But even with the limitations of teaching children how to swim, Mrs. Kleintop said that the younger students are the easiest to teach, even though the methods are a little different.

Happiness is learning how to float, or...

...that first jump into the sea

Pool

word picture rather than technical explanation, and you have to see a little more of the personal touch," she said.

"But once you get the idea across, usually their imaginations take off. I used to tell all the children that they couldn't chew gum in the pool. Then one day a boy came in chewing rubber bands instead of gum."

Mrs. Kleist said that the classes are graded for beginners, pre-schoolers and swimmers, and that the age groups range for people from four to 45 years old.

The pre-schooler classes last for a half-hour and the regular classes for an hour; there are ten lessons.

The Virginia Beach YWCA has two pools of its own this summer for the first time. They are at Pool City across from Pembroke Mall and will be put in use as soon as a filter system is completed. Meanwhile, lessons are being given daily in a demonstration pool at the same location. Future plans call for a "dome" to enclose the pools in winter and a heater for a year-round swimming program.

Teen Artist Places First

First prize for this state in the ninth annual "Q-Tips" Art Awards competition conducted in junior and senior high schools throughout the country by Chesbrough-Pond's Inc. has been captured by Timothy E. Wright, 16, of Weldon Street, a student at Frank W. Cox High School.

The state winner will now be entered in the final judging and is eligible for one of the three top awards in the 1970 "Q-Tips" Art Awards competition. First prize is $500, Second, $250, and Third, $100. State winners receive $25.

The "Q-Tips" Art Awards competition sponsored by Chesbrough-Pond's Inc. is one of the few national art competitions which offer cash prizes to teenagers with artistic ability. In selecting winners, judges base decisions on creativity, interest, inspiration, composition and design. Students may use any media but the painting must be executed with "Q-Tips" Cotton Swabs as art brushes.

Crash Cause Sought

An extensive investigation is continuing into the crash of a private plane into a densely wooded region near the Chesapeake-Portsmouth Airport early Sunday morning which claimed the lives of three Virginia Beach residents.

Officials identified those killed in the crash as Edward Irving Wilson, 55, of Hopwood Lane, Anthony Wayne Dixon, 28, of Hopkin Lane, and Mrs. Sylvia Jarvis Arwood, 31, of Hunting Hill Lane.

The single-engine Piper Tripacer is believed to have taken off from the airfield shortly after 1 a.m. Sunday morning bound for Richmond.

The airport control tower was unmanned at the time and heavy thunderstorms were present in the weather pattern throughout the area.

Officials said the plane's destination was established through a record of a radio request from the plane to the Newport News Flight Service for a briefing on the weather in the Richmond area.

A search for the plane was started after Dixon's wife expressed concern over the plane being overdue and contacted the Newport News Flight Service.

A search of the region of the flight path by Civil Air Patrol planes and Chesapeake Bay U.S. Coast Guard planes, throughout Monday failed to produce any trace of the plane.

The aircraft's wreckage was discovered about 8:30 p.m. Monday night by John Holland and Van Sumner, both of whom are affiliated with the operation of the airport where the flight began. The wreckage was found entangled among trees in a small ravine about a mile and a quarter north of the airfield by Holland and Sumner while they travelled over dirt roads winding through the area surrounding the airport. State Police officials said those on board the plane were identified through personal papers. The bodies of all three occupants of the plane were still inside the wreckage of the plane when it was discovered, and investigation indicates they all died of multiple injuries moments after the plane crashed.

Wilson was listed as owner of the aircraft and was identified as the pilot on the flight. Although he was the holder of a student pilot's license, according to officials, he was not qualified to carry passengers on a flight.

State Police are investigating the activities of those on board the plane prior to the beginning of the flight in hopes of arriving at factors which may have contributed to the crash.

The Federal Aviation Administration is also conducting its investigation into the cause of the crash and had investigators at the scene of the crash through Wednesday.

Supervising Inspector J. B. Newell, of the FAA's Flight Standards General Aviation Division field office in Richmond, Wednesday said his agency has now concluded their phase of the investigation.

Newell added, however, that as yet "we have not determined a probable cause for the plane crash. We have documented all of our evidence at the scene and should complete the report of our findings within 30 days when our information will be turned over to the National Transportation Safety Board."

The NTSB is the successor of the Civil Aeronautics Board and, according to Newell, will have the final responsibility of determining the cause of the plane crash.

been through the Arab uprisings in Palestine and lived with the commando raids all of your life, it becomes one of the accepted things in life.

Frieden said the Israel may have to consider a series of pre-emptive strikes to destroy air defense installations in the Sinai Peninsula. "I would imagine it will probably be commando raids," he said.

Frieden said the one of the most misunderstood situations in the conflict is the refugee problem. "The Arabs have always used the refugee as a political football; none of the Arab countries have reacted to solve the refugee problem."

Frieden said that if mankind could be diverted to give these displaced persons a chance to attempt a new life, it would go a long way in helping to end a big problem, but as long as Israel has to keep fighting, she won't be able to begin to assist the refugees.

El Fatah has tied the hands of many of the Arab governments who want to make peace with Israel, he said. El Fatah is an underground commando group that in many areas has no official sanction but is able to wield strong political power because it can produce results the populace can see.

Frieden said that if a peace treaty ever comes about, Israel will keep several points of strategic interest but will return the remainder of the seized lands to the people.

"One thing that Israel will never give back, though, East Jerusalem," he said. East Jerusalem is considered to be a sacred area for a Jew; it is the site of the Walling Wall and many temples that represent the crux of the Hebrew culture.

UDAC Is Now UFC Agency

The United Drug Abuse Commission has been accepted as a member agency by the United Communities Fund.

The decision was made Tuesday at a UCF board meeting in Norfolk.

The board also set $2,493,802.46 as its goal in 1970, based on budgets from member agencies. The amount will be solicited from Norfolk, Virginia Beach and Eastern Chesapeake October 14-30.

The board was told that about one thousand man hours were voluntarily spent by members of the budget committee in visiting each agency and making a thorough study of the needs before the various budgets were accepted.

The drug commission, known as UDAC, is the volunteer group with which Virginia Beach's own Drug Focus Committee recently merged. The City has also recognized it as the official drug abuse group.

UDAC ran into difficulties recently when it applied for a valuable state funds to fight the drug battle. At the hearing in Richmond UDAC was challenged by the Virginia Council on Alcoholism and Drug Dependency so that both groups are now competing for the state funds. It was only in May that the latter group added the drug portion to its name. Prior to that it was involved only with alcoholism. It is also a UCF member agency.

Drugs

rents had now reached a point of being virtually non-existent. They said "we couldn't go out because we didn't know what was going to happen at home. We didn't have any life."

They told of returning to their home on several occasions and detecting the unmistakable odor of marijuana or several of Joe's "friends" suddenly leaving the home acting in a suspicious manner. Mr. and Mrs. X said they finally realized that their own home was "being used by groups gathering for the purpose of using drugs."

Joe's father said his son now reached the point where he openly bragged about his use of marijuana and hashish, and continually flaunted Mrs. X with his escapades. She said Joe bragged about how he and his friends were able to obtain motel rooms for the express purpose of holding drug parties, and he openly described what transpired during these gatherings.

His description of these activities, according to his parents, involved a young mother who brought her small baby to one of the parties smoking marijuana and blowing the smoke into the baby's mouth in an attempt to get the baby "high". He told of one "drug party" where a young girl completely stripped and danced nude" among the young men. And after returning from one party he said he witnessed a 17-year-old girl "high on drugs take on 17 guys in one night."

Mr. and Mrs. X said Joe not only openly admitted his activities, but defied them to take any action against him. He admitted to them that his "friends" attempted to entice him into other activities such as "going along the boardwalk to see if they could find sailors to roll" for whatever valuables they might have." Joe said he by calling the Recreation Department, 497-4884.

All applications in the Re-creation office by July 17, personality after becoming a Finalists will be notified by July regular drug user. His attitude toward them became one of feeling they "were just people to provide him with his needs."

He joined his friends in the belief that "they were invincible and the police couldn't touch them."

Joe's mother said her son's feeling of superiority reached the stage where he once told her "in five years you'll be sitting around smoking marijuana, it will be legalized."

Mr. and Mrs. X said "you might feel we're condemning Joe, but we're not. We feel sorry for him and know he doesn't fully realize the consequences he must face because of his use of drugs."

They said "we still want to help him with the future, but we will no longer tolerate the use of drugs."

When questioned as to why they thought their son had turned to drugs initially, they replied "We've gone back over our lives and asked why. We don't have an answer." They added, "but we think any kid can get involved in drugs."

When asked what advice they would give other parents to determine if their son or daughter had taken up the drug habit, and what they should do if this suspicion arose, Joe's parents replied "Seek private help before they hurt themselves or others, and take any and all means available to get your child off the streets."

Mr. and Mrs. X were very firm in one other suggestion when they said "If drugs enter your home notify the authorities at once." They said on several occasions they "picked up information about drug suppliers and turned the information over to the police and we don't feel we turned against Joe."

They also said they don't agree with the premise that they don't have the right to inquire about the activities of their children, and that, when drugs are suspected they should be searched for. In the opinion of Joe's parents this does not constitute an invasion of privacy as some parents have implied.

This couple were also of the opinion that no parent can ever say they were unaware of their child using drugs on a regular basis. Mrs. X made their position clear: "Any parent whose child is a regular user of drugs and says they didn't know it, never really knew their child or paid any attention to their child."

Our Schools Must

Not Be Jeopardized

Norfolk School Board Chairman Vincent J. Thomas Tuesday came up with probably the most impractical solution yet to Norfolk's severe school desegregation problem when he said that Virginia Beach and other suburban cities should be forced to share this burden with central cities.

There were conflicting newspaper reports on Thomas' remarks but he clearly made the statement involving Virginia Beach in a televised newscast Tuesday night.

It apparently is his opinion that Virginia Beach, because of its low Negro population, should be forced legally to come to Norfolk's aid in racially balancing its schools by busing some of the Negro students out of Norfolk to schools in the resort city. He admitted, and rightfully so, that such a move would have to be forced on this city through the courts by changing school district lines. It is inconceivable that Virginia Beach, with its well executed system, would voluntarily undertake the problems of Norfolk.

Thomas did not explain exactly how such a plan could be implemented, but it would seem that if a certain percentage of Norfolk Negro students were integrated into Virginia Beach schools, then an equal number of this city's white students would have to be bused to Norfolk. Untold problems - operational, financial and emotional - would result in such a plan.

School administrators and officials in this city are to be commended on the unitary system now in effect in Virginia Beach. It is a simple plan, basically, but it received the approval of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare and was supported by the NAACP. The city is divided into 37 geographical zones and students living within the geographical boundaries attend the school or schools serving their particular zone.

This plan went into effect in the fall of 1969—prior to that the schools operated on a freedom of choice system—and it has apparently worked to the satisfaction of all concerned.

Virginia Beach, of course, has a tremendous geographical advantage over Norfolk in that its vast acreage allows such city-wide distribution of school zones. Norfolk is limited in area and has a heavy Negro population, hence its problem in complying with the Federal Government's desegregation demands. In past years Norfolk was able to annex adjoining land from the old Princess Anne County (a number of Virginia Beach schools went into the Norfolk system through such action) as well as Norfolk County but the merger of these two counties into Virginia Beach and Chesapeake brought future expansion to a sudden halt.

A point avoided by Thomas in his remarks is the financing of his plan. Moving students back and forth between the two cities would obviously necessitate additional buses. Who would bear this expense? Virginia Beach presently buses students within the established geographical zones. Norfolk provides no busing.

It is estimated that each student in Virginia Beach presently costs the system $551.34 per year and this cost is expected to rise to about $600 next year. It is understood that Norfolk's per-student cost is considerably higher. The public schools already take a giant share of the Virginia Beach budget. One can only imagine what effects Thomas' proposal might have on the city's economy.

Norfolk has a severe problem and local school administrators undoubtedly sympathize with the large city's dilemma. But Virginia Beach has an excellent school system, a point that has attracted many residents from the neighboring city, and this system must not be jeopardized.

There are thousands of Virginia Beach residents who moved out of Norfolk to enjoy the more relaxed suburban life in the resort city. They made the move to escape the type of problems now facing Norfolk. Must these problems now be brought to the door steps of the proudly groomed homes in this city's residential communities?

In spite of all these arguments, however, it would appear that the most serious aspect of Thomas' proposal is the even more involved affects the city might later encounter. If Virginia Beach shoulders this burden of Norfolk, where will it end? Is it not possible that this city could be forced to knuckle under to many other demands? Should a suburb be forced to absorb the problems of a core city?

Thomas' suggestion could well lift the lid to Pandora's box. Norfolk must solve its problem within the confines of its own city limits.

LET'S BE DIFFERENT—WE'LL STAY HOME!

Son's Life Saved

Editor, VIRGINIA BEACH SUN:
Not knowing to whom I should write this letter, I hope that you will convey our thanks to the life guards who were stationed on your ocean-beach in Virginia Beach the afternoon we visited your beach, on May 31, 1970.

Without explaining the entire story to you, we thought surely our sixteen-year-old son had drowned approximately one-half hour after we were there. At this time it was extremely hard for us to keep calm as we had experienced the drowning of two sixteen-year-old boys within the two weeks before our trip. With the excellent training of your life guards, our son was located within a half hour. He had drifted quite far out and without his glasses was unable to judge his distance.

Our many thanks to the experienced men you had stationed there on that day. We have visited many beaches and report areas, but never have we seen guards so kind, considerate, experienced, and, right down to simple words—know what they were doing.

With my being so upset, I was unable to get his name to thank him personally, but I am asking you to convey thanks from my husband and I to the one who was so kind to me, and to the other five or more who helped in locating our son.

This kindness will never be forgotten. This may be just one of the many happenings there, but it meant everything in the world to us.

FIRST ON THE MOON: A VOYAGE WITH NEIL ARMSTRONG, MICHAEL COLLINS, EDWIN E. ALDRIN, JR. Written with Gene Farmer and Dora Jane Hamblin. Little, Brown and Co. 1970, $7.95.

Almost a year ago, three men lived the impossible dream—they reached the moon. It was July 20, 1969, at 4:38 p.m. This book is dedicated to the eight astronauts who did not live to see and hear the fulfillment of John Kennedy's prediction that a man would be on the moon before 1970.

FIRST ON THE MOON is a detailed account of that trip and the story of the men who flew Apollo 11—their names now a part of history—Armstrong, Collins and Aldrin. It is a biography of them intertwined with the chronological events of their flight. The conversation recorded during Apollo and Houston during the flight makes up about a fifth of the book. There are pictures of the astronauts and their families, of the moon landing and recovery. An epilogue, by Arthur C. Clarke, entitled "Beyond Apollo" concerns future goals and possibilities in the realm of space discovery.

City Hall Spur Of Little Concern

One thing was quite apparent by the response to last week's Sun Survey question: "Do you think a spur off the Norfolk-Virginia Beach Expressway into the City Hall complex at Princess Anne would be beneficial?"

Very few people really care where additional spurs are built. The response was totally in favor of the City Hall spur but far too few readers failed to respond.

Several months ago City Council was presented with a 1,200 name petition from the London Bridge Businessmen's Association requesting that an exit directly into London Bridge be included when revisions are made to the expressway.

A Sun Survey question concerning that proposal brought considerable response.

With the tremendous number of employees working in the City Hall complex, and the rapidly increasing population in Princess Anne Borough, it would seem that more people would be concerned about an easier access to the central section of the city.

This apparently is not so. This week's question deals with a situation a little closer to most families in Virginia Beach...the possibility of busing some of Norfolk's students to Virginia Beach.

It is doubtful that the public will be as apathetic about this proposal.

The VIRGINIA BEACH SUN welcomes letters. They will be published when possible. Each letter must be signed and include address of the writer. Letters are invited on any question.
Mail each to: Editor, VIRGINIA BEACH SUN, Post Office Box 657, Virginia Beach, Virginia 23451.

DON'T GAMBLE!

KEEP OFF
GRASS

By W. A. Leavelle, Ph.D.

The educational mess we have spawned has come to the attention of President Nixon. The mess smells so much the only wonder is that it didn't come to the attention of the President sooner.

The President wants to set up a national institution for "Education Research and Experimentation." At first glance this sounds like a step in the right direction but like most ideas from our Glorious Leaders in Washington, it just might wind up costing a lot of money and holding up the much needed changes. Just watch, the people who have done more than anyone else to bring about this mess in our schools, the administrators, will wind up in charge of the institution the President wants. That would be turning the asylum over to the inmates.

Rep. Roman C. Pucinski is chair man of the House subcommittee on education holding hearings on the President's proposal. Some of the suggestions already voted to the committee include:
-Abolish high schools.
-Abolish compulsory school attendance laws.
-Give a form of educational vouchers to the parents of students to be used at the schools of their choice, public or private.
-A return to the one-room school concept at elementary levels.

Author Paul Goodman, who wrote "Growing Up Abused" told the committee, "in my opinion, most high schools should simply be abolished." He believes that the present system based on the need for everyone to have forced education is a hoax which has been sold by educational imperialists. Mr. Goodman calls for the return to the little red school house or mini-school type education.

Another author, John Holt, who wrote "How Children Fail," told the committee many children fail because "our system of public education is a horrendous, life destroying mess." He went on to say, "I think it is the best children who are perhaps the most deeply disillusioned and angry. This is what is surprising many people. It is the children who play the school game best who are saying more and more this is not a game worth playing. I think they are going to increasingly refuse to play it."

Magazine editor Peter Scragg told the committee, "We have talked a great deal about the right of children to 12 years of schooling, but we have not talked very much about the right of children to drop out of 12 years of schooling and go into something else."

While we are on the right or freedom of students in public schools, let's clear up something. The term "PUBLIC SCHOOL SYSTEM" is one we are going to have to stop using. We no longer have a public school system in this country.

Look at the facts - our school system is paid for by taxation forced on the citizens by the police power of the government. Just try not paying your property taxes and you will find the system will take title to your property without even saying thank you. Next, try not sending your child to the school where he is assigned. The school system has an iron clad monopoly. Attendance is required under the law. If you don't go, the long of the law will descend on you like a ton of bricks.

In the view of many, when you use the power of the law to force people to pay for the school system and use the law to force attendance on the students, the people or the "Public" has lost control of the system. It becomes the GOVERNMENT school system.

Through one method or another, the school systems of the United States today are under the complete control of the government. If you don't believe this, just ask anyone on a local school board to be honest with you and tell you how long they didn't follow the rules, or "Guide Lines" set down by the good old government.

The whole system is held together by the myth that the "People" really support what is being passed off on them as the "Public" school system. Just remove the compulsory school attendance laws and start an educational voucher system and you would see how the people feel about the school system they have. The parents would abandon the present system like rats leaving a sinking ship.

If that bunch (Flock) of dedicated egg heads in the educational business want to help the system they have just about killed, they can give it back to the "PEOPLE." Sooner or later the people are going to take it back anyway so why not be a good loser and give it back now. Who knows, the people just might forgive them for all the damage they have done. I doubt it, but they might.

Insurance Pamphlets Available

Free pamphlets on veterans' government life insurance programs are available at Veterans Administration Offices. The pamphlets have been updated, according to the Roanoke VA Regional Office.

Each pamphlet contains a section on general information about National Service Life Insurance policies. There are sections dealing with designation of beneficiaries, optional settlements, and total disability income provisions.

VA said the pamphlets also contain helpful hints for policyholders, such as the suggestion that veterans may have government life insurance premiums automatically deducted from their military service retirement checks.

VA stressed these pamphlets contain only general information, and that specific information about individual policies should be requested from the VA Center where the veteran's insurance records are kept. This would be the place where policyholders pay their premiums.

In contacting the VA for this purpose, the veteran-policyholder should include his full name, insurance file number, complete mailing address for insurance purposes, and social security number.

If a veteran does not know his insurance file number, he should provide VA with as much additional basic identifying information as possible, including military service serial number, branch of service, and date of birth.

League Elects Officers

Members of the Lynnhaven Inlet Area Civic League closed it's current season's activities this past week with the election of officers and board of directors for the 1970 term.

New officers include Jim Roebuck, president; Elmer Anderson, first vice president; Hank Pezzella, second vice president; Francis Cohan, treasurer; Lt. Col. George Eason, sergeant-at-arms; Mrs. Hilda Henish, recording secretary; and Mrs. Peggy Gillroy, corresponding secretary.

Those elected to the Board of Directors were Ron Farley, immediate past president and Tom Miles, Joe Fava, Carroll Williams and Fred Higgins.

Under CARE "food plus" programs, hungry people also get the tools and knowledge to work, earn and plan for themselves in future years.

The target date for opening the city's Vocational-Technical High School is now January 1972, and construction is actually underway following several years of delays in federal funding.

The school was first planned to be in operation in 1969. Then the date was revised to September 1970, then January 1971. It is being built on a 25 acre site on North Landing Road which was a part of the Upton Farm and which was donated, along with another 15 acres, to the School Board by Beach Interstate Associates. The rest of the land is planned for an elementary school.

About $1,175,000 of the city's 1968 bond referendum has been held for the construction of the school while awaiting state and federal funds. W. E. Lobeck was named director of the project several years ago.

Enrollment in the school's instructional program will be open to all 11th and 12th grade students. There will also be an evening program for adults.

Students will attend the v-tech school for half a day and their regular school the other half. Of great importance in the project will be the guidance and counseling program. A follow-up program for graduates after they are employed will include both the graduate's evaluation of the training program and the employer's evaluation of the training the graduate received.

A survey of vocational interests of 10,000 students who did not expect to attend high school was completed in 1967. Another survey was made of 75 firms, mostly within Virginia Beach, of what kinds of employees would be needed through 1972. The student's survey showed that 26.6% were interested in business education and secretarial sciences, 12% in cosmetology, 11% in auto mechanics, 7.3% in drafting and related occupations and 6.9% in practical nursing and health aides. There were 18 categories from which to choose. However, there were 75 write ins for commercial art.

The industrial and business survey estimated that by 1972, 704 employees in business and secretarial sciences would be needed, 485 in machine shops, 325 in plumbing and heating, 317 in electricity and 225 in building trades, carpentry and cabinet making. It also showed that a total of 3,581 new employees in the 18 categories on the survey would be needed. Total enrollment in the v-tech school is expected to be between 1,200 and 1,500.

The architect for the school was the firm of Pentecost, Wade and McLellan.

Wesleyan Board Not Renewing Hays' Contract

The Board of Trustees of Virginia Wesleyan College announced last week that the contract of College Dean Dr. Garry D. Hays would not be renewed when it expires June 30, 1971.

The board took this action, a prepared statement said, because "various modifications should be made in our general direction and in the basic academic program."

Board Chairman Judge Jerry G. Bray Jr. cited two examples of what was meant by "a change of direction."

(1) "We wish to bring the innovative and experimental aspects of our educational program into better balance with the more traditional aspects of the curriculum...; and

(2) "We wish to implement more clearly our position as a church related college..."

Dr. Hays, also through a prepared statement, said that the board was aware he was not involved in the Methodist Church when he was interviewed in 1964.

He praised College President Clarke and said the president is "caught between his sound educational ideas and the realities of today's social, political and economic scene..."

"I wish him well," Dr. Hays said, "as he attempts to move the college in the direction of a more traditional church-related liberal arts college in a time that is difficult for such institutions."

Arson Investigations May Take Years Before Conviction

A woman was convicted of arson in Circuit Court last week for connection with a fire in her home trailer, bringing to an end a two-year investigation by men of the Virginia Beach Fire Prevention Bureau.

This case is representative of the untold number of man-hours involved in the investigation of fires in the resort city.

These investigations are carried out by City Fire Investigators W.H. Cartwright and James E. Hundley under the direction of Milton T. Holland, who, in addition to serving as director of the Fire Prevention Bureau, is also the city's chief fire investigator.

Responsibilities of fire investigators are outlined in the National Fire Protection Code published by the American Insurance Association which states that "The Bureau of Fire Prevention shall investigate the cause, origin and circumstances of every fire occurring in the municipality which is of suspicious nature, or which involves loss of life or injury to persons, or by which property has been destroyed or substantially damaged."

Investigations have been conducted into approximately 80 fires in Virginia Beach during the last 18 months which were classified as being of a suspicious nature in origin.

The investigation into the cause of a fire does not necessarily depend on loss of life, personal injury or a large monetary loss as the result of a fire. Investigators will go to the scene of any fire when requested by the chief of any of the fire departments in the city. They may also go to the scene of any fire alarm if details available indicate that their services may be required.

After determining the point of origin of the fire, investigators began an examination of debris and other material in the region of the fire's origin. This material may also be removed from the scene of the fire for a thorough examination by laboratories, and/or city agencies, to determine if any inflammable material was present in the region where the fire began.

An examination is also conducted of electrical wiring in the region of fire, as well as appliances and/or other equipment which may have contributed to the cause of the fire through faulty operation.

Photographs are also taken at the scene of the fire to assist in determining what material was present, and in what arrangement, which may have contributed to the fire's origin.

Interviews are conducted with anyone who may have been present at the start of the fire, either as occupants of the building or as witnesses to the fire, to gain an insight into what actually occurred at the start of the fire.

Firemen responding to the alarm are also interviewed as to what they witnessed on arriving at the scene, and what they may have encountered during their efforts to control and extinguish the flames.

A primary item in the investigation into the cause of any fire which results in the loss of human life is the medical examiner's report establishing the factors which contributed to that person's death.

Investigators Cartwright and Hundley indicate they rely "quite heavily on these findings," which many times determine the continuance of the investigation.

All findings during the investigation of a fire are preserved as future evidence to be used during court proceedings if the fire is proved to have been deliberately set, and thus classified as arson, or to support the fire being classified as caused by accidental means.

A fire is classified as arson only after the elimination of all accidental causes, and then is placed in a criminal category of being a felony.

Once the origin of a fire is determined as being arson, investigators renew their interviews of those present at the time of the fire, or those who may have associated with persons who witnessed the fire.

During the investigation of any fire, investigators have the power to remove any material required in their investigation from the scene of a fire.

They also have cooperative agreements with other governmental bodies which enables them to carry their investigation into any location in the State of Virginia, or into any region in the United States.

When the investigation reaches the point of identifying the person or persons responsible for the fire, all findings of the investigation are discussed with the Commonwealth's Attorney to obtain the issuance of warrants for any arrests necessary.

Chief Fire Investigator Holland points out that anyone who aids, assists, or gives counsel to another person in the deliberate setting of a fire can be found equally guilty of arson.

Anyone convicted of a charge of arson is faced with a penalty ranging from three years in prison to the death penalty. The punishment for a conviction of arson would depend on the type of fire involved, if it resulted in loss of life, and/or the time of setting the fire.

Holland is also quick to point out that once a fire has been classified as arson, there is no statute of limitation on the prosecution of those responsible for the fire.

His office is still conducting investigations into fires of six and seven years ago which were of a suspicious nature in their origin, he said.

Hans M. Stegelmeyer (left) Chief of Police in Hamm, West Germany, and his wife visited Chief Col. W.W. Davis at Virginia Beach police headquarters this past week.

Wrist-Sized Pipe Will Send Volumes

A buried pipe will someday carry telephone talk said L.F. Patrick, local manager for The Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Company of Virginia.

This hollow pipe known as a "waveguide" is about the size of a person's wrist and will handle as many as a quarter of a million conversations simultaneously - enough capacity to transmit letter-by-letter a full 24-volume set of encyclopedias in one tenth of a second.

As the volume of long distance calls increases each year, more and more facilities with greater capacities are required. Over the past decade, long distance calls have almost doubled - in 1969 there were over 6.8 billion of these calls. Here in Virginia, C&P's volume of long distance calls has almost tripled in the past ten years. Last year calls totaled over 116 million.

It is estimated that to keep pace with this tremendous growth in long distance service that fully 75 percent of the interstate circuit mileage required by 1980 remains to be built.

The economical waveguide system is part of the Bell System's program for meeting growth in all phases of long distance communications - conversations, data and picture-phone service. This system will exploit the high information-carrying capacities of little-used radio waves of short wavelength called millimeters. The frequencies of these waves are in the higher band.

An investigation is underway into the cause of the fire which virtually destroyed this Indian River Road home last Thursday. The dwelling served as living quarters for 13 people ranging in age from 5 years to 80 years, all of whom escaped injury. Men of the Kempsville and Davis Corner Volunteer Fire Departments extinguished the flames.

Police Chiefs Exchange Ideas

Hans M. Stegelmeyer, Chief of Police of Hamm, West Germany, and his wife, became acquainted with the workings of the Virginia Beach police department this past week.

Police Chief W.W. Davis hosted the couple on their visit to police headquarters at Princess Anne Courthouse during a one-day stay in the resort city as part of a tour of the Tidewater area.

Chief Stegelmeyer was taken on a tour of the headquarters facilities and was briefed on the operation of the various police divisions and communications room.

Col. Davis also briefed him on the operational and administrative procedures employed in the function of the resort city police department.

Chief Stegelmeyer's visit generated an exchange of ideas between the two police officials on the variations in law enforcement in West Germany and Virginia Beach, as well as differences in the operation of the two police departments.

At the close of his visit, Chief Stegelmeyer presented Col. Davis with a shield like those worn on the hats of police officers of Hamm.

Col. Davis presented Chief Stegelmeyer with a Virginia Beach police hat shield and a uniform shoulder patch. Stegelmeyer said he would place the items on public display in a case in the Hamm police headquarters building.

Ring Suspected In Bicycle Thefts

Bicycle thefts in Virginia Beach last month - more than doubled such thefts in the resort city during June of last year, and police believe the increase may be linked with a scheme involving second hand bicycle sales.

Records in the police Juvenile Division show that 267 bicycles were reported stolen last month, as compared to 132 in June 1969.

While a full evaluation of the loss represented in the bicycle thefts could not be determined, a partial evaluation indicated the stolen bikes were worth more than $11,000.

In discussing the sudden increase in bicycle thefts Lt. Henry Capps, head of the Juvenile Division, said, "I think it's entirely possible someone is trying to commercialize on this." He also requested the assistance of the public in his office investigating this theory.

Capps is requesting that any resident of the city who "observes anyone possessing an unusually large number of bicycles or bicycle parts to contact the Juvenile Division." He also requested anyone who is approached with the offer of a second hand bicycle or bicycle parts to not commit themselves but to rather obtain as much information as possible on contacting the seller of the bicycle and contact the Juvenile Division.

Investigation shows the bike thefts are taking place primarily at night and are occurring in widely separated sections of the city. The locations of the thefts are also varied, including private homes, outside business firms and recreational areas.

The three day period of June 12, 13 and 14 has been cited as representative of the frequency of bicycle thefts. During that period a total of 65 bikes were reported stolen.

Investigators point out that the major difficulty in locating owners of bicycles, which have been recovered by police after being lost or stolen is the lack of proper registration of bicycles with the city. Of the 75 to 80 bicycles which have recently been recovered by police, officials were able to locate the owners of only 30 of these bicycles through registration records.

While many thefts can be traced to carelessness on the part of property owners, Lt. Capps does not fully endorse this attitude regarding the current increase in bicycle thefts. He said, "While I caution people on leaving bikes lying around, I don't blame them because they should not have to watch their property constantly."

Machines Robbed

Police continue their search for suspects in the burglarizing of two Virginia Beach business firms over the 4th of July holiday weekend.

Two soft drink vending machines were broken into at the Holiday Sands Motel at 11th Street and Atlantic Avenue, resulting in a loss of $125.

Thieves broke into Grumpy's Restaurant at 9th Street and Atlantic Avenue, and took $200 from several vending machines and the cash register.

Woman Escapes Injury

A Chesapeake woman escaped serious injury early Monday morning when her auto collided with a train near the intersection of Bonney Road and Virginia Beach Boulevard.

According to investigators the auto, reportedly driven by Eula M. Allen, 39, of Young Avenue, had just entered the crossing of the Norfolk and Southern Railroad as the train approached at slow speed. Her auto stalled with the front end protruding over the tracks. The train came to a stop just as the front end of the auto was struck.

She reportedly sustained contusions of the chest and, according to police investigators, was cited for failing to yield the right of way to the oncoming train.

Fire Investigated

An investigation is underway into the cause of a fire which resulted in heavy damage to the former Aragona Utilities Corp. sewage treatment plant on Tuesday afternoon. Volunteers from the Davis Corner and Kempsville fire departments spent about an hour and a half at the scene of the fire. The plant ceased operations about 15 months ago, and the structure had been cleared of equipment.

You want to move up to a modern home. But you don't want to move.

The home you bought five or ten years ago was probably all you needed at the time. It had just enough bedrooms, a reasonably up-to-date kitchen, and a cold basement with "possibilities."

As the world turned, your family grew larger and your home grew older. You now have too few bedrooms, a cramped, inefficient kitchen, and a cold basement - still with possibilities.

This might have been the year you planned to move up to a bigger, more modern home. But you didn't plan on the high cost of home financing.

You want to move up to a modern home. But right now you don't want to move.

More room and comfort with electric heat.

We can show you how today's modern electric heating systems can give you more living space and more year-round comfort with far less problems and maintenance than your present system. Often with existing ducts and pipes.

We can also show you how electric heat simplifies adding extra rooms such as a bedroom, bathroom, or den - and gives you a new feature of total electric comfort: room-by-room temperature control.

That cold, dark basement with your old furnace can be made roomier and cozier by tearing out the furnace and fuel tanks and installing radiant panel ceiling heat. More room, an attractive new ceiling, and today's modern electric heat.

One of our Vepco-recommended Reddy Kilowatt Heating and Cooling Contractors can handle the whole job, including insulation and storm windows if needed. The Reddy Kilowatt Contractor is listed in your yellow pages under "heating contractors."

A modern, work-saving kitchen.

Perhaps the most dramatic modernizing can be done in the kitchen. With the latest work-saving electric appliances and the kind of space planning that saves steps and work. Vepco's staff of home economists will consult with you and help plan the kind of kitchen you've always wanted. Without charging you a cent.

Our staff of Live-Better-Electrically experts wants to help.

Whether you're interested in moving up to clean flameless electric heat, planning a new wiring system, or modernizing your kitchen, we want to help. With free information. With free advice and planning.

District board plots course

The course of action for the next two years was laid out by the Tidewater District, Virginia Federation of Women's Clubs' board meeting Tuesday at the Holiday Inn on Northampton Blvd.

During the meeting the Junior clubs of the district approved as their theme "Conservation of Resources--Mental and Environmental" which will encompass both mental health and pollution of the earth. Senior clubs had already adopted as their theme "Concern, Cooperation and Improvement."

District chairmen expressed their goals for the year. These included:

Conservation: An emphasis on environment starting with local communities; arouse interest in clean air and water and teach these values to children.

Education: Attend school board and city council meetings to know what is going on, be informed, be involved, learn. Help school drop outs, encourage clubs to give scholarships.

Communications: Keep mass media informed of newsworthy activities of clubs. Encourage educational and literary programs on local television. Recognize the need to bridge communications gap between adults and youth.

Home Life: Encourage better understanding of consumer affairs. Promote home safety. Study the new morality in mass media. Help the aged in communities. Encourage home devotions. Recommend that clubs have Christ-centered Christmas programs. Have members study all religions to better understand them.

Public Affairs: Instill respect for the American flag. Promote law and order. Support good government.

Health: Study community health conditions especially the inoculation of children for contagious diseases.

Mental Health: Offer financial assistance to persons interested in going into the field. Help improve the attitude of the public toward mental patients. Welcome patients back to society. Urge school systems to have psychiatrists.

Legislation and Citizenship: Encourage members to participate in club business. Let every club be 100% voters. Improve home citizenship. Become well informed.

Safety: Work toward passage of the stricter drunk driving law that was defeated in the last General Assembly which would have provided for Breathalyzer tests and lowered the acceptable blood alcohol level from 1.5 to 1.0.

Veterans: Give volunteer service in hospitals, give donations for canteens or parties, donate toilet articles, fill Red Cross ditty bags.

Mrs. John E. Yeates, president of Tidewater District, told her board to be concerned for their communities and to work with other clubs and organizations to improve it. "You can't do much alone," she said. "Be concerned, but make sure it's worth your efforts. Know what you're using your time for."

"One of my concerns is always children," she added. "Every problem always goes back to that home environment."

Later, in reporting on the General Federation of Women's Clubs convention in San Antonio, Mrs. Yeates announced that the GFWC had adopted a resolution supporting the POW-MIA efforts to write letters for the release and better treatment of prisoners of the Vietnam conflict.

Mrs. C. E. Upton, Jr., a member of Cape Henry Women's Club who is chairman of the State Board meeting which will be held at the Golden Triangle Sept. 22-23, reported on plans for the meeting which will be hosted by Tidewater District. About 500 women are expected. Mrs. A. A. Page is co-chairman, and Mrs. E. Gilbert Keene of Virginia Beach is in charge of reservations and registration. Mrs. Donald Dale will be chairman of the Junior division with Mrs. H. L. Copeland as co-chairman.

During the Junior meeting it was announced that a proposal to raise Junior Federation dues from 25¢ per member to 35¢ will be introduced.

A total of 136 women representing 59 Junior and Senior clubs in the District attended the meeting which was hosted by the Woman's Club of Chesapeake Beach, Inc. with the Bay-side Junior Woman's Club.

Her job is like a jigsaw puzzle

Rachael (Mrs. C. Bernard) Brown's first active participation in the Boardwalk Art Show was serving as an "art sitter" for an artist who was unable to stay with her exhibit since she had broken her leg.

Now, as placement chairman, Mrs. Brown is responsible for everything from assigning exhibit space to artists to putting numbered tags on each of the spaces along the ten blocks of the show so that artists can find their spots. Although not an artist herself ("You don't see any pictures around," she has worked with the show for seven or eight years and has been placement chairman for three. She first helped in totaling sales and manned tents, followed by a year as tent chairman.

"Once you get into it you find yourself in other things," she said with a quiet smile.

Placement, or the assigning

of spaces, is on a "first come, first serve" basis, according to Mrs. Brown. "As applications come in a list is compiled and handed to me. Many of the old artists have established places and want to be in a certain place or near a certain motel or one of their friends. We can't always accommodate them, however. If we could stack them on decks we might have room."

You have to work closely with the entries and staging chairmen," said Mrs. Brown.

Assigning spaces is more than trying to please the artist,

Lotus Ball is Wed.

The Lotus Ball sponsored by Cape Henry Woman's Club will be held Wednesday, July 15 at the Cavalier Beach and Cabana Club with music by Chuck Laskin to begin at 9.

This year's Lotus Queen will be announced and crowned at 9:30 p.m. by State Sen. Edward T. (Ned) Cason. E. Wirt Walker, Jr. will be master of ceremonies. Tickets will be available at the door.

The annual ball traditionally kicks off Lotus Week festivities which this year will be July 15-22 with boat tours of the Lotus Gardens on Route 615 offered for tourists and natives alike. It is the ideal time to see the lotus, one of the few stands of native American lotus, at their peak of bloom. Dredging financed over a year ago by the Cape Henry Woman's Club has done much to restore the lotus to their former splendor. Brackish water had endangered the stand.

In addition to the ball, there will also be a concert by the U.S. Atlantic Fleet Band from 8-9 p.m. July 16 at the statue of the Norwegian Lady.

NAVAL ROTC midshipmen from colleges and universities all over the country were on hand last week for the annual Midshipmen's Ball at the Little Creek Amphibious Base. Miss Tia James of Norfolk and her escort Midshipman John Osborne of Auburn University exchange greetings with Capt. W.E. Barber, one of the hosts.

Choice is yours
--so they say

Do you ever get the feeling that the fashion experts are trying to ram long skirts down your throat (or legs) whether you like, or want, them or not.

They're being careful in how they go about it too. When the first fall fashions were announced, it was said that any length would be in style no matter how short or how long. The choice was to be up to the individual. The teens could stay happy in their mini's and the more mature ladies who had never raised their skirts in the first place would be right in style.

Sounds great. But have you noticed the pictures of fashions in the newspapers? There's not a short skirt among them. And even the ads for our loyal local stores show mid's. The racks are beginning to fill up with them.

Now I do not wear mini skirts. Neither do I wear skirts below my knees. Nor do I intend to (famous last words). My knees are as nice as anyone else's--maybe a little better than some I've seen.

It took me two years to get up enough nerve to cut off my skirts. How the heck am I supposed to lengthen them again, add a ruffle on the bottom? I even took a couple inches off the bottom of my winter coat. Of course, I still have that old camel hair coat that I wore in college... And camel is popular again.

According to the experts, the reason women first started wearing shorter skirts was because of the Depression and shorter skirts were introduced because less material was required. So now, with another recession forecast for the near future, how come the skirts are going down?

The next thing will probably be hoop skirts and sunbonnets. The only choices we have are to go ahead and wear them no matter what, not buy any new clothes, buy them and shove them or simply start from scratch and make our own way through we want.

Down with mid's (no pun intended) and up with mini's. At least the men are on my side.

Mrs. James Sadler, left, was hostess for a luncheon and tennis fashion show for tennis buffs Tuesday at her home. With her, left to right, are Mrs. Edward A. Smith, luncheon chairman, and Mrs. Robert Christopher and Mrs. William McLaughlin, ticket co-chairmen for the annual Tennis Ball which is set for Aug. 30 at the Cavalier Beach and Cabana Club. It is sponsored by the Virginia Beach Tennis Patrons Association, and tickets are $12 a couple. The sign advertises a tennis tournament sponsored by Millar and Rhoads.

to 17th Streets, and this year it will be from 10th to 20th. Around 17th Street the lawn narrows and the spaces could not be used.

"On this shifting of artists," commented Mrs. Brown, "I want to say that the artists are usually very cooperative. Only one or two a year are difficult."

The next step for Mrs. Brown is to mail out a letter to each artist telling them their space and including a map to show them where it is, a parking deal and a Chamber of Commerce accommodations brochure.

Then she enlists the help of her daughter, Nell, to make name signs for each artist. When the artists arrive she provides them with information about the judges and times of judging, etc. And if all that wasn't enough, Mrs. Brown will be manning a tent at 13th Street. "My daughters both help in the tent." There will also be tents at 10th, 16th and 18th Streets.

This year's show is July 16-20.

"I do this as sort of something that deals with the community. And it's in the summer, so the timing is perfect," explained Mrs. Smith, who, during the winter, is a history and government teacher at Norfolk Academy.

Of her show job Mrs. Brown concluded, "My worst worry is on opening morning having someone show up without a place." It hasn't happened yet.

A long time ago, when ladies couldn't be as frank as we can today, Lydia Pinkham recognized the problem and set about finding a remedy. She knew it was not natural for women to have to suffer with what was obviously a natural process.

So she turned to nature for a remedy. She developed a marvelous compound of medicinal roots and herbs that turned the trick for the women she knew. Because it is a natural answer to your natural problems, it can turn the trick for you, too.

Three Fort Story soldiers died early Saturday morning when this auto in which they were riding careened out of control and was ripped in half as it slammed into a tree on Indian River Road.

Three Soldiers Die When Car Hits Tree

The traffic fatality toll for the year in Virginia Beach rose to 16 early Saturday morning when three Fort Story soldiers died in a single car accident on Indian River Road.

William Weeks, Jr., 22, Swainsboro, Ga.; Robert T. Hastings, Jr., 19, Hebron, Md.; and Danny F. Berger, 18, Findlay, Ohio. Weeks, driver of the auto, was attached to the 573rd Transportation Co., while Hastings and Berger, passengers in the auto, were attached to the 461st Transportation Co.

Police investigators said the auto was apparently traveling at a high rate of speed as it rounded a curve near the intersection of Indian River Road and Stumpy Lake Lane.

Cdr. Hess Retires Here

Cmdr. William J. Hess ended his 33-year Navy career here last week when he was relieved as commanding officer of Assault Craft Unit Two by Cmdr. Roy M. Hollandsworth.

For directing the Navy's ferry service in an outstanding manner while the Chesapeake Bay Bridge-Tunnel was closed earlier this year, Cmdr. Hess was also awarded a Navy Commendation Medal. It was presented by V. Adm. Luther C. Helms, Commander Amphibious Force, Atlantic.

Cmdr. Hollandsworth assumed command of the Atlantic Fleet Amphibious Force unit after duty in the ships material readiness division in the Office of the Chief of Naval Operations in Washington, D.C. He now lives on Sycamore Road in Virginia Beach.

All three men were trapped inside the wreckage of the auto and had to be freed by members of the Kempsville Volunteer Rescue Squad and police officers.

SAFETY PROGRAMS

Who is the recreational boat operator? What is his usual boating activity? What type of boat does he use? Where does he go to enjoy his boating activity? How often does he go boating? What are the results of his boating? What mishaps, if any, occur while he is boating? How long does he usually stay on his boating trip?

These are some of the questions which need to be answered in order to develop a better recreational boating safety program. The answers are not at hand, and the programs thus far have been the best that could be developed with the information available.

A survey is now underway in the Fifth Coast Guard District - Maryland, Virginia, North Carolina - directed toward answering the leading questions. The survey is being conducted by an independent contractor using computerized sampling techniques. It is expected that some 10,000 boat operators, selected at random, will be interviewed by telephone during the survey.

This is one reason for the survey currently underway. Further, there are no existing lists of people who operate recreational boats. It is probable that many accidents occur which are not reported. The information gathered will be used to provide a series of different rates by using actual accident data and boating exposure information.

CONCLUSIONS

When all of the survey information has been collected it will be used to test at least three aspects of recreational boating. Specifically, the results should support decisions on (1) the need for Federal engineering standards as they are related to numbers of accidents and to measure the effectiveness of adopted standards, (2) the necessary number of pleasure boating safety enforcement units and their proper distribution, and (3) the content and composition of education programs.

Other information not now known will be obtained from the survey, for example, total recreational boat usage, including type of activity and location. Included in the survey will be information on each of four categories of boats: motorboats, sailboats, rowboats, and canoes. Accident rates for each of these types will be calculated. Sub-tabulations of accident rates by size boat and operator characteristics will also be provided.

COOPERATION

It is expected that the information will provide for the development of a more effective boating safety program - from the actual design and building of the boat to its ultimate use. The information is necessary. If you are called on the telephone and someone says: "Good evening, I am calling from Washington, D.C. Right now we are designing a survey on recreational boating activities for the United States Coast Guard," please cooperate with the caller. Make your contribution toward making every week "safe boating week."

An Open Letter to the City Council of Virginia Beach from more than Eight hundred property owners who are members of the North Virginia Beach Improvement League, Inc.

The Honorable Frank A. Dusch, Mayor, and Members of the City Council
Virginia Beach, Virginia

Gentlemen:

The North Virginia Beach Improvement League and hundreds of residents of North Virginia Beach are gravely concerned by the recommendation of the Planning Commission, on June 9th, that a T-2 supplemental zoning change be permitted on the site of the Sea Horse Inn.

If you are unaware of the overwhelming opposition of a majority of the residents of North Virginia Beach to this change in zoning, please be advised that a poll resulted in all but unanimous disapproval. These people know that approval of spot zoning, once begun, will result in further spot zoning and eventual commercialization of the finest and oldest residential area in Virginia Beach. We plead with you not to let this happen.

There are a host of reasons why rezoning should not be allowed. We request your careful, thoughtful consideration of these reasons when they're presented to you at the City Council meeting on July 13th at 2 p.m. A great many interested people will attend this meeting with the hope of broadening your understanding of the intensity of the opposition to this rezoning request.

Very sincerely yours,
North Virginia Beach Improvement League,
Charles A. Mowry, President

ASTRO-ADVICE

By Raymond Williams
noted Virginia Beach
astrologer

Editorial comment: Over the past few years there has been a rebirth of interest in one of Man's oldest sciences, Astrology. The origin of Astrology is not known exactly, but it is known that it was practiced by the Babylonians and Chaldeans. In spite of the vehement denials of modern Astronomers, Astrology is the parent of Astronomy.

As a professional Astrologer, I have come to realize that Astrology has limitations. Because it has limits and does not have the answer to every problem confronting Man, it is ridiculed and belittled. No one would consider heaping the same scorn on Astronomy, even though some of the nation's most eminent Astronomers were sure that our Astronomers would sink into moon dust up to their ears. This was even after we had a satellite sitting on the moon's surface. Medicine is certainly not a perfect science nor are physics or psychology. But because Astrology is not perfect it has been relegated to the rubbish heap. It is about to be awakened and with its revival will come a greater understanding of Man's relationship to himself and all that is about him.

The Virginia Beach Sun is to be commended for its courage in presenting this column to you. I am privileged to write it for you. R. W.

Q: Will my son return home? Please tell me about his plans, Annie

A: The horoscope erected for the time and place of his birth indicates that your son is an extremely sensitive young man in search of his identity. With his Sun (ruler of individuality) in the sign of Gemini at birth and placed in the house governing the home, it was inevitable that he have several changes of residence, since Gemini is a very movable sign. He probably left about three years ago when the planet Mars (intense energy) made an adverse aspect of his Natal Sun. This surely made him very irritable, if not belligerent, and brought about his need for a change of residence.

His rising sign, Aquarius, is an indication of one who will seek freedom and independence. The rising sign is very well aspected by two powerful planets, Jupiter and Uranus. You need not be too concerned for his safety since he will be well protected. Saturn at his birth was afflicting his rising sign, making him very depressed at times. At birth the Moon, Venus and Mercury were in the sign of Cancer. This is the mark of a very sensitive person. I might say that this much sensitivity is difficult for a man to handle.

So far as to whether he will return home, I can safely say that he almost certainly will. But do not expect him to remain home because it is unlikely that he will since Uranus is placed in the house of the home and Uranus means change.

Four years ago the affliction between Mars and his Sun began to affect him. This is passed now and the planet Venus is being strongly affected. Since this taking place in the 5th house of love affairs, do not be surprised if he shows up within the next year, bringing a wife with him.

You need not be too concerned for him. His horoscope indicates a great deal of sensitivity and some personal confusion but is generally a favorable horoscope.

Q: My husband is only 27 and is losing his hair. You would think it was the end of the world for him. Can you offer any consolation? E.K.

A: Your husband was born with the sun in the fire sign Leo with the Sagittarius, another fire sign, rising. It is rather common for those born under fire signs to lose their hair early. Being a proud Leo it is especially difficult for him. As far as consolation, maybe you could get him a life-sized portrait of Yul Brenner.

Q: My son, now 14, has been a wonderful boy and a model student, until last year. He seems to have lost interest in his studies and has become restless and irritable. What does Astrology have to say about this? D.B.

A: When we look at your son's horoscope it is quite clear what is taking place in his life now. His ascendant, the part of the horoscope which governs temperament, has moved by progression to an adverse aspect to the planet Uranus. This is the planet which produces drastic changes of an uncertain and unpredictable nature, he often acts in ways which seem strange to you. To complicate this even further the planet Neptune is moving over his Scorpio Sun. The nature of Neptune is such that in this position it is sure to produce confusion. Neptune puts a veil over what it touches and since the sun in the horoscope indicates our very nature and individuality, it would cause your son to be very unsure of himself right now.

This is an important time for both you and your son. If you will be patient and let him know you understand what he is going through you may establish a relationship which is not often found between parents and their children. In a year he will have passed through this trying period and though he will have changed he will be much better for having had the experience.

Q: What is my future? O. Henry

A: This is a very general question but I will try to answer it in such a way to offer what assistance I can. You have been going through a very difficult period which began about five years ago. It would seem that about that time you lost someone very dear to you. This was probably the marriage partner and with their passing your income was reduced considerably. This placed a hardship on you and you may have been responsible to a degree for the health problems you have been and are still facing. You were born with the Sun and Mercury in the sign of Capricorn and this has given you the drive to overcome obstacles which would have been too great for another to cope with. The Sun is our individuality and Mercury is our mind. When they are placed in the tenacious and aggressive sign of Capricorn little can defeat us.

The next year may still hold a period of trial for you but when that is passed your entire situation should improve considerably. Finances will definitely improve in a year or so and your mental outlook will be much brighter.

Address your questions to Astro-Advice, Virginia Beach Sun, P. O. Box 657, Virginia Beach, Va. 23461. Questions MUST include date, time and place of birth.

A Tree of Monsterous Proportions

There are many of Mother Nature's creations that, even in their ugliness, seem beautiful. The Jewelfish, with its magnificent multicolored growths, is capable of producing a fatal sting when a thief takes a jewel; the cobra, with its lightning-swift movements, is perhaps the deadliest of all snakes. But in Virginia Beach, Mother nature has taken two seemingly ordinary items - a tree and vines - and produced a tree at the corner of Laskin and Cardinal Roads that's a tough act to follow. Even for man.

Outspoken Citizens Oppose A pplications For Motel and Park

City Council held a lively session Monday with several hundred demonstrative citizens attending in opposition to three planning applications -- the Sea Horse Inn at North Virginia Beach; a trailer park near London Bridge; and the city's long-range Bay Front development Plan.

The Bay Front Plan, which has evolved through a series of public hearings and revisions, was the only proposal to get council's nod of approval. The only point in the plan to draw considerable opposition was the designation of an area on the North side of Shore Drive as a medium high density area and the adjoining property on the south side of Shore Drive as a medium density area.

It was explained that the proposal is not a strict master plan, only guidelines for the city to follow over the next 15 years in developing property fronting Chesapeake Bay.

The strongest opposition, and the most vocal response, came in connection with an application to build a new motel on the site of the Sea Horse Inn at the corner of 78th Street and Atlantic Avenue.

Much controversy has developed over the proposal in recent weeks, following the Planning Commission's approval of the application, as the organized North Virginia Beach Improvement League sponsored advertisements and commercials in area newspapers and television stations.

Attorney Thomas C. Broyles explained to council, amid jeers from the crowd, that the applicants were attempting to improve commercial property already established, not initiate a new venture that might be detrimental to the area.

He pointed out that the new motel, which would replace the 40 - year - old Sea Horse Inn, would provide complete off-street parking, and would draw a nicer clientele to a more attractive building than now exists.

Attorney Woodruff Griffin, representing the residents, argued that the buildings now existing are more in keeping with the residential pattern of the area. He said some 1,200 residents had signed petitions opposing the application in fear that its approval would open North Virginia Beach to more commercialism.

Several civic league representatives from the London Bridge area spoke out in opposition to a proposed trailer park on London Bridge Road just south of South Adventure Trail. Each said that their main concern was not necessarily the park itself but the overcrowding conditions it would have on Tranwood Elementary School. They pointed out that the school is already overcrowded and a concentration of people in a trailer park would only add to the problems.

Art Show Opens at 1

The 15th Annual Boardwalk Art Show opens at 1 p.m. today, Thursday, and will run through July 20.

This year's show has shifted locations on the Boardwalk for more space for artists. It will be located along the Boardwalk from 10th to 20 streets instead of 7th to 17th. The hours have also changed, and the show will be open from 1 to 8 p.m. daily. The increased space will allow room for 450 artists this year. There were 416 entries last year. All kinds of art work will be displayed including paintings in various media, sculpture in stone and metal, carvings and ceramics.

Although the show is free, parking spaces are usually at a premium. Art pieces on display will be for sale except for prize winners which become part of the Show's permanent collection.

Mount Trashmore's Replacement To Be Cleared This Week

Mount Trashmore, the city's unique refuse disposal project, is rapidly coming to a close and a 108-acre site near Centerville Turnpike will soon be its replacement.

Sanitation Engineer Charles Kiley said that the city expects to start clearing some 30 to 35 acres this week for the new project and it will probably be operational in six to eight months.

"As soon as the land is cleared we will start with the maintenance buildings and scales," Kiley said.

The overall project will develop over the next 15 to 20 years, he said, and, like Mount Trashmore, will be used by the city as a recreational area when completed.

Mount Trashmore, said to be the only one of its type, was the brainchild of Roland E. Dorer of the State Public Health Department.

Some 700 tons of refuse a day is packed onto the mound by heavy equipment, trucked to the site from all areas of the resort city as well as from the City of Norfolk. Virginia Beach provides the service to Norfolk at the rate of $3.12 per ton. The project was started 3 1/2 years ago and presently stands 60 feet at its highest peak. In another six months it is expected to reach its capacity and will eventually be converted into an amphitheatre to seat about 1,000 persons. The city's Department of Parks and Recreation will develop it as a recreational facility.

Trashmore has gained wide recognition throughout the country for its unique concept. It has easily provided for the handling of refuse from some half million on six acres of land while the national average for such disposal is 10 acres per 1,000 persons, Kiley said.

"This project has proven more than satisfactory," he said. "It is clean, has no odor and attracts no rats or other animals or rodents usually attracted to disposal areas."

It is so successful as a sanitary means of handling garbage, in fact, that the city's application for the 108-acre disposal area at Centerville Turnpike went practically unopposed.

"There was only one man who opposed it," Kiley said, "and he lived 10 miles away from the proposed site."

The disposal has received much publicity in various types of publications all over the country but only this week did officials realize it is also gaining international recognition.

A letter was received from the City of Liverpool stating that the project had come to their attention through a magazine article and that such a method might solve that City's refuse problems.

The letter, signed by Town Clerk R. T. Findley, said that "it is considered that this method of disposal could be 'utilized' in the City of Liverpool."

The project had come to his attention, he said, in an article in the S&M Municipal Record, reprinted from "The American City."

"The ever-increasing tonnage of refuse is causing Council grave concern," Findley said, "as available areas are filled by the land-fill method and the need for economical provision of new areas arises."

"Also, Council could assist neighboring Councils which are unable to provide garbage service because of the need to transport the refuse great distances at increasing cost to the ratepayer," he said.

College Fights

The Virginia Beach Planning Commission Tuesday deferred for 90 days a request for change of zoning by the E.V. Williams Company and Associates for construction of apartment units near Virginia Wesleyan College.

Planning Commission chairman R. Ben Wroten said the request would be deferred until completion of the BaySide Borough plan, scheduled for presentation to the commission and council in December.

But an attorney for the college argued that if construction of the apartments were allowed, it would eventually lead to the complete encroachment of the college and to what he termed as an undesirable situation.

The commission also approved a use permit request by the Psychiatric Institute of America for construction of a psychiatric hospital to be located on Lindsey Drive near the Virginia Beach General Hospital.

The facility, according to attorney Thomas C. Broyles, will treat both in and out-patients, he said that the hospital will concentrate primarily on the use of group therapy in its treatment, but will not be a site for long-term confinement and treatment.

The only opposition voiced to the hospital's location was by residents of the First Colonial Civic League who said that they were concerned about the potential traffic hazard that could develop on First Colonial Road near the medical complex.

The commission denied a request for a use permit by the Mark 2300, Inc., the 2300 block of Atlantic Avenue for dancing and live entertainment. The Mark 2300 is also known as the White Rabbit.

A request by Rudee Inlet Yacht Basin, Inc. for a change in zoning and a use permit to allow a 361 slip marina was deferred for 30 days while an application by Charles O. Peel for a use permit for a public marina in Rudee Inlet was approved. Peel's request for approval was referred back to the commission by City Council.

Approval was granted to Lawrence Marshall and Celia B. Rudick for a change of zoning and a use permit for construction of 15 apartment units on Wishart Road in the BaySide Borough.

Kit Finds Conflicts Same Everywhere

By JAMES TURNER

For most people, travel is a means of escape, but for 20-year old Kit Carlson, working his way to and through Europe was how he found himself.

Carlson, who spent eight months in Norway working as a busboy in an Oslo hotel, said he left Virginia Beach in October, 1968 on a moment's notice.

"When I graduated I really didn't know what I wanted to do, so I got a ship. The agent called me at 6 p.m. Tuesday and said I could get a ship; I left the next day at noon," he said.

"Most of my friends didn't even know I had left."

Carlson said he worked his way across the Atlantic on the Norwegian ship Pronto as a helmsman. "I had the eight-to-twelve watch and got across on what they call a work-away."

"I left bare with $70 in my pocket and got there with $70 in my pocket," Carlson landed in Rotterdam, Holland and said he took a flight to Oslo. "When I got there I only had $20."

Carlson said he was lucky because he could stay with relatives in Oslo but that the thing that counted most was that he was on his own.

"When I first thought about going I didn't know what I would do or if I could make it." Three hours after he got off the plane in Oslo, Carlson said he had a job as a busboy at the Hotel Viking. "The first class hotel in Norway."

"Everybody here thinks that working in a hotel isn't much, but in Norway it's very respectable work," he said.

Carlson said that traveling throughout the Scandinavian countries was interesting, but what intrigued him was the differences in the different nationalities.

"Norwegian people are very friendly; they'll go out of their way to help you. But with the Swedes, well, they're just there. They'll help you if you need it, but they don't care one way or the other."

Carlson said that seeing these differences was what helped him the most. "People don't understand themselves or their neighbors. If people would see how people in other countries lived they might be able to understand themselves better."

"It gave me a better understanding of myself," he said, "because I saw the other side." As he was walking in Oslo shortly after his arrival, Carlson said he came across a large square filled with people demonstrating against the United States and its Southeast Asia policy.

"It's kind of a weird feeling to watch demonstrations against your own country. If people here demonstrate against something, that's one thing because they're part of it; but to see people from another country doing it gives you an odd feeling, seeing all the rocks thrown and flags burned."

Carlson said that military deserters from the United States are not well - received in Sweden. "The Swedes won't have anything to do with you if you're a deserter. They give you political asylum, but that's all."

While he was there, Carlson said he was teased about being a deserter, but it was never done seriously.

"I guess the reason the Swedes don't like them (deserters) is because they have a draft, too. Not too many people know it, but Sweden has one of the best equipped armies in the world," he said.

Carlson said the conflict between generations and political beliefs is international, and that the Scandinavian countries face many of the same problems common to the United States. "It's all over the world; students rebelling against the system."

"The problem is that a great number of people who go to see how the rest of the world lives don't really see how they live when they go as tourists," he said.

People should go, live there, work there and get to know the people, he said. "I'd rather stay at a hostel than a Hilton any day. You get a better understanding of the people and yourself."

Although Carlson says he would like to attend a college some day he thinks that he's getting just as much of an education by traveling. "What good is having a college education if you don't understand your neighbor? You're not living a full life if you don't."

Carlson said that his life has to have variety. "I don't think I could take the nine to five job, the same thing for 20 years. Then when you retire they give you a gold watch."

"I'd go insane," he said.

Grant Received For Guide

A federal grant of $25,250 has been awarded to the Virginia Beach Schools to develop curriculum guides for the mentally retarded.

The project, entitled "Strategies for Teaching the Educable Mentally Retarded," will be developed at the Center for Effective Learning. It will begin this summer and end in August 1971.

Concepts and skills in five academic areas will be developed for the primary, intermediate, junior high and high school special education classes.

A project coordinator will be appointed and will devote half time to preparation of curriculum guides and half time helping teachers with retarded children. Special education teachers will be working on the project also. There will be 12 special education teachers working 20 days each. In addition 45 teachers will work three days each between Aug. 15 - 31, 1971 in final compilation of the guides.

Outside consultants in the field will be brought in at different times.

All special education teachers will get a copy before it is complete so that changes can be recommended and made.

In January 1970 there were 141 special education students in the primary grades, 171 in the intermediate grades, 91 in junior high and 73 in senior high. Although a general outline of material to be taught is followed, there has been no formal curriculum guide as such.

Youth's Look At The Festival

By BILL PHILLIPS

Traffic jams in Virginia Beach during the Fourth of July are not uncommon. But in Byron, Ga., such a thing is very rare. At least it was until July 3, 1970 when young people, 500,000 strong, converged upon this small southern town for the Second Annual Atlanta Pop Festival.

Music was the secret ingredient which brought adults, families, long-hairs, and motorcycle gangs from all over the country together to suffer in the 105-degree Georgia heat and shiver during the evening rainstorms to listen to the top name music makers in the country today.

Brotherhood was the key factor which made this throng of individuals some penniless, able to survive under impossible conditions. Several young people volunteered their cars as ambulances and others volunteered their services in the several medical tents.

Though various drugs were plentiful, the most available were marijuana and LSD. Drugs were bought and sold openly and freely. Police drove by people buying drugs and gave no apparent notice. There were several "bad trips" and a few "O.D.'s" (over-doses) but considering the overwhelming percentage of people doing drugs, the "bummers" were minute.

There were several bad drugs going around and the crowds were cautioned of the danger involved in their use. When there was someone in need of help, there was always a helping hand. Water, which was more valuable than gold in the extreme heat, was shared cheerfully to any and every needy person. Concession stands made a killing in water, selling glasses for a quarter, and bags of ice from a dollar to $1.50. From dusk until dawn, the stage, area grounds were filled with tens of thousands of people sitting, standing, and lying listening to group after group "doing their thing." The crowd was generally very responsive. It rained both Friday and Saturday night and most people sat through the rain and eventually slept in the mud in courageous determination to hear and see their favorite groups.

During one night's performance, the announcer came on stage and requested everybody to strike a match and hold it up when he gave the signal. On his cue, over a hundred thousand people struck a match and the audience became a sea of flame to the people on the stage. During the hottest part of every day, modesty was a forgotten word. Girls and boys swam nude in the nearby lake and river and several people shunned clothes altogether. A few were arrested for indecent exposure, but for the most part, the police turned their heads.

Though tickets for the three days of music were $14, the festival became free after the first day. Even though, financially it was a complete bust, the Second Annual Atlanta Pop Festival was a smashing success. Ask anyone who was there what he thought of it and more than likely, he will say, "WOW!"

If a person is going to drive, it would be better if he did not drink at all, says the National Safety Council. However, if he is going to drink, he should drink in such a manner that he will not be under the influence when he does drive. The driver should wait at least one hour per average drink before operating a motor-vehicle. This is the minimum amount of time required by the body to rid itself of alcohol, according to the Council.

Two End Pat Bridges City Jobs Rotary Pres.

The resignations of two Virginia Beach city officials, City Attorney Harry T. Marshall and City Highway Engineer Arthur P. Christian, this week marked the close of two careers totalling 12 years of public service to the resort city.

Marshall informed City Council on Monday that he is resigning as of Aug. 14 to assume the position of City Attorney in Charlottesville.

Christian announced Tuesday he is resigning his city office as of Aug. 1 to become the land development director for the Terry Corp. of Virginia.

Marshall was appointed Virginia Beach City Attorney in 1965 following his retirement from the Marine Corps at the rank of colonel.

Christian joined the Virginia Beach Highway Division in 1963 and was named Highway Superintendent in 1967. He was elevated to the office of City Highway Engineer just three weeks ago in City Manager Roger Scott's outlined proposal for the reorganization of city departments.

When questioned as to what led him to his decision Marshall said "It's very simple, I was born in Charlottesville and so was my wife, and everybody that I grew up with is in Charlottesville."

"About the end of June I was in Charlottesville when I learned their city attorney was resigning. I talked to the Mayor and City Council about the post. They later made me an offer which I couldn't refuse. The opportunity to go home under conditions which I could not afford to turn down is what drew me, and I can assure you there is no other reason."

In reflecting over the period of time he served as City attorney Marshall said, "I've had nothing but pleasant associations. Certainly the people on the City staff and City Council have been easy to work with, and very kind to me in respecting my judgement and decisions. It's been a very interesting and pleasant five years."

Christian said the reasons behind his resignation were basically the same as Marshall's that of receiving an offer of something he has always wanted to do and of finding himself in a position of being able to "take the chance to do it". Christian said "I've got a lot of ties with the City and a lot of fine people I've worked with, but it's just an opportunity I couldn't turn down. It's an opportunity to do something I've always wanted to do."

New Virginia Beach Rotary officers were installed during a recent dinner meeting at the Cavalier.

B.H. (Pat) Bridges is president. Other new officers are W.H. (Bill) Brown, vice president; R. Dean Lee, secretary; A.B. Midgette, treasurer; and John I. Bowman, John S. Waller, John J. Kreuger and Sam G. Feazell, directors.

During the meeting a $1,000 scholarship was presented to Pamela Brother, a 1970 graduate of First Colonial High School. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bill Brothers.

Beauty On A Budget Is Offered

Another link in one of the nation's fastest growing chain of beauty parlors opened Thursday in Virginia Beach, at 5115 Virginia Beach Boulevard.

Edie Adams' Cut & Curl, home of "Beauty on a Budget," staged its official grand opening at 10:00 Thursday with George Ferrell, councilman, doing the honors at a formal ribbon-cutting.

According to Delbert A. Sexton, Licenses for the local unit, Cut & Curl is a nationwide chain which is opening new units at the rate of one per week. He added that the entire beauty care industry has grown to an $11 billion dollar business with even greater increase forecast for the future.

"The secret of Cut & Curl success," said Sexton, "lies in the price appeal, guaranteed satisfaction and high standard of service demanded by the national organization where the customer is the queen. We estimate that Cut & Curl prices are approximately 35% lower than those in salons of comparable quality. Moreover, the Cut & Curl policy of 'No Apointments' has found considerable favor with millions of women across the country. And of course our written guarantee on permanents with dollar coupon value as well."

Mr. Sexton reported that other Cut & Curl salons are expected to open soon in Tidewater.

VNB Sets New Dept.

Virginia National Bank has unveiled plans for the establishment of a major new department at the top management level, a Corporate Planning Department.

Robert M. Schenk, senior vice president, has been named to head the new department.

Schenk's selection triggered one further development in reorganization. Albert B. Gornio, Jr., vice president and cashier, was handed the responsibility for all bank operations throughout the statewide system. The board promoted Gornio to senior vice president and cashier.

The establishment of the Corporate Planning Department, according to Board Chairman W. Wright Harrison "appears to be the best course of action in establishing a method of profit planning in order to maintain a satisfactory level of profits." In outlining Schenk's new duties, Harrison said, "He will supervise the bank's general accounting, budgeting, cost accounting, profit planning and acquisitions. He will, at the same time, advise the bank's executive officers on profit goals and potentials."

Harrison concluded by citing profit planning as a most important function of the bank. "Cost control in banking," he said, "has become more of a factor in managing for profit. In fact, adequate cost control represents the profit margin for Virginia National Bank."

Two Elected

Two Virginia Beach insurance agents have been elected as officers for the Insurance Education Council.

Barry F. Gidley, representing the Virginia Beach Association of Insurance Agents, was elected vice president and Mrs. Lillian D. Entsminger, representing the Insurance Women of Virginia Beach, was elected secretary-treasurer.

Gidley and Mrs. Entsminger are employed by Kellam-Eaton Insurance and Real-Estate Co. and Smith, Gustafson and Terry, Inc., respectively.

Florida Buildings Studied

Lawrence A. Sencillo, president, and Frank Spades, vice president, of Larasan Realty Corporation have returned from a two-day trip to St. Petersburg, Florida where they investigated several new concepts in the planning and development of condominiums.

The purpose of the trip was to investigate new merchandising, sales, and marketing techniques that have come on the scene in this newest form of real estate development.

"The knowledge gained will enable Larasan to better advise clients and investors about similar projects that can be applied to the Tidewater region," Sencillo said.

"The potential of condominiums in Tidewater is very real since the area's growth pattern, resort status, and access from other metropolitan centers offers a unique opportunity not only to investors but to the general public as a recreational outlet," he added.

A Poor Example

Responsible adults are quick to criticize the ill-mannered conduct of today's youth in gatherings of protest. Just such a gathering took place Monday at City Hall. But the demonstrators were not rebellious young people. They were responsible adults, and they set a very poor example.

Sitting on Virginia Beach City Council, is a difficult, and often thankless, job. At best, the sessions are long, tense and demanding. A session like that held Monday could well be termed beyond the call of duty.

Council chambers were crowded with several hundred people on hand to protest assorted building applications. The crowd was restless, obviously charged with emotion over protecting the future of their respective communities.

This is understandable. Citizens should be concerned about the welfare of their neighborhoods and of the city as a whole. A city of 166,000 persons needs public interest to develop to meet the needs of its people. And only if they speak out can City Council know of their desires. Council cannot always comply with the wishes of individuals, but at least the knowledge of the public's wants can help them better determine what is best for all concerned.

But there is a vast difference between speaking out and jeering, and catcalling and, in general, being unruly. It is especially uncalled for in the confines of council chambers where the weight of heavy decisions rest on the shoulders of 11 men, already tired from their own business responsibilities but nevertheless

The Benefits of Art

The Virginia Beach Boardwalk Art Show opens today and for the next four days many thousands of people from all over this country, and several others, will file into the resort city. These artists, art collectors and just ordinary art lovers will rent accommodations throughout the city. They will buy merchandise from the stores, eat meals in the restaurants and, in general, make a valuable contribution to the economy.

This is but one of the benefits this remarkable event has generated for Virginia Beach. It has gained international recognition for the city. It has generated volumes of newspaper and magazine copy, free publicity in noted publications. Recognition that money can't buy. It has given to the city a cultural image that cannot but enhance it as a well rounded resort.

For this the city can thank seeking to make the right decisions.

Virginia Beach City Council has a policy of hearing every citizen who wishes to be heard publicly on a particular issue. This is a commendable policy and certainly one that is lenient considering the size of this city's population. Those who do speak publicly expect to be heard with attention and respect. Should not council expect the same rights? Should they not expect the participants to conduct themselves with dignity rather than turn council sessions into a three-ring circus?

Courtesy should be extended to all. The person who stands alone before council, whether he be a retained attorney or a private citizen speaking his mind on a controversial issue, is entitled to be heard without rude interruptions from the crowd. As Mayor Dusch said Monday, every person in that room could have been heard individually if he so desired. It was fortunate for all, of course, that each side in each issue was presented by selected representatives. But if those citizens had exercised the right to be heard, each would surely have expected an orderly audience.

For those who made up the audience, the outbursts might not have been so noticeable. But for council and others sitting at the front of the crowded room, it was most distracting. Conducting the official business of this proud city demands the respect of those citizens concerned enough to personally appear at council meetings. Pride in their own behavior should be as important as the community pride which brought them there.

the hard-working members of the Virginia Beach Art Association. They started with an idea, and little else, fifteen years ago. They received more laughs than support in those early days. And they received opposition from many who are today raking in dollars derived from the art show.

But the Art Association is a hard-driving, determined and dedicated group and they remained undaunted. They overcame the obstacles, produced a fine, well-organized show and nourished it into one of the most popular events on the East Coast. The great increase in contributing artists has in recent years prompted the association to place limitations on the entries. This has improved the quality of the work and has strengthened the show's national reputation.

The Virginia Beach Art Association is to be commended for its continuing contributions to the resort city.

Much concern, both publicly and privately, flared last week when a Norfolk official indicated that Virginia Beach might be forced to accept into its schools a number of students bused from Norfolk.

Virginia Beach School Supt. E. E. Brickell was one step ahead of everyone. He anticipated such action and very quietly took the necessary steps to avoid such a possibility. On July 1, five days before Norfolk School Board Chairman Vincent Thomas made the busing suggestion, Brickell issued a directive barring local schools from accepting tuition-paying students from outside the city.

Even City Council was unaware that the city's school leader was standing guard to that extent. Councilman George R. Ferrell Monday presented a rough draft of a resolution asking that busing be prohibited. He pointed out that the city could be flooded with Norfolk students if some action wasn't taken. Council ruled against drawing up a resolution, believing it was premature, but agreed that Brickell should be contacted regarding the tuition-paying students. They found that the matter had already been taken care of.

Brickell's directive is indicative of the leadership that has developed for this city one of the finest school systems in the state. The School Administration staff is a group that operates within its own confines, seldom venturing into other segments of municipal operation. The schools are big business in this city, requiring the largest chunk of the city budget.

It must be comforting to parents and city officials alike to realize that men like Brickell and his assistant, Garland Jackson, are standing watch over so vital a part of the community.

Busing Draws Criticism

To the Editor:

Having moved to Virginia Beach from the City of Norfolk, the question posed in this weeks Sun really leaves me cold. From past experience, to say this is "probably the most impractical solution yet to Norfolk's severe school desegregation problem" is, to say the least, the understatement of the year!

Norfolk's school system has spent the past fourteen years in the courts and, apparently, are no nearer an acceptable plan to date than they were fourteen years ago. Having taken an active part in PTA while living in the City of Norfolk, it wasn't hard for me to foresee the present situation Norfolk school officials now face. This is the reason we moved to Virginia Beach four and a half years ago! When your children attend an antiquated school -- lack of heat, flooded grounds, unsanitary eating facilities -- and your pleas for help constantly fall on deaf ears as far as Norfolk school officials are concerned, we sold our home of fifteen years and moved to Virginia Beach. I might add, however, before leaving Norfolk, the needed repairs were being made to the school my children attended after nine other mothers, led by myself, attended the Norfolk City Budget Hearing Thursday, November 12, 1964. What price glory? Thoroughly disgusted after an eight year struggle, my family threw in the towel and moved to the progressive city of Virginia Beach.

What a plum Norfolk City would acquire in being able to make use of the most progressive school system in the state of Virginia - Virginia Beach! A school bus system, lovely buildings, latest teaching methods, the list is endless!

Having lived in both cities, having been actively involved in PTA activities in both cities, I know I have come from the ridiculous to the sublime! Mrs. C.E. Hitecock Jr.

A Stitch in Time--

To the Editor:

Reference your question on the Sun Survey "Do you think Virginia Beach should become involved in Norfolk's busing problems, as suggested by Norfolk School Board Chairman Vincent J. Thomas?"

Under no circumstances should the city of Virginia Beach be involved in Norfolk's desegregation problems.

It is inconceivable that the Federal Government through the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, should demand such means as busing to meet desegregation now required.

True integration within the schools and throughout the land will only take place by a balance in the housing desires of the people. This then becomes a matter of choice within the peoples income. Expenditures of the tax dollar for excessive busing is not necessary.

Alford W. Wells

To the Editor:

ABSOLUTELY NOT -- To your question should we become involved in Norfolk's problem, we moved here 7-1/2 years ago from Norfolk's Azalea Garden Apartments and from Norfolk schools and their problems and teachers not interested in the children, or caring if they passed or not, even if you asked their advice on how to help. After the 4th report card period, one math teacher said, when asked what was the real problem, and how could I help, "I'm sorry, I recognize the name from my grade book, but not the student." That's not what I want for our 8-year-old son. Here he is getting an excellent education and the very best teachers, so let's keep the schools the way they are and of course we are 100% against busing. It is up to Norfolk to handle their own problems, we have enough of our own with dope to contend with.

On what can I say without pages and pages of what Hell our life was in Norfolk. Just NO! NO! NO! NO!

Keep our children here & let Norfolk keep her own. No to busing and No to getting involved and be proud of Va. Beach schools.

Mrs. Helen Francis

KEEP OFF THE GRASS

By W. A. Leavelle, Ph.D.

In 1945 at the end of the hostilities, WW II, the Communists controlled about 7 per cent of the world's people. Today, they have about 40 per cent of the peoples and 25 per cent of the land mass. All this gain was without the U.S.S.R. Red Army firing a single shot.

They are now working on our nation, from within, and others. Still people in responsible positions like Senator Fulbright stand up and claim that there is no Communist conspiracy! That makes me wish birth control could be retroactive!

Did you know that no nation has ever gone Communist in a free election? Since 1945 the big Communist weapons have been internal corruption and the threat of military conquest.

Much has been said about the Communist involvement in our labor movement. Did you know that under Communism, all labor unions are run by the government? In Communist countries a worker must work where he is told, at what he is told and for wages set by the government.

Many people believe the Communist movement has had considerable success in our educational system. Did you know that under Communism you can only go to school where the government tells you and they control not only what you study but what you must believe?

Under Communism you could not own a farm or a home or other property. All real estate in Communist countries belongs to the government, the state.

Since you don't need much money in a Communist country, they confiscate everything above a small amount of your bank account.

You wouldn't miss the money much because you would not be allowed to travel around the country much. You would be severely punished if you tried to start up a business.

Elections in Communist countries are inexpensive since only one party -- the Communist party -- is allowed to run. Since you can only vote "YES" you don't need a lot of campaign expenses.

Just in case you don't believe Senator Fulbright and the others who claim no Communist conspiracy exists, where would you look for a Communist in this country? Communists themselves say they can be found on almost any conceivable battle front for the human mind. A good place to look would be in your school, in your university, in your church and in your civic club.

This country is ripe for Communism. Oh, I know anyone that cries "COMMUNISM" now is considered a nut or a kook. Call me what you wish but I used to worry that my children might wind up as slaves to Communism but now I worry that I might suffer that fate myself.

Our nation was conceived, planned and built by people of great devotion to the cause of liberty. Does that sound corny? That devotion is declining rapidly. Millions of Americans make it quite clear that they are out for themselves alone. Country be damned. Do your own thing and there are no rights but my rights.

When I look back and see the films and books depicting valor, love of country and the strength of this great country in peace and war, it is hard to believe that we are the same people as those who have given so much and so magnificently in the past.

One has to wonder what happened to the spirit of colonialists who would be free at all cost. What became of those people who suffered the agony and pain of a civil war and emerged still one nation? Where did the Americans go who sparked the religious revivals in this country in the 19th and 20th centuries, and set this nation on a strong course toward God? Will our next day of infamy be from within rather than another Pearl Harbor?

We, as a people, are big talkers about peace but we tolerate among us thousands who are capable and willing to disturb the peace with complete disregard of the welfare and safety of those around them. One of our greatest national weaknesses is an excess of tolerance. Why must we tolerate those who would destroy us? Why?

What can you do? You are but one - right? Well, so were Joan of Arc, Patrick Henry and many others who faced those who would destroy them!

I SUGGEST TO YOU THAT WHEN FREEDOM IS AT STAKE, SILENCE IS NOT GOLDEN, IT IS YELLOW!

No Busing, Please

A flood hit the Virginia Beach Sun this week, a flood of public response.

It was all generated, of course, by last Thursday's Sun Survey question concerning the busing of Norfolk students to Virginia Beach.

A strong response was anticipated but what was received was far beyond the Sun's wildest expectations. The number of letters to the editor appearing on this page are but a small portion of the comments that came in.

Almost all of the clipped questionnaires were signed and carried strong statements. All were emphatically opposed to such a possibility.

One of the questionnaires was attached to a post card which had this notation: "Norfolk would just love to get the Beach in as big a mess with the schools as she is over the water situation. Any dealings with Norfolk would surely start trouble that the Beach does not have now."

It is apparent how the citizens in this city feel toward Norfolk's busing situation and it is healthy that they will speak out in protest.

Another matter that seems to be of concern to local residents is tackled this week. There is a growing unrest among those who live here year around about the lack of consideration toward the people who support the city and its merchants 12 months out of the year.

This is especially true of those who live in and near the Beach Borough but it also affects those living outside the resort who want to enjoy the city's greatest assets, the beaches and waterways.

The tourist dollar is vital to the city but the tax-payer is its life's blood.

Following are but a few of the remarks called to the attention of the Sun this week:

"I tried to take my family to the beach last weekend. I was run out of four parking places near Atlantic Avenue by homeowners who claimed the places were private. ... but weren't marked. I had to park four blocks away and drag six kids through the worse traffic you ever saw. My taxes don't help in the summer!"

"These merchants and restaurant owners at the Beach should have some consideration of the people who support them all year. The prices keep us away from the resort in the summer, yet we are the ones who keep them going the rest of the time. We're sure welcomed during the winter, but we're treated like so many cattle come summer."

"Now that so many of our private clubs have gone public, there's no where for the local residents to go for entertainment. There's no such thing anymore as a nice quiet evening of dining and dancing. Now you get stuck with crowds and a cover charge."

These are just a few of the comments that prompted this week's questions. Perhaps the Sun readers have some more.

Surf Low, Spirits High

Some 2,000 surfing fans turned out over the week-end for the Third Annual Regional Surfing Championships at Little Island Beach at Sandbridge. From good surf and spotty weather on Saturday, conditions turned to good weather and disappointing surf for the finals on Sunday. Judges delayed starting the finals for one hour hoping the surf would pick up, but it remained poor and kept scores low. Kim Hickman took the Men's Amateur and walked away with the Yamaha motorcycle donated by Wells Motorcycle Co. Other winners were Kim Nixon, Pro Overall; Corky Wilson, Men's Pro; Kim Nixon Jr., Men's Pro; Mike Charles, Boys Pro; Kathy Cole, Girl's Amateur; Mike Harsh, Boy's Amateur; and Carter Adams, Midget's Amateur. Proceeds went to the Girls Camp Fund.

Methodists Contribute To College

Virginia Wesleyan College received $76,524 for operating support from the Virginia Conference of the United Methodist Church during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1970. Operating expenditures for the year ending June 30 totaled $1,200,000.

Each of the Methodist-related colleges in the conference receives a certain percentage of the total amount contributed by each church to the Conference Education Fund. This is divided among Randolph-Macon College, Randolph-Macon Woman's College, Ferrum Junior College, Virginia Wesleyan, Randolph-Macon Academy, and the Campus Ministry program for State College and University campuses.

The annual operating support received from the conference goes toward faculty salaries, academic equipment, scholarship aid and library materials. The annual budget is supported by student fees, special grants and contributions from individuals and businesses in addition to the annual appropriation from the church.

Virginia Wesleyan received a check for $17,770 at the Virginia Annual Conference last month from the College Club Fund of the Virginia Conference of the United Methodist Church. Funds from this state-wide conference program go for capital projects. This amount is being used as part of the construction cost for Walter Clarke Gym Hall, a new dormitory now under construction at Virginia Wesleyan.

dividuals, businesses, civic and church organizations in supporting Virginia Wesleyan College annually for operating expenses. Wesleyan, as a private college, receives no state tax funds and depends on individuals, businesses, the Virginia Conference of the United Methodist Church, and student fees to meet the operating budget. The budget for the 1970-71 academic session is set at $1,600,000.

Funds received in the Friends program go for library books and materials, scholarship aid, faculty salaries and academic equipment. The steering committee is seeking 500 "Friends" for 1970.

Carbon Monoxide Blamed

The death of John L. Clemmons, 20, of Skowhegan, Maine, was attributed to carbon monoxide poisoning, according to a medical examiner's report.

A medical examiner's report indicated that Clemmons was asphyxiated after being overcome by heavy smoke which filled the trailer shortly after the fire began.

Investigative reports show that two neighboring residents on Swallow Drive, identified as Mrs. C.P. Durnill and Mrs. Beatrice Behr, apparently discovered the fire at about the same time and phoned the fire dispatcher.

Men of the Plaza and London Bridge Volunteer Fire Departments on arriving at the scene shortly after 1:30 a.m., fought the trailer engulfed in flames with fire and smoke pouring through the windows.

When the fire had been extinguished and firemen were able to enter the trailer, they found Clemmons body in the living room of the trailer in a crouching position next to the partition which separated the living room from the kitchen area.

Clemmons, 20, of Skowhegan, Maine, was alone in the trailer at the time. Albert Allison, a Navy enlisted man stationed with Clemmons at Oceana Naval Air Station, who shared the trailer had reportedly left the trailer several hours before the fire was discovered.

An investigation is continuing into the exact cause of the fire. However early reports indicate the fire began in the kitchen where a small gas range was located.

A Navy enlisted man died as fire engulfed this house trailer last Saturday morning in Cardinal Estates.

BADGES & BANQUET

By Les Lehigh

Reliable sources tell us a recent fishing trip into waters of the Atlantic Ocean didn't quite go the way Lt. A.R. Nobles and Justice of the Peace James Lotin, Jr., both of whom work out of the 3rd Police Precinct, had expected. We understand they were joined by a friend, who has not been identified, on their trip to a favorite "fishing spot" some distance off-shore. The friend, although he reportedly wasn't "feeling quite up to par" as a result of the weather and rough trip, according to our source managed to save the day by landing the only fish caught during the expedition.

Lt. E.G. Patton of the Beach Borough Fire Department became the subject of much ribbing from his fellow firemen last Saturday after working for nearly four hours in salvaging a cabin cruiser which ran aground on the south jetty at Rudee Inlet. When Patton returned to the station house and began describing the difficulties the men encountered while working under adverse conditions to

Case Reset Again

Paul J. Dolan is scheduled to return to Municipal Court next Wednesday on a number of charges resulting from a chase involving his 38-foot cabin cruiser, the Virginia Beach police boat and U.S. Coast Guard units along the Beach Borough shoreline June 23.

Dolan, 46, of Fitzhugh Avenue, Richmond, was found guilty July 1 by Judge P. B. White of two charges of reckless and negligent boat operation; a charge of disturbing the peace; cursing and abusing police officers; and resisting arrest, and was fined a total of $400 and costs and given a 30 days suspended jail sentence. Dolan was unable to appear in Court, and the charges were aired in his absence.

Shortly after rendering his verdict Judge White was informed of earlier proceedings which would have continued the case to a later date by defense attorney Edward T. (Red) Caton, II who requested the verdict be set aside and the case continued.

Judge White agreed to the motion and set July 15 as the date of rehearing the case. Judge White now, however, has agreed to a defense contention that having presided over the initial airing of the case he may be in a position of being prejudiced and has disqualified himself to rehear the case.

The case was rescheduled for next Wednesday and Juvenile Court Judge Thomas F. Betz, Jr., has been named to preside over the hearing.

Officials at the 5th U.S. Coast Guard District headquarters in Portsmouth, Wednesday said they have completed their investigation of Dolan having possibly violated provisions of the maritime section of the U.S. Code and forwarded their findings to U.S. Attorney Roger Williams in Norfolk, as grounds for the possible filing of federal charges against Dolan.

A spokesman in Williams' office Wednesday said these findings are now being reviewed and a decision on behalf of the federal government should be made in the near future.

Beach Borough firemen bring their amphibious DUKW alongside disabled cabin cruiser and make emergency repairs to keep craft from sinking in Rudee Inlet channel.

Skipper Rescued from Jetty

The skipper of a 38 foot fishing boat escaped serious injury last Saturday morning when the cabin cruiser was swept onto the man-made jetty at Rudee Inlet.

Weldon W. Hurst of Falcon Avenue, said he was entering the Rudee Inlet channel when the boat, the "Miss Alma II", was thrown onto the rocks.

Hurst said, "I was coming in and I had to run slow in low water. The sea caught me on the stern, spun me around and threw me into the rocks."

Hurst indicated he was making his way to the recently constructed marina at Rudee Inlet to pick up some friends for a day of fishing when the accident occurred about 5:30 a.m. He said he had left Cobb's Marina in Norfolk, where the boat is normally docked, earlier that morning.

Shortly after the accident men of the Beach Borough Fire Department went to the scene with their DUKW and found the cabin cruiser midway between the south jetty and Croatan Beach taking on water through a hole in the boat's bow just below the water line, which had resulted from the collision with the jetty.

Portable pumps were placed on board the cabin cruiser for use in keeping the boat afloat as the firemen placed a temporary patch over the hole in the bow to prevent additional water from pouring into the boat's hull.

A work barge from the Virginia Beach Erosion Commission arrived at the scene shortly thereafter to lend assistance, and took the disabled cabin cruiser into tow to the Commission's work dock at the foot of Mediterranean Avenue.

Beach Borough firemen, through combined use of their DUKW and the Erosion Commission barge, managed to tow the cabin cruiser to shallow water and secure it by lines to the dock and set up an additional pump to keep the boat afloat until more permanent repairs could be made to the craft's hull. More than four hours work were involved from the time of the accident until the "Miss Alma II" was safely secured at temporary mooring.

82 pounds later...

Weight watching is her way of life

By CAROLYN McALLEN

Arlene Jarashow went on her first diet when she was five years old.

But it wasn't until two years ago that she successfully, and permanently shed her extra pounds.

"I wouldn't be alive today if it wasn't for Weight Watchers," Mrs. Jarashow said candidly. After surgery several years ago, complications developed because of her weight. "I came home, convalesced and got fatter."

Then her doctor literally scared her into losing weight. She had uncontrollable high blood pressure and he feared she would have a stroke.

"I went home and drank four cans of liquid diet a day and coffee for a week. When I went back to the doctor, I had gained two more pounds.

"So I went to Weight Watchers. A group was just forming -- there were five of us. I had the negative attitude that 'for you it worked, for me, never.' I went anyway."

The result was that in a year she was 80 pounds lighter -- from 224 to 144. She's now down to 142. She's tall, and now wears a size 12 dress -- a definite change from her former size 44 with the seams let out.

Mrs. Jarashow, who lives in Virginia Beach, and her husband operate the Jaye Electrolysis Studio in the Blyer B-liding. Several years ago while she was in her uniform she went to a new place to get her hair set. "I took a maternity smock to put on to keep my dress clean. Then the operator asked me when the baby was due. I wasn't even pregnant!"

However, she does have four children, 11, 9, 6 and 3 years old. The last was born before she lost weight. "A lot of people didn't even know I was pregnant until after the baby was born."

Although her husband is thin, Mrs. Jarashow said her weight loss has affected him too. "He gets me to buy clothes now. And he dresses better. He's much more stylish. He's even class for those who have reached their desired weight and want to keep it will start July 22 at 7:30 a.m. "It never ends; it's a vicious circle," she admitted. "But the maintenance program teaches them to handle ice cream every day if they want it or a drink every day."

Art Weiner, another ex-fatty has the Weight Watchers fran-

Mrs. Nideath plans to be in Virginia Beach in September when Weight Watchers have their state meeting at the Civic Center. Besides talking to the group, she will present awards to those who have lost more than 100 pounds.

"Nobody likes to be laughed at," Mrs. Jarashow said. "People come for so many reasons. No visitors or guests are allowed. The big thing is coming in and seeing others who started the program before or after they did and how they have done."

"One woman came but she admitted that she hadn't wanted to. Her husband had forced her to sign up -- threatened to divorce her if she didn't." She didn't finish, though," Mrs. Jarashow added.

Mrs. Jarashow said that some people that come to Weight Watchers are disappointed because no "sure cure" is offered. She said that the ex-heavyweights simply tell how they lost weight and offer the same diet plan to the new ones. "The rest is up to them."

The diet is a sound one with an emphasis on protein and low calorie vegetables. They even have a Weight Watchers cookbook. The diet includes fish five times a week and liver once. "That's very important," said Mrs. Jarashow. "I hate it," she admitted, "but I like it better than a size 44 dress!"

Mrs. Jarashow opens many of the new classes herself telling her own experiences. Now

Two attend convention

The Virginia Beach Chapter of NSA has a member among the expected attendance of 1,600 at the 25th Annual International Convention of The National Secretaries Association (International) being held in New York at the Americana Hotel, July 14-18. The only previous NSA convention in New York was in 1954.

Mrs. Gladys White, secretary to John L. Roper, 2nd and Margaret Griffin of Norfolk Shipbuilding and Drydock Corporation, who has served the chapter in the office of President, is the voting Delegate.

"Learning is the Eye of the Mind," a quotation from Thomas Draxe, is the theme of the convention, to be presided over by Miss Bertha J. Stronach, CPS, NSA International President, secretary and senior staff assistant to the Manager of Educational Marketing Program, IBM, New York.

started wearing cologne."

Of her own reaction to the weight loss she said, "I sit around feeling my bones. You have to learn to walk again. It's a whole new balance without that 80 pounds."

Mrs. Jarashow is now area coordinator for Weight Watchers for Southeast Virginia. That keeps her on the go much of the time. She's in Norfolk on Mondays, Chesapeake on Tuesday, and Portsmouth Tuesday night, Norfolk on Wednesday Virginia Beach on Thursday and Norfolk on Friday.

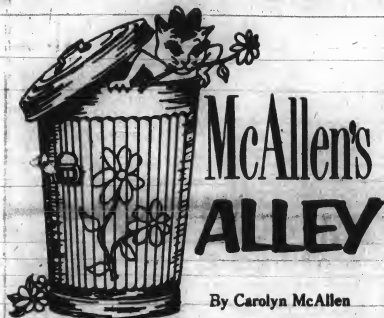

Weight watchers in Virginia Beach have recently moved into the Princess Theatre building. The present schedule of classes is Monday at 7:30 p.m., Wednesday at 11 a.m., Thursday at 10 a.m. and 7 p.m. with plans for more. She hopes to start a youth group on Saturdays.

In addition a maintenance chise in Virginia. Weight Watchers is a business, but those involved are very much concerned with helping others. They've all been there themselves.

Weight Watchers was begun by Jean Nideath who, upon failing to lose weight any other way, began meeting with overweight friends to discuss their dieting problems. The group became so large that they moved outside her home into rented space above a theatre. Now it is an international organization.

When rented space was required, Mrs. Nideath was advised to begin charging for the meetings to pay the rent. Not knowing how much to charge, she checked with the theatre and found that tickets were $2, so that was and still is the charge per weekly meeting, plus $3 for registration at the first meeting.

Dear Holly Hayfield

Dear Holly Hayfield, I am 36 and unmarried. I really can't understand it. Neither can any of my female friends. I'll admit I'm a little overweight (210 pounds), but my personality more than makes up for it. Although my ears stick out, I keep them covered with my hair. My friends have told me I should be more careful how I dress, but female shoes are comfortable, and I like mini skirts -- even if they ARE size 20. Do you think a new wardrobe would help me catch a man?

Eager

Dear Eager, Try mouthwash.

Dear Holly Hayfield, My mother wants me to cut my hair. I'm a boy 17 and she threatens to throw me out of the house if I don't do something about my hair. I like it long. It's only halfway down to my waist, and I wash it at least once a month -- the same time I take a bath.

Groovy

Dear Groovy, Have you thought about a ponytail?

Dear Holly Hayfield, My parents expect me to be a slave. Mother won't even make up my bed. And she wants me to wash the dishes every night. After all, I'm 15 and I need some time for myself. Not only that I have to pick up my clothes. Why this morning I even had to iron a blouse to wear. Isn't this inconsiderate? After all, I didn't ask to be born.

Overworked

Dear Overworked, Write again in ten years when you have a couple of children of your own.

Dear Holly Hayfield, My wife is demanding equal rights for women. I don't mind her going to all those meetings and marching in picket lines, but I do wish she would get home in time to fix something besides frozen TV dinners once in a while. What can I do?

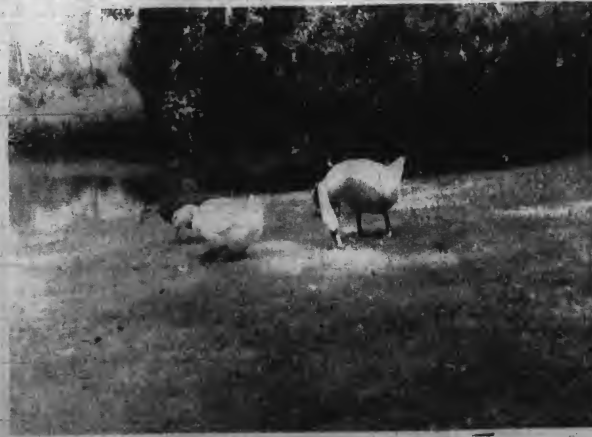

Hungry

Dear Hungry, Let your wife change the next flat tire or carry out the garbage cans a few times. Suggest that she mow the lawn. If she wants the same rights as men let her try for a while. Don't open doors for her. Let her stand up on buses. I'll bet you get fed as soon as she gets fed up.

Dear Holly Hayfield, My husband likes animals. We have three dogs, two cats, five hamsters (maybe more by now), a rabbit, two turtles, and tropical fish. I don't mind taking care of them and feeding them, but I'm tired of sleeping with them -- all but the fish that is. How can I get my bed back?

Flea Bitten

Dear Flea Bitten, Buy a flea collar and a tent. Then turn the house over to the menagerie and you can sleep in the tent. Your husband should get the hint in a few days. If not, you could always open a pet shop.

TAME DUCKS live, and beg for food, around the two ponds in DeWeese's front yard.

BEFORE

Last week Mrs. Jarashow celebrated her first anniversary of having lost 80 pounds.

This is one of the rooms in DeWeese's studio and contains a day bed covered in fake leopard and brass and leather chairs. On the glass top table are antique ink wells in crystal eggs along with crystal decorations. Besides books, the shelves contain old vases and wooden boxes. Through the doorway can be seen a bed with leather bedspread.

'Good taste never changes'

Sloan De Weese of Sloan DeWeese Interiors, Inc. describes his apartment as being "like the barefooted cobbler's son." He explained that it is not overly decorated.

He says he does not have time to decorate the apartment which is on the second floor of his shop on Laskin Road. Although just off one of the busiest thoroughfares in Virginia, the setting is peaceful, a Williamsburg green house set back under shade trees and overlooking two duck-filled ponds. The ducks, incidentally, are both domestic and Mallards, but all come running to be fed.

DeWeese has had his business there for almost four years.

He says he personally "leans toward the 18th century, but I prefer old to antique pieces. I think they are more livable. But I can work with modern pieces."

DeWeese says he is rarely given a free hand in decorating. "Usually we have a consultation and decide what to renovate and what to do. I like to do homes around people and not surround them with strange things they're not accustomed to."

He says he finds it more interesting to take what the people have and update and color-scheme it to coordinate.

Although he works mostly in residences, he also does some private offices, but not commercial ventures.

Occasionally, DeWeese said, he is in complete disagreement with what his customers want "but if they know what they wanted they wouldn't be here."

"Good taste never changes," DeWeese, a member of the American Institute of Interior Designers, commented. "Why I try not to follow fashion much but try to update tastes."

Plan and plant for fall

(Editor's note: Here is another in the series on home horticulture by Wesley P. Jenkins, extension horticulturist at Virginia Tech.)

To secure the maximum of pleasure and value from your vegetable garden, you should continue planting during the summer. This will provide crops to harvest during the fall, and until cold weather kills even your hardest plants.

Planning the fall garden is easy. All you need to do is determine the number of days required for your vegetables to mature after they are planted. You can get this information from a seed catalog, or from VPI Publication 44, "Vegetable Gardening in Virginia," which you can secure from the extension agent in your county.

Then make your plantings far enough ahead of the average fall frost date to allow the vegetables to mature before they are killed by cold. If you don't know the usual first frost date in your area, the extension agent in your county can give you this information.

As an example, most snap bean varieties require about 54 days from planting to maturity. Therefore, if your first frost date is usually during the first week in October, you may plant snap beans as late as about the first week in August.

Or, consider early ripening sweet corn which requires about 66 days. In the early October frost areas you may plant early corn as late as about the last week in July and still secure a crop. If the first fall frost in your area is later than the first week in October, you can plant proportionately later.

Some of the hardy, cool season crops will have better quality when they mature in the fall, than during hot summer weather. Also, they will continue to grow during the warm autumn weather which will follow the first frost which will kill tender vegetables.

In most cases the early maturing varieties of vegetables should be selected for the fall garden. These may be planted after your early summer varieties have been harvested, and still be ready to pick before freezing weather.

Broccoli, cabbage and collards should be planted about ten weeks before the expected first frost.

Other excellent fall vegetables which should be planted about ten weeks before the expected first frost.

Other excellent fall vegetables which should be planted about eight weeks before the frost date are beets, cauliflower, chard, kale, kohlrabi, peas and turnips. In the warmer sections of Virginia with mild winter temperatures these crops may be planted still later.

As we get toward the end of the summer, lettuce and spinach may be planted about six weeks before frost date, and mustard and radish about two weeks later. With all these vegetables to select from, you can harvest helpful crops until freezing weather kills even your hardy plants.

The most serious problem you may have in connection with your fall garden is the germination of seeds in dry soil. To eliminate this difficulty, wet the ground thoroughly the day before you plan to plant.

Then, after you have planted your seeds and covered them with soil in the usual way, spread a six-inch band of sawdust or shredded peat moss, one-half inch thick along the row. This will help conserve soil moisture and prevent crusting of the soil.

If the weather remains dry, use a sprinkling can or hose with a fine spray nozzle to apply water along the row. Keep the soil moist for a week and most of your seeds should germinate.

Potato is popular by any name

The potato is a food staple of many lands. It is known in France as the "apple of the earth." Its American name is derived from the word, "batata," the name of the native South American member of this large and diverse tuber family. Sometimes we call it by the name of the people who depend so much on its honest nourishment and it is dubbed, "Irish" and out in the West, it is familiarly known as the "spud". But whatever its name, the potato is highly regarded everywhere because it is perhaps the most versatile as well as the most nutritious of vegetables.

One of the most popular of the countless dishes in which is starred is the potato salad. Wherever a buffet table is spread, wherever a picnic lunch is packed, there the potato salad in one of its variations, is found.

The chef who first tossed cubes of cooked potatoes with mayonnaise and a few choice vegetables and seasonings, had a well tuned palate and he charted a royal road to good eating. Since his day, a seemingly endless number of variations on this theme have made their appearance and they keep coming!

Today's Garden Potato Salad is especially good for luncheon or supper tables and for a buffet spread. A slightly different combination of vegetables and seasonings is used and it is served with generous garnishes from the garden.

GARDEN POTATO SALAD

- 2-1/2 lbs. (7 to 8 medium) potatoes
- 1 cup real mayonnaise
- 2 Tbsp. milk
- 2 tsp. salt
- 2 tsp. celery seed
- 1/4 tsp. pepper
- 1 cup sliced radish
- 1-1/2 cups diced cucumber
- 1/2 cup silvered green pepper
- 1/4 cup chopped chives
- Hard cooked eggs, cut in eighths
- Western iceberg lettuce, or other greens

Cook potatoes in boiling water until tender; drain. Peel and slice or dice while warm. Mix together mayonnaise, milk, salt, celery seed and pepper. Toss potatoes lightly with dressing while warm. Place in refrigerator until cold; then mix in radish, cucumber, green pepper and chives, reserving some of the vegetables to garnish top. Chill. Serve with hard cooked eggs and lettuce. Makes 8 servings.

CAESAR SALAD

- 1 small clove garlic,
- 3/4 cup corn oil
- 1 egg

Gray cloth is cotton cloth in a rough, unfinished state.

IT'S SALAD TIME and potato salad stars on buffet tables.

- 4 slices white bread, crusts removed
- 1 head iceberg lettuce
- 1 head romaine lettuce
- 1/2 tsp. salt
- 1 tsp. pepper
- 1/4 cup lemon juice
- 1 tsp. Worcestershire sauce
- 2/3 cup grated Parmesan cheese
- 1 (2-oz.) can anchovy filets, drained and chopped

Add garlic to corn oil. Let stand several hours. Place egg in very hot tap water about 20 minutes or until warm. Meanwhile cut bread into cubes. Heat 1/4 cup garlic oil mixture in skillet over medium heat. Saute bread cubes until golden brown. Drain on absorbent paper. Tear chilled crisp lettuce into bite size pieces. Place in large salad bowl. Add salt, pepper and remaining garlic oil mixture. Toss gently, until greens are coated. Break egg into salad. Add lemon juice, Worcestershire sauce, cheese and anchovies. Toss. Sprinkle with bread cubes. Serve immediately. Makes about 8 servings. Note: 1/2 cup crumbled blue cheese may be used in place of parmesan.

Hauser-Lee wedding

Miss Karen Jean Hauser became the bride of Keith Robert Lee in a ceremony at 3 p.m. Sunday, July 12 at Nimmo United Methodist Church with the Rev. Emory S. Ellmore officiating.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Marvin F. Smith, Sr. of Chesapeake and Herbert B. Hauser, Sr.

The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert E. Lee of Princess Anne Road.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a street length dress with a short veil. Mrs. Elmer E. McCauley of Virginia Beach was her sister's matron of honor.

The bridegroom's father was best man, and Herbert B. Hauser Jr., brother of the bride, was groomsmen.

Following a reception at the home of the bridegroom, the couple left on a short wedding trip in Virginia. They will live in Virginia Beach.

Use ice cream as main dish

Ice cream as a main dish?

Why not? Ice cream is nutritious and especially refreshing on a hot summer day.

Home economists at Meadow Gold Dairies suggest this summer party plate, a simpler version of which can be weekly luncheon treat.

Center a plate with a pineapple ring, surrounding it with lettuce leaves. In the outer arrange slices or balls of cantaloupe, watermelon, and strawberries, oranges and bananas. After all fruit is arranged, place a generous scoop of pineapple sherbert on the pineapple ring. Serve immediately with raisin toast and poppy seed dressing.

WINE AND TONIC

For warm afternoons and evenings, try this sparkling summer drink. Fill a tall glass with ice. Mix half-and-half your favorite GREAT WESTERN Wine (we suggest Solera Sherry or Port) and lemon water. Squeeze lime or lime.

Be a 'do-it-yourself' Peasant

PEASANT LOOK--Cotton duck in a lively patchwork print interprets summer's peasant look. The dirndl skirt is topped by a full-sleeved blouse of white cotton broadcloth. The outfit costs less than $12 to make. Fabrics and Simplicity Pattern 8699 available at Singer Stores.

This is the summer when fashionable girls are doing their best to look like peasants.

And sewing-minded fashionables can create their own "poor" looks at peasant prices, according to the National Cotton Council.

Pattern styles take note of the trend with an abundant offering of dirndl skirts, shawls, and country-boy pants outfits.

Ideal fabric for stitching up these new styles is cotton duck. Decked out in new patch-work prints in blue jean colors, cotton duck makes your sewing projects both prettier and easier. A firm-bodied fabric long noted for washability, it says put under the needle and cuts with a clean crisp edge.

In handling patchwork prints, sewing experts say to follow the rules for cutting and matching plaids. Make sure that notches of corresponding pattern pieces are placed on the same patch-work shape.

If you're planning to make pants, select your pattern size by your hip measurements. You'll have a better fit if you do.

Follow these tips and you can look prettily "poor" and smart this summer in your own sewing creations.

COUNTRY-BOY JEANS--A sew-it-yourself fashion that costs less than $7 to make is this pants outfit of "denim blue" cotton duck. Red, white, and blue cotton braid and tassels trim the cropped top. Trim, fabric, and Simplicity Pattern 8794 are all at Singer stores where fabrics are sold.

Air Force believes in women

We are now going through the new wave of women's liberation movements. Some organizations seem to bend to the extreme, while others maintain a moderate and well balanced approach to the important issues. One of the major issues brought up by the liberation groups is the absence of equal job opportunities for women. They contend that women simply do not have the opportunity to advance as readily as their male counterparts. There is, however, a career for women with equal opportunities which has been in existence much longer than the modern women's liberation movement.

According to T/Sgt. Carroll Spears, the local Air Force Recruiter of the Virginia Beach Recruiting Office, the Women's Air Force offers equal opportunity to women. If an eligible female is at least a high school graduate, the WAF will answer her needs of equal opportunity and will offer her a competitive career that will allow her to advance along with, or even ahead of, her male counterparts, depending on her initiative and ability. The various positions open to young women between the ages of 18 thru 26 include: X-Ray technician, stenography, communications center specialists, air traffic control operators, information specialists, data processing, clerical procedures, and numerous others.

To qualify for an officer's position, the ages are 20 1/2 thru 29 1/2, with a minimum educational requirement of a baccalaureate degree.

Sgt. Spears added that "a woman may marry at any time after she has completed her basic training and continue to remain in service. If a WAF marries a serviceman, they are usually assigned to the same base. The length of the initial enlistment in the WAF is four years, and she can retire after 20 years of service."

The Air Force has often been referred to as having the world's largest campus, and it is a wonderful opportunity for young women to continue their education, with the majority of the cost being absorbed by the Air Force.

At present there are approximately 8,000 members of the Women's Air Force, and an increasing number of young women are joining the ranks of the WAF to attain the equal opportunity status they are seeking. As far as the Air Force is concerned, the women were liberated many years ago.

Plan before spending 2nd family paycheck

Is this the time for the independent woman? It's a start-like, but pertinent question when you consider the versatility of the contemporary woman. Today, she can manage a household, play the roles of wife and mother, and carry on a full or part-time career outside the home.

Each year, more and more women are flooding back to the working world. There are more than 26 million employed females, of whom more than 50 percent are married. Business and industry have welcomed them, but the girls may pay a high price for working. Slighted husbands, day-care for the children, and extra help to do the daily household chores are only three of the problems they may face. The advantages and disadvantages of a double income are high on the controversy list, so the pros and cons being a working wife must be carefully and logically thought out.

The majority who continue working after marriage, or who go back to work, do so for three reasons: to help the family budget; to earn extra money for special purchases; or just for the satisfaction of doing something other than housework.

Considering contemporary life, its pace and the rising cost of living, it often takes two regular incomes to sustain the American standard of living. Even if a double income is not needed, many married women with grown children want to find something else to do with their time. A full or part-time job may be the perfect answer.

Beyond the dilemma of what to do with the younger children and how to get the housework done, the working wife will have to convince her husband that her added paycheck will be a benefit, not a detriment. Many husbands adamantly refuse to allow their wives to work, believing that a woman's place is in the home. Some men are slighted and feel that they have lost their place as the breadwinner for the family. But, just as it is rare to find a family which can live comfortably on one paycheck, it is just as rare to find a woman today who is totally home-oriented. Most women today are better educated than their mothers and grandmothers, and few are content to stay home and play the role of a domestic.

One of the best ways to convince a growling husband is the use to which the extra income would be put. A second paycheck is valuable only when it contributes to the family as a whole. The working wife's paycheck can help pay for a college education, a second car, unexpected emergencies and so forth. A second paycheck is probably useful when it helps build for a more secure and comfortable future. The advice of a trained financial planner of The Travelers Companies can show the families involved how to make use of this money. There is much to be learned from The Travelers financial planner about ways to make your money work as hard as you do. Too often, the extra income is splurged away. It is the wise working woman who plans ahead for the best use of this money.

Environment concern dates back

Our concern for an attractive, healthful environment is not new. During the long history of man on earth, we find repeated evidence of the desire for beautiful surroundings.

The development of the Hanging Gardens of Babylon over 2500 years ago is a fine example. As the story is recorded, the wife of King Nebuchadnezzar was very unhappy because of the unattractive conditions around the palace. She missed the hills of her native land. So, to dry the sweet woman's tears, the King's men constructed the famous gardens.

A more contemporary situation may be cited which occurred in the Philadelphia area. The garden writer, Mrs. Louise Bush Brown became quite disturbed about the blighted, depressed condition near her home. She started a garden program to encourage the planting of flowers and other plants.

As a result of this campaign, residents improved their properties and acquired a concerned interest in horticulture. Small parks were created in vacant lots which had previously been filled with unsightly weeds. Her enthusiasm was contagious and produced a more liveable and enriched environment.

Plants are the great environmental purifiers. They absorb carbon dioxide which is essential for the synthesis of carbohydrate foods, but is of little direct value for us. In the process, plants give off oxygen which is necessary for human life.

Trees are particularly important in air purification. Therefore, plant more trees. They will beautify your landscape and help provide a cleaner environment in which to live.

Summertime and the fishing is easy -- even for motorists who use the Chesapeake Bay Bridge-Tunnel in their north-south travels.

Snack Stop May Be Fish Fry

When motorists using the Chesapeake Bay Bridge-Tunnel stop for a snack, the snack may turn out to be a "fish fry" -- if the motorist is a fisherman and lucky.

The Chesapeake Bay Bridge-Tunnel which spans the wide mouth of the Bay where it joins the Atlantic Ocean is the only modern highway in the world that offers motorists "deep sea" fishing more than three and a half miles offshore. These waters have long been known as among the best fishing grounds in North America. But, since the Bridge-Tunnel was completed in 1964, the fish seem to have increased both in size and numbers.

To take advantage of the Bay's great fishing, which formerly was available only to boat-based fishermen, Bridge-Tunnel authorities added a 625-foot-long fishing pier to one of the structure's man-made islands shortly after the facility was opened. There is no charge to use the fishing pier; the fisherman, of course, gets to keep all the fish he catches, and he can even rent tackle if necessary.

Sea Gull Pier is 25 feet above waters that are 35 to 40 feet deep. Black seabass, flounder, sea trout, Norfolk spots, pogies, blues and weaks are some of the fish that have been caught from the pier. Record catch is 85 bluefish landed in one night by a two-man team. The largest fish ever caught from the pier, and one of the largest ever taken in those waters, was a 44-pound red drum channel bass.

Other facilities on Sea Gull Island include an attractive gift shop, a pleasant seaside cafe featuring truly "ocean fresh" seafood, and a scenic point where non-fishermen can watch the soaring gulls and passing ships. Parking is free.

The Bridge-Tunnel cuts more than an hour and a half of driving time between Virginia Beach and Wilmington, Delaware, and it offers travelers from the North easy access to Virginia's historic triangle--Jamestown, Williamsburg and Yorktown. Not only is the route using the fabulous crossing a few miles shorter than alternative roads, but it also bypasses areas of high traffic and population density. Driving the Bridge-Tunnel's 17.6 miles from Cape Charles to Virginia Beach takes just 23 minutes, shore to shore. The ferry which it replaced took an average of two hours, not counting the waiting time which varied from minutes to hours, depending on the season of the year.

Census To Check Employment

The Bureau of the Census will conduct a survey of employment and unemployment in this area during the week of July 19, Joseph R. Norwood, Director of the Bureau's regional office in Charlotte announced today.

The households to be interviewed here are part of a scientifically designed sample that is representative of the entire U.S. population. The employment and unemployment statistics are collected monthly by the Bureau for the U.S. Department of Labor to provide a continuing measure of the economic health of the Nation as a whole and of its major regions. Questions on employment similar to those in the sample survey were asked of the entire population in the 1970 decennial census, now being compiled. Bureau officials point out, however, that the monthly surveys are essential as the source of current employment data.

Facts supplied by individuals participating in the survey are kept confidential and the results are used only to compile statistical results. The law safeguarding the privacy of the individual applies to all information collected by the Census Bureau.

The interviewer who will visit households in this area included in the sample survey is Mrs. Audrey L. Hayden of Windy Ridge Point.

Whys Of Failures Alarm School Board

Q: I've heard that people born under the same sign should not marry. My husband and I are both Capricorns but we are complete opposites. Unsigned

A: The idea that two people born under the same sign should not marry is an incorrect one. There is no rule that two Capricorns will be happily married or that they will not be happy. This type of generalization is the thing which has brought astrology to the sad state in which it now finds itself.

The difference between you can be seen quite clearly. You have the sign of Gemini rising while he has Leo rising. Leo has a great deal more feeling and emotional expression than Gemini which is concerned with ideas. Leo is also a fixed sign while Gemini is a movable sign. On the basis of this it can be seen that you would be far more inclined to be active and that you would be involved in a variety of ideas while your husband would have deeper feelings and would tend to stay involved in the things which interest him.

There is a great deal of compatibility in the two charts. You have Mars in Scorpio while he has Venus there. This means that while you can have some very good spats from time to time your basic attraction is very strong. Mars and Venus in Scorpio is a very healthy sex force which binds two people together. This is an essential factor in a happy marriage. If the sex attraction is strong, the problems such as the mortgage and the grocery bill can be met without too much difficulty but if the sex attraction is weak the marriage can go on the rocks the first time the sledding becomes a little rough.

I doubt that there is as much difference between you as you indicate. It would seem that the differences are more surface than insular.

Q: I have been working for the same company for four years and while I make a good salary I am not happy. What type work am I best suited for, P.W.

A: Since you did not state the type work you are doing now I can not tell whether you are suited for it or not.

It is quite apparent that what you are best suited for is any work which gives you the opportunity to move about and mix with people. Aquarius is a sign which can not be restricted to an office or filing room with too much success. It would seem that you could do well in any type of sales work, especially if it involved calling on customers where public relationships or personal contact would pay off. If your background is sufficient you could be extremely successful selling something in the electronics field. This could involve computers, calculators etc. Educational aids is another field which holds promise for you. In about sixteen months Venus (money planet) will conjunct Mercury in the area of the horoscope dealing with the career. You will then almost surely find the successful career that you are seeking.

Q: After nine years of marriage my husband left me for another woman. Is it possible that my husband will grow up? What are the chances of my living a productive life raising our two children? E.M.S.

A: You indicated that Saturn was affecting your sign. I assume you think your sun sign is Taurus since Saturn is now transiting Taurus. This is not the case however since your sun at birth is in the first degree of Gemini.

I do not agree with the psychiatrist who stated that your husband is immature. In fact I doubt that the psychiatrist has seen your husband more than a few times if that many. Any competent astrologer could have told you years ago that the possibility of a break-up was inevitable, but of course who would listen to an astrologer?

Your husband is not as immature a child as you may think. He going through a very powerful aspect which anyone would respond to. His Mars has moved to a conjunction with the planet Venus. Since Venus is the love nature and Mars is a strong driving force in our nature, this almost had to happen.

There are other testimonies which indicate that this is not a frivolous affair to him.

It always angers me when I am asked by someone if their husband (or wife) will return to them. I don't want to seem cruel but I can not understand why anyone would want someone who has rejected them for another. Surely the sting of rejection can not be that strong.

What are your chances of living a productive life? Perfect! Your biggest problem, which affected your marriage I'm sure, will be learning to express your inner nature and permitting the real you to emerge. You get depressed far too easily and tend to look at the gloomy side of life. This can become difficult for others since your Arles moons going to make you very demanding at times.

What you will need to do is begin to re-examine yourself, let go of the past and begin to look ahead. I can assure that within a year you will again respond to one of the arrows from Cupid's bow. If you have not made some inquiries into your nature you can face the same thing again in a few years however.

Women have been raising children alone for many years and while it is certainly not an ideal situation I know many who have done it quite successfully and happily I might add.

One of the tragedies of a situation like this is the guilt and bitterness generated by the separation. I feel that this is completely unnecessary. Life is a movement. Nothing is static. Love is the thing that is important—not necessarily marriage. When we know what it means to love we will understand that it has been a privilege to love for a while, and we will stop trying to capture it in a bottle.

Q: Please tell me if I should make the changes I am contemplating? M.E.Y.

A: Astrology does not lend itself well to guessing games. It would have been much better if you had told me the changes you are planning.

It would seem that the question relates to a matter of Amour. Venus, the planet of love, has moved into good relationship to its natal place. This often produces a strong attraction to the opposite sex.

There is a strong indication that this situation has existed over a period of a couple of years and that there has been considerable confusion involved. You have certainly acted irrationally at times and at times it has been impossible to make up your mind. This can be very exciting and stimulating but it often leaves one unstrung.

The period of uncertainty seems to have passed and I suspect you are planning marriage. My opinion is that there is some rough weather ahead but all systems are go.

Would the lady whose child was born August 21, 1966 please contact Mrs. Phillips at the Sun.

Group Buys White Heron, Plans New City Developments

A group of Virginia Beach businessmen this week purchased the White Heron Motel on Laskin Road and are reportedly developing other major commercial complexes throughout the city.

The White Heron property was purchased by the newly formed Virginia Beach Enterprises, Inc. for about $650,000 from the Pine Harbor Corp., a Richmond-based group of J.C. Wheat Co. investors.

Virginia Beach Enterprises, composed of 120 leading businessmen in the city, is also developing a Mid-City Plaza on Virginia Beach Boulevard between Beach Ford and RK Chevrolet, a new telephone office facility and a bank building in Kempville.

The first building in the Mid-City Plaza is presently under construction and reportedly will house the telephone operation, although confirmation of the project could not be obtained by press time Wednesday. Nor were there any details available on the new bank in Kempville or what other businesses will locate in the new plaza.

Virginia Beach Enterprises, Inc. is headed by Rae Adams, president, Frank Malbon, board chairman, and directors Edward T. Caton III, Dr. Joe H. Burt and Dr. Howard Kahn. All stockholders share in the group so that there is no controlling interest.

The new owners took control of the White Heron this week and Adams said that he expects the management to soon be reorganized.

The property fronts 1,000 feet on Laskin Road and presently includes the motel, a marina, the Bay Harbor Club, an Olympic size swimming pool and tennis courts.

Under the new management the complex will be developed strictly as a public facility, slanted more toward the businessman than the tourist, Adams said.

The Bay Harbor Club has been a private membership club, supported by 327 members, since it was opened about seven years ago. It will operate on this basis through August but will open to the public September 1.

Adams said he expects the Bay Harbor will be completely refurbished and operate as a supper club under a lease arrangement.

Consultants are presently making a study of the marina, he said, and these facilities will be developed and improved according to the suggestions in their completed report.

The new management will terminate the restaurant arrangement that now exists with the Bay Harbor Club and will concentrate on building up the dining facilities in the motel, Adams said.

It is also expected that meeting rooms will be incorporated in the new plans to attract small conventions and business groups.

The swimming pool and tennis courts are located on about 400 feet at the east end of the property, fronting on a dredged channel to Lynnhaven Bay, which Adams said is "not being utilized to its fullest."

There are no definite plans for this portion of the property as of now, he said, but "we expect to include it in the overall development of the complex."

Top International Players Here For Tennis Tournament

The Chamber of Commerce Thursday disclosed the names of 12 international tennis players, eight of whom will be participating in the 1970 Virginia Beach International Tennis Tournament August 28-30.

Al Maltheis, the chamber's executive secretary said the tournament could be the start of something big in the area for tennis, and that it's possible the city could become the tennis center of the East Coast if the tournament is successful.

Bill Dennis, a players' representative for the International Tennis Players Association, said that Brian Fairlie, Jaime Fillet, Ilie Nastase, Ion Tiriac, Bob Carmichael, Gerald Battrick, Tomas Koch, Premjit Lal, Peter Curtis, Ray Ruffels, Ingo Buding and Pancho Guzman are under consideration for the tournament.

He said that the players will be participating in another tournament in Orange, New Jersey through August 29 but that of the 32 players on the circuit, only six will ultimately participate in that tournament.

Dennis emphasized the fact that the tournament down here would not be played by rejects, but that it was possible for only six of the 32 potential entrants in the Orange tournament to play it out.

Tickets for the affair, to be held at the Virginia Beach Junior High School, will be $5 for a general admission series ticket, allowing the spectator to see all three day's matches and $150 for a box containing six seats. Tickets are available through the Chamber office, Miller and Rhoads stores and at local tennis clubs.

The picturesque White Heron Motel-Bay Harbor Club complex changed hands this week.

Little Theatre To Seek Help

The president of the Virginia Beach Little Theatre asked City Council Monday for a one-time contribution of $15,500 to allow initial construction of a 180-seat theatre at 24th Street and Barberton Drive.

Appearing before an informal Council session, James T. English said the theatre was in a critical stage of its existence because it has gone a complete season without a permanent home.

He said that in the last year that the theatre was located in the old Roland Theatre in Eden Alley off 17th Street, it experienced a drop in ticket sales because "the people don't want to go down there."

At that point, the decision was made to build a permanent home for the little theatre. "Besides that, our lease ran out," he said.

English said that the new theatre site is located in the area that was considered for a possible cultural center which would house the civic orchestra, the art association, and several other culturally oriented groups.

"Unless we can get into our building, I don't know what will happen," English said. "The innkeepers say they badly need a theatre for the area."

Councilman Larry Marshall said there was a dire need for some theatrical form of entertainment in the area and added that "I would certainly hate to see us lose this."

English said that if the city could make the contribution, the little theatre could begin the first stage of construction, which would cost about $75,000.

Thus far, the theatre has raised about $12,500 in pledges and cash and is anticipating a $45,000 bank loan if the city will donate the difference.

City Manager Roger M. Scott said that he favored such a project but warned the councilmen that every time a contribution of this type is made, it tightens the city budget a little more and reduces the city's financial flexibility.

Erosion Commission Goes Broke

The Erosion Commission will be broke by the time it pays its outstanding bills unless the city is willing to provide it with some help, the commission's chairman said Tuesday.

Residents Protest Site

City school officials met with more than 50 residents of North Virginia Beach Tuesday night to discuss proposals for a new elementary school building along Holly Road between 60th and 69th Streets.

The meeting was held at the request of the representatives of conservation groups, land owners near the proposed school site and other interested citizens. The group presented the school officials with a list of inquiries about the project.

The group's chief concern was that the school project would take about 15 acres of the Seashore State Park with a possibility of upsetting the ecological balance of the area. They also noted problems of parking, increased traffic and limited access roads in the area.

School Planning Director J.W. Littleton, who moderated the meeting, parried criticisms of his group for not considering alternate sites in the south end or in the Bayville area.

"This is the most ideal site," said assistant School Supt. Elmer Tarrell. He defended the site on the basis of available land, cost and investigation by ecological experts.

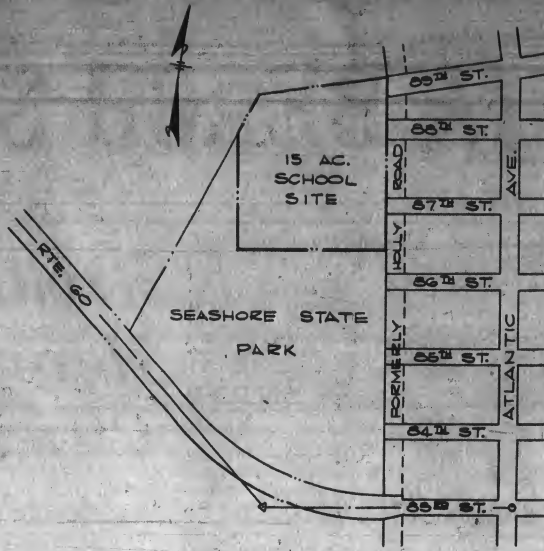

The new school is expected to have facilities for 900 students including a recreational park required by the state.

School officials will continue with their plans for the school site until formal recommendations are submitted to them by the residents.

Tarrell said he expects they will submit some requests in the form of a letter to the School Board. He added that the board may investigate some alternate sites in view of the fact many of the citizens present at the meeting objected to the north site.

He said it was difficult to determine if this particular group was truly representative of everyone involved.

Tarrell indicated that a hearing would be held on the matter if one is required.

Seashore Leads Parks

Virginia's state parks will pass the million and a quarter attendance mark for 1970 this week, according to Ben H. Bolen, commissioner of parks.

Better than 123,000 visitors were counted last week, and the total number has gone over a million during the July 4 weekend. Leading the field in Seashore State Park at Virginia Beach, where 309,000 people were counted through July 12.

The park system's total attendance so far is almost 5 1/2 per cent over 1969 and well ahead of any previous year, Bolen said.

The increase has been due partly to the opening of Chippokes Plantation State Park in the latter half of May. Since then more than 4,200 persons have visited the unique park in Surry County, which is open at present only for sightseeing and walking, as Chippokes Plantation does not yet have recreational facilities.

Nearly 37 million people in 36 nations were helped last year by CARE food, self-help and medical programs.

City Concerned Over Hospitalization Plan

Unless the General Hospital of Virginia Beach reconsiders its move to become a non-participating hospital with Blue Cross-Blue Shield, the city may have to find another hospitalization insurance plan for its 1500 employees, City Manager Roger M. Scott said Monday.

Scott told the informal session of City Council that if the hospital drops the plan August 1 as announced, city employees coverage will drop from 100 per cent of the bill to 80 per cent.

Many of the city's employees have voiced their concern over continuing with a plan that would place them in a situation where they couldn't meet the hospital bill, he said.

He said if the hospital doesn't reconsider its plans, the city will either find another insurance plan that pays 100 per cent of the bill or pay a higher insurance rate to Blue Cross-Blue Shield which would guarantee full payment of the bill.

Director of Finance Giles Dodd said major medical benefits might be added to the current plan that would allow full payment of the bill, but that the cost would still go up in order to cover the additional 20 per cent coverage.

Scott said the Virginia Beach hospital is the only one in the south Hampton Roads area that has assumed non-participatory status.

He added that in a telephone conversation with hospital administrator W. Earl Willis, he was told that the reason the hospital is dropping the plan is because it receives only 92 per cent of the total bill.

The remaining eight per cent "is nothing but a kickback, no matter what you call it," councilman Lawrence E. Marshall said.

Willis said the 92 per cent payment to the hospital by Blue Cross-Blue Shield is based on a complex formula, but declined to discuss the matter further.

Asked whether the figures cited by Scott were correct, Willis said "I can tell you that those figures aren't correct but I can't tell what the correct ones are."

Willis said the hospital is still negotiating with the company for an acceptable agreement before the August 1 deadline.

Scott said he understood that the reason the plan was being dropped was because the hospital needs all the money it can get for its expansion plan and cannot afford to take a loss on the Blue Cross-Blue Shield plan.

Other insurance companies, Scott said, pay the full coverage amount.

Vice Mayor Robert B. Cromwell suggested that Willis be asked to appear before Council to explain why the move was taken, but Councilman G. Dewey Simmons cautioned council not to condemn the actions until it learned the full story.

Scott said he would ask Willis to appear before the group to discuss the situation.

In other matters Monday, the council was told that:

* An Ordinance should be passed that would hold the driver of a vehicle stopped for littering responsible for the act, regardless of who committed the act.

* Rev. John Jordan has resigned as one of the city's representatives on the area-wide United Drug Abuse Commission. Councilman Simmons suggested that a former drug user be placed on the commission in Jordan's place to allow for an expanded point-of-view.

* James P. Sadler has resigned from the ad hoc committee for the Norfolk Port and Industrial Authority due to "a potential conflict of interest in improvements to be made on the Norfolk Regional Airport." Sadler suggested that Judge Henry L. Lam be named to fill his seat on the committee.

* Del. Richard D. Gray had written a letter to Gov. Linwood Holton asking for a feasibility study for the best uses of Camp Pendleton.

* It is necessary to put city water and sewage in the Lintier area as soon as possible to avoid a possible health crisis. Lintier resident Edward P. Brogan said that many of the homes in Lintier have raw sewage standing the yards. But council requested a study of the situation in two weeks since it would cost about $340,000 to install the needed lines and pumps, while only about $70,000 will be derived in hook-up fees.

Concerts Continue

The Virginia Beach Civic Center has released a schedule of events for the month of August.

The month will open with an antique show and sale, scheduled July 30 through August 2.

The city's Concert By The Sea series, which began July 8 and includes some of the area's finest musical groups, will continue through August with the Russell House Orchestra serving as the basic group. Concerts are scheduled August 5, 12, 19 and 26. Groups to be spotlighted at these events have not yet been announced.

Two surfing films are also planned during the month. "Cosmic Children" is set for two performances on August 13, at 7:30 and 11 p. m. "Total Evolvement" will be shown the same hours on August 27.

won't be very much left to continue necessary repairs to the boardwalk and make a $131,000 payment on a $174,000 12-inch dredge purchased at the City's request.

Church said he would ask the City to complete the needed maintenance on the boardwalk in order to free the commission of a $34,000 obligation for that work.

He also said that the commission will ask that the City allow it to keep a $13,428 check from the federal government for beach replenishment from July 1, 1968, through June 30, 1969.

Church said that normally the check goes to the city's general fund but the commission needs the funds badly.

In another matter, commissioner Robert N. Furness Jr. said that no insurance companies have bid on policies for contracts awarded by the commission.

No Litter Here

Even though the Virginia Surfing Association put 14 trash barrels on the surfing area beach near the Steel Pier primarily for garbage, it's obvious that sisters Debbie and Robin Barbee, perched on top, don't belong on Mt. Trashmore. The barrels says VSA vice-chairman Bob White, will be used by surfers in an effort to assist the city in keeping the area clear of debris.

Murphy Heads Clinic Advisory Board

Virginia Beach Attorney Bruce G. Murphy has been elected President of the Atlantic Mental Hygiene Center Advisory Board.

Elections took place Friday. Murphy succeeds Dr. Midge D. May, Virginia Beach director of the Public Health Department, who has held the top office for the past two years.

Two officers were re-elected for a second one-year term. They are Mrs. Wescot Northam of Onancock, vice president; and Elmer Tarrall of Virginia Beach, treasurer.

Other officers are Jackson Tignor, assistant treasurer, and Mrs. Edward N. Abourjile, secretary, both of Virginia Beach.

New Virginia Beach members to the board, elected for a three-year term, ending June 30, 1973, include: Mrs. Emma Halstrom, Mrs. Philip L. Russo, James N. Moody, Lloyd A. Murden and the Rev. Randolph Arrington. Current members from Virginia Beach who were re-elected for a second three-year term, were Dr. Stuart Ashman, Joseph Crosswhite Jr., James Darden, Sidney Kelam, Mrs. Foster I. Gilbert and M. P. Strickler.

The Advisory Board, composed of 24 persons from Virginia Beach and 12 from the Eastern Shore, supervises the full operation of the Atlantic Mental Hygiene Center and its staff and serves as advisor and main point of contact with state and federal mental health agencies.

The center, located in its new quarters on Wildwood Drive, just a short distance from Virginia Beach General Hospital, was established in 1960 to serve the City of Virginia Beach and the counties of Princess Anne (now a part of Virginia Beach), Accomack and Northampton.

At the time it was established, the center served about 131,800 people. Today it serves some 200,000.

Patients are referred to the center, regardless of age, sex or race, by the Public Health and Public Welfare Departments, physicians, medical facilities, schools, courts state mental hospitals, parents and the patients themselves.

Treatment fees are based on the ability to pay, the size of the family and the distance from the clinic. Appointments may be made between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m., Monday through Friday.

The center has two full-time psychiatrists, Dr. James N. Williams and Dr. James D. Hague, one psychologist who is called in for testing when needed, two psychiatric social workers and an administrative staff of four.

Cherry-Pearson Sold To Bonner

One of Virginia Beach's most established men's stores, Cherry-Pearson, has changed ownership and management.

The new manager and part owner is Neil Bonner Jr., who has been in the garment business as a manufacturers' representative for the past 15 years.

Before moving to Virginia Beach, Bonner was representing Van Heusen and Genesco in the Northern Virginia, Washington and Baltimore area. In addition, he has served as manufacturers' representative for Coopers' Inc. and Kayser-Roth, both garment manufacturers. His territory included the Virginia Beach-Norfolk area for 10 years and during that time, he became interested in obtaining a retail outlet in Virginia Beach. Bonner says the new ownership will continue to operate under the same name and no major changes are contemplated. He says a few new brand names may be added to the present lines of men's wear and a real effort will be made to establish a reputation as "the store where a man feels he can go to get a complete and coordinated wardrobe."

Bonner says the success of a business depends on the personality the store portrays to its patrons and he plans to do all he can to establish an outstanding personality for Cherry-Pearson.

Bonner, his wife, the former Doris Anne Bell of Richmond, and 5-year-old son, Neil III, reside on Covey Road in the Linkhorn Point area of Virginia Beach.

Not Really a Deficit

Virginia Beach is going out of the entertainment business. It apparently has no other choice. It has only an outdated facility and an apathetic citizenry to work with.

The city can no longer sponsor quality adult entertainment and come out ahead. The Civic Center cannot accommodate enough people to pay for the increasing costs of good talent. The outdoor bleachers, purchased three years ago to overcome this problem, can accommodate the people but shows are jeopardized by inclement weather. And the crowd usually isn't worth the risk anyway.

Civic Center Director Sam Scott has recommended to Council that the city abandon any further promotional activities. He backed up this recommendation with a statement that the center had operated $33,461 in the red during the last fiscal year, primarily because of its losses on city-sponsored entertainment. Council didn't even question his suggestion. They knew it was a sound recommendation.

The city's civic center was built in 1957. It was not designed nor constructed as a concert hall. It was, and is, a convention center of 1957 vintage. Its purpose has always been to attract conventions to Virginia Beach. And this it has done. Quite successfully.

If the city did not have this facility Virginia Beach would not have been host to the thousands of Methodists who attended the United Methodist Conference last month. It would not be preparing for the thousands of Shriners expected at the Mid-Atlantic Shriners Convention in September. It would not have hosted the hundreds of large meetings that have brought so many people to the city.

These conventions are important to the economy of Virginia Beach. Tax revenues are derived from motel accommodations and restaurant meals. Much of the food is purchased from local farmers. Merchants realize increased retail sales. Many benefits are derived in many ways to many people.

One of the reasons Virginia Beach is so popular for these gatherings is that the Civic Center is available--rent free. The city, through the Civic Center budget, underwrites the costs because of the additional business these meetings generate. And, of course, tax revenues more than off-set such expenses. These revenues, however, are not reflected in the center's budget.

The entertainment activities are a different matter. They benefit the city only through the special entertainment tax, an amount limited by the size of the audience, and in providing the citizens with a little cultural relief. When these activities are not supported, the loss definitely is reflected in the Civic Center budget.

A deficit on one page of the ledger does not necessarily mean financial disaster. The Civic Center has a place in Virginia Beach. When, and if, the city decides that the citizens would support a more modern entertainment and culture center, perhaps they will move in that direction.

More Than A Theatre

The Virginia Beach Little Theatre made its first bid to Council Monday for a $15,500 appropriation to help launch a badly-needed theatre building. This amount, when added to the pledges and contributions already secured, would allow the group to obtain a bank loan for construction of the building.

The City needs a theatre. This is a very basic cultural function for a city of 166,000 people. But there are other aspects involved which should be considered. The group itself has made many contributions to the city in unpublishized ways, often favoring the needs of others over its own needs.

A benefit performance of "Midsummer Night's Dream" for the Proclaim drug rehabilitation center was just such a contribution. The group shared its proceeds with Proclaim for one performance, despite its own struggling fund drive.

The greatest contribution, however, has been toward the public schools. At the request of school officials, members of the little theatre have brought classics to life on the stage so that students could better understand and appreciate, required English assignments. Last fall several theatre members presented excerpts from one of the classics before every senior English class in the city. The group has already been requested, and plans to comply, to present a modern drama in full production for each of the high schools.

"Midsummer Night's Dream" was, in fact, undertaken to benefit the city's young people. It was produced specifically for the several hundred students who held advance tickets to a rained-out performance of the National Shakespeare Company. Later performances were to benefit Proclaim and the theatre building fund.

There is much community spirit in the little theatre supporters of this city. For nearly 25 years they have given their own time and money to bring theatre to Virginia Beach, never asking for additional financial support. Now they need a base of operations. They need help. Perhaps if the city will lead the way the citizens of Virginia Beach will follow.

THE SMOKE WATCHER'S HOW-TO-QUIT BOOK, Published by Bernard Gels and Associates, 1970, $5.95.

Fade out your favorite episode of the Beverly Hillsbillies, fade in a commercial of a little boy and his dad. At first you think the subject will be (a) dog food (b) camera equipment (c) clean America. But it's not any of these, rather, a small part of an all-out anti-cigarette campaign. "Children take after their parents. Do you smoke?"

If these broadcasts are beginning to reach you via your lungs, your children or your stained teeth, and you don't want to join a "Stop-Smoking" class, then come to the library and check out THE SMOKE WATCHER'S HOW-TO-QUIT BOOK. Are any of these habits yours? The wake up cigarette; the coffee cigarette; the driver's cigarette; the bathroom cigarette; the cocktail cigarette; the nightclub cigarette. If so, this book suggests alternate habits to become adjusted to. Have tried pills, gum, cold turkey, dummy cigarettes and everything else you can think of? Try reading this book step-by-step next. ZELDA; A BIOGRAPHY, New York, Harper, 1970.

Society's demands frequently produce society's rebels. These people find it difficult at best to conform and behave, yet discover it not so hard to hide behind these demands when they need to.

Zelda Sayre was such a rebel, the product of intense hatred of the ponderous trappings of small town Alabama, early in the twenties. Daughter of a Justice of the State Supreme Court, well connected through an aristocratic mother, Zelda enjoyed nothing more than scandalizing her parents and the town of Montgomery.

Secure in her world of family money and personal beauty, Zelda grew to young womanhood as the undisputed belle of several southern states. But what was there beneath the surface that drove her relentlessly onward, always having to appear larger than life?

Marriage to F. Scott Fitzgerald - whom she had met while he was stationed in Montgomery - catapulted her directly into the mainstream of the 1920's and the flapper era. He, the successful author, having just published THIS SIDE OF PARADISE and she, beautiful, young and daring, quickly became the couple of the age, everyone's golden dream.

Traveling everywhere, partying across several countries, meeting famous people. They were constantly page one news. Their exploits are still remembered. But could this last? Were the rumors true about his alcoholic tendencies? Was it true that Zelda's actions and speech were becoming more and more irrational? Ernest Hemingway, upon meeting Zelda for the first time, confided to a companion: "She's crazy." What was driving her? After her institutionalization for the first time, we come to see another Zelda: fearful, mistrusting, driven. With the death of Fitzgerald in Hollywood in 1940, Zelda's last link with sanity breaks and she once again enters a mental hospital. Here she remains until her death in a fire.

Mrs. Milford's biography brilliantly brings to life not only Zelda, but also the age in which she existed. We witness her tragic, but full life, and come to regard her and to view her with sympathy, love, and understanding. We read about Zelda and discover why she was truly unforgettable.

A Visual Pollutant

To the editor:

The Virginia Beach Planning Commission, in its recent approval of the application for four 48' x 18' billboards along the toll road, has displayed poor judgement.

This action (if approved by City Council) will not only create a visual pollutant along a reasonably attractive highway but will also open the door to endless applications of a similar nature.

It is my wish that all citizens who are concerned about the general deterioration of our environment will advise their city councilmen of their opposition to these signs.

Municipal Parking

To the Editor:

The city should provide municipal parking lots to aid residents, visitors, and business people. It would ease the congestion on the streets and make the traffic flow more smoothly. Parking lots will also provide revenue.

KEEP OFF THE GRASS

By W. A. Leavell, Ph.D.

Hair Hangup Is Nothing New

With so many problems around today, it seems foolish to me for our nation to be hung-up on "HAIR." If you want to light a fire under the average adult, that over the hill group past 30, male or female, just bring up the subject of the hair styles of our youth generation. That will do it.

For some reason, long hair on a young man or a far out hair style on a young woman will bring out more basic resentment, antagonism and downright hostility in the Geritol set than anything else.

This is not a new thing. Frivolous as a logical mind will find it, this preoccupation with hair is not a modern development. It has deep roots in the history of man. It goes back to Samsara, and beyond. In trying times, hair has been a real problem for thousands of years.

Historically, political "Ones" have displayed unpopularity with the hair styles of the ruling order and adopted the opposite.

As an example, perhaps in no struggle were the forces of long and short hair so violently joined as during the 17th Century civil war in England when the Cavaliers and the Roundheads were killing each other with delight. The contending parties were identified by their haircuts.

The Cavaliers, those loyal to King Charles I, wore ringlets that cascaded down their backs in a style that would make a hippie of today look like a piker. They even had one ringlet that was known as a love-lock that was worn carelessly over one shoulder tied with a ribbon.

The parliamentary forces of Oliver Cromwell were called Roundheads because of the pudding basin or bowl haircuts they sported. The Roundheads were mostly Puritans and looked on long hair as a source of evil, something kin to the devil. The Cavaliers felt short hair indicated a lack of wit and good sense.

In the 18th Century, Norman conquerors of England wore their hair very short. The defeated Saxons encouraged the growth of long hair so they would not resemble their conquerors.

In ancient Rome and medieval Europe long hair was the symbol of sovereignty. In fact, the Caesars of Rome took their name from their long hair called "Caesars." French Kings from the Sixth to the Ninth Centuries wore their hair long and curled.

At times the conflict between long and short hair has become quite foolish. It has been carried to extremes. Toward the end of the 11th Century, the Pope decreed that persons wearing long hair should be excommunicated, and not prayed for when dead.

St. Wulstan, the Bishop of Worcester, got so incensed when he saw a man in long hair that he would take out his knife and cut off a hand full.

It has not been just the Western Civilization that has been hung-up on hair. The unsuccessful Taiping revolt against the Manchu Dynasty in China was known as the Long-Hair Rebellion. It seems that the rebels, among other things, refused to shave the front of their heads as prescribed by the Manchus. The Manchus had their own hang-up on hair because it was they who imposed the pigtail on the Chinese when they conquered the country in 1644.

Even the headshrinkers (Psychiatrists) see hair as being fraught with symbolic and obscure emotional meanings. Charles Berg even wrote a book on the subject called "The Unconscious Significance of Hair." Freudians believe that hair styles change when issues of sexual morality get wrapped up with political events.

Even today, the latest rebels are the "Skinheads" a group of closely cropped youths in England who pick fights with the hippies who have long hair.

Just recently one of the Beatles, John Lennon, sheared his once-prodigious hair in a style that would meet the standards of the neatly trimmed young people of the 1950's.

History seems to indicate that, frivolous or not, preoccupation with hair is an enduring human weakness.

For the life of me, I can't see what hair styles have to do with politics or sex. Of course it might not be a bad idea to force all our elected officials to shave their heads once a week and never wear hair. That way we could spot them one long way off and run and hide. With so many of our "Flock" having flipped their wigs anyway it wouldn't make much difference.

Summer Season

Is Difficult

Apparently many of the resort's year-around residents are concerned about an apparent lack of interest in their comfort and needs during the busy summer tourist season. The response was strong to last week's question: "Do you feel that the city should find some means of aiding local residents during the summer months, such as providing municipal parking lots, etc.?"

All who responded were in favor of some steps being taken by the city.

As one reader noted: "Although tourism is our biggest and best business, there is a limit to how much the residents should sacrifice their own happiness and welfare. Virginia Beach does, first of all, belong to us, the residents!"

These sentiments were expressed on several of the questionnaires. A resident of North Virginia Beach complained because week-end sun bathers blocked her driveway. A resort strip businessman said that the city should make more effort to keep the streets clean of litter. A housewife complained because she couldn't get in and out of the grocery store "without being trampled" during the summer. And there were several comments regarding municipal parking lots. One letter to the editor concerns this suggestion.

This week's question takes a look at another controversial subject. The city has been approached by private interests who wish to hold an outdoor pop festival at Pungo.

Communities throughout Virginia and Maryland are being faced with the same proposals. Some are objecting, some are approving these events.

Could Pungo be another Woodstock?

State Police Will Enforce Helmet Law

In accordance with legislation enacted by the 1970 General Assembly, standards for helmets required to be worn by operators and passengers of motorcycles have been adopted. Colonel W. H. Burgess, Superintendent of State Police, announced today.

Colonel Burgess said that the law requires that the State Police adopt these standards within one year after enactment of the law and that enforcement begin no sooner than 60 days after filing of the standards.

September 15, 1970, has been set for the beginning of enforcement of the standards, but Colonel Burgess said that since June 28, the law has required that operators and passengers wear some type of helmet and that this must be done.

The Virginia standards closely parallel the ANSI Z90.1-1968 ones set by the American National Standards Association, Inc. Any helmet meeting these standards and marked with the ANSI Z90.1-1968 designation is eligible for approval by the State Police. Such helmets are now available.

However, Colonel Burgess said that approval must be obtained, usually by the manufacturer, before the helmet can become legal in Virginia and added that approved helmets will be listed and listings made available to the public by the State Police before the enforcement date.

As a protection to the public, all automotive safety devices must be approved as to quality and effectiveness by the State Police.

Colonel Burgess stated further that after September 15, 1970, the earliest date at which enforcement of the standards can begin, the selling or offering for sale of any helmet not meeting Association standards, not marked as so meeting them and not approved by the State Police will be illegal.

Standards cover material, assembly, area of protection, shock absorption, resistance to penetration and the retaining system.

Big Crowd Buys Bikes

Reyes Johnson, City Traffic Safety Chief, said last Friday's public auction of bicycles was attended by the largest crowd ever to participate in such a sale.

More than 50 bicycles were auctioned on a competitive bid basis at sale prices ranging from $3 to $27, with a sales average of $18-$20.

Other items offered for sale to the public included a large assortment of surfboards which were sold at prices ranging from $12.50 to $66.

Johnson said receipts from the public auction totaled well over $1,000. This money is turned over to the city treasurer.

Chief Pittman added that it was his children--and there are eight of them--who did the major part of the work on the lawn.

Clinic to Promote Safety in Boating

Members of the Virginia Beach Safety Council during their regular meeting Thursday finalized plans for the staging of a "Safe Boating Clinic" and general water safety instruction program, for those interested in water sports on Saturday, August 1.

The program will be conducted through the coordinated efforts of the Virginia Police Department's water patrol unit, the U.S. Coast Guard Auxiliary, the Beach Borough Rescue Squad, the Virginia Beach Power Squadron, the Tidewater Chapter American Red Cross and the Inland Fish and Wildlife Reserve.

Any resident of the resort city who participates in boating, swimming, or other water sports are invited to attend the clinic which will feature instruction in the various aspects of water safety and safe boating.

This instruction will include proper procedures to be followed in equipping boats with the proper gear necessary for their safe operation and to meet various types of emergencies which may arise during the operation of a boat, procedures which should be followed in the safe handling of various types and sizes of boats and outlining regulations which have been established to add in the safe operation of boats on the various waterways throughout Virginia Beach.

Another important phase of the clinic will be the promotion of water safety through instruction of proper procedures to be followed—swimming and/or water skiing and steps which should be taken in rendering immediate assistance to someone who may be injured while engaging in water sports.

Each of the participating organizations will set up booths which will offer information of the various aspects of water safety, through the use of printed material and slide and film presentations and personal instruction. The clinic will also afford the opportunity for those who wish to do so to bring their boat to the clinic for a free safety check to determine the craft has been outfitted properly and is a safe condition for operation.

Anyone in the city who engages in water sports is urged to attend the clinic which will be free. The Virginia Beach Safety Council is especially interested in having as many young people as possible attend the clinic with their parents, as well as adults, in order that they may better protect themselves while using the numerous waterways in and around the resort city.

The clinic will be held at the public boat ramp at the end of 64th Street and will be accessible by car through Seashore State Park, as well as by boat through "The Narrows" between Broad Bay and Linkhorn Bay.

The programs will be conducted on a continuous basis from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Saturday, August 1, and in the event of inclement weather will be rescheduled in the same time period on Saturday, August 2.

Men of the London Bridge Volunteer Fire Department search water of Lynnhaven River for missing Norfolk man.

Crabber's Body Recovered

Men of the London Bridge Volunteer Fire Department recovered the body of Samuel Whitney from the Eastern branch of the Lynnhaven River Tuesday afternoon.

Whitney, 42, of Norfolk, disappeared after taking a small outboard boat onto the river about 9:30 a.m. Monday in search of crabs. He was last seen in the vicinity of crab pots about 500 yards off shore behind the J.C. Archbell home in the 3600 block of Lynndale Drive.

Those involved in the search for Whitney quoted Archbell with saying Whitney worked for him for 20 years in his termite control business and requested permission to take time from his duties to gather a few crabs. Whitney parked his truck behind the Archbell home and went into the river in a small boat from the Archbell pier.

Authorities said the boat was discovered about 10 a.m. Monday by 15-year-old Keith Hopper, of Wolfsmare Road, after it had overturned and drifted ashore about 1,000 yards from the Archbell home. However there was no sign of Whitney. Young Hopper towed the outboard boat back to the Archbell pier. Police officials said they received a report of the situation about 4 p.m. and dispatched officer Ferguson Lambert to investigate. Learning the facts of what happened Lambert called for men of the London Bridge Volunteer Fire Department who began a search of the waters from their Rescue Squad outboard boat. The police department's marine unit patrol boat was also dispatched to the scene to assist in the search.

Volunteer Rescue Squadsmen conducted a continuous search of the river, working during a rain and lightning storm, until nearly 9 p.m. without success. The volunteers resumed their search of the river at 6 a.m. Tuesday concentrating on the area of crab pots where Whitney was last seen as well as the path of tide movements through the river.

Officials said Whitney's body was spotted about 5:45 p.m. Tuesday by police Sgt. L. O. Sutton as he was scanning the river by use of binoculars when the body "bobbed to the surface of the river" in the vicinity of the crab pots where Whitney was last seen. Volunteer Rescue Squadsmen brought the body ashore by use of their small outboard boat.

As spokesmen for the Volunteer Rescue Squad said that when they reached Whitney's body his hand was still grasping a line attached to one of the crab pots which he initially began to check for crabs.

Western Electric Adds To Economy

The Western Electric Company established a new high in expenditures in Virginia in 1969 when it spent some $32.8 million with suppliers, carriers and for its payroll.

There are 1900 people on the Western Electric payroll in the Commonwealth and they received more than $17.3 million in salary. Western's expenditures to suppliers and carriers in the state were $15.5 million. The company did business with some 396 suppliers and 67 carriers in 95 different localities throughout the state.

Purchases varied from paper products to telephone poles. As the manufacturing and supply arm of the Bell System, which includes The Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Company of Virginia, Western Electric spent over $3.7 million in 1969. Portions of this total amount were spent in 4163 communities throughout the USA. Presently, Western Electric is establishing a million dollar distribution center at Ashland, Virginia, some 17 miles north of Richmond off Interstate Route 95.

Some 70 persons will be employed at the new center which

No Charges In Fatality

Police officials say their investigation has led to the conclusion that no charges will be filed in the traffic accident Monday which resulted in the death of young John L. Sullivan in Aragona Village.

According to authorities, six-year-old Sullivan of Crepe Myrtle Lane was fatally injured while riding his bicycle with a friend near the intersection of Ferry Plantation Road and Overman Road.

Investigators quote witnesses with saying the boy swerved his bicycle into the path of an auto driven by Mary B. Rougeau of Quinwood Drive, and she was unable to stop her car before it struck the boy.

Police officer C.E. Gmitter, who investigated the accident, praised men of the Davis Corner Volunteer Rescue Squad for their attempts to revive the boy when they arrived at the accident scene.

Officials attributed the boy's death to severe injuries to the head, neck and spine. His death was the 17th traffic fatality of the year in Virginia Beach.

Awaits Sentencing

Aldo M. Lovist is awaiting sentencing after being found guilty of cruel and injurious treatment of his 12-year-old stepdaughter.

Lovist, 40, was convicted of the charge by a Circuit Court Jury which set his punishment at $1,000 fine and 12 months in jail. Judge George W. Vukos set Aug. 7 as date of sentencing pending the outcome of legal arguments in the case.

Police arrested Lovist and his wife Margaret April 18, 1969, when they reportedly discovered a large quantity of pornographic films, still pictures, books, magazines and literature in the couple's Alantown Drive home.

The cruel and injurious treatment charge revolved around the alleged use of the children to take photographs of Lovist, his wife and another man, as they engaged in sex acts which have since been described as perverted.

search party some 200 yards from the burning wreckage of the plane several hours after he was reported overdue.

Driver Acquitted

Municipal Court Judge P.B. White has acquitted Bruce A. Kozlowski of manslaughter charges in connection with the April 5 accident which resulted in the death of Mrs. Ann Smith.

Kozlowski, 22, attached to Atlantic Fleet Headquarters in Norfolk was found guilty of reckless driving, fined $250 and had his driver's license revoked for six months.

Investigators said Mrs. Smith, 31, of Valley Stream Road, was a passenger in an auto being driven by her husband when the vehicle collided head on with the car driven by Kozlowski on North Landing Road near the intersection of Salem Road.

Sentencing Delayed

Circuit Court Judge George W. Vukos has delayed the sentencing of Errol R. Dunn following his plea of guilty to a charge of sodomy.

Dunn, 24, a student at Howard University, Washington, was charged with sodomy involving Mrs. Margaret Lovist. She was sentenced to three years imprisonment May 5 following her conviction by a jury of a charge of sodomy involving Dunn.

Margaret Lovist, 31, and her husband Aldo, 40, were arrested April 18, 1969, when police reportedly found a large quantity of obscene films, photos, and literature in the couple's Alantown Drive home.

The Lovists were charged with a variety of offenses which included sodomy and taking part in obscene displays.

Try Fails; Dolan To Face Judge

Paul J. Dolan is scheduled to return to Virginia Beach Municipal Court next Wednesday on a number of charges resulting from an encounter with the Virginia Beach police marine patrol and U.S. Coast Guard units here July 1.

The hearing follows an unsuccessful effort on the part of Dolan's attorney, Edward T. Cation III, to block further court proceedings against his client.

Dolan, 46, of Fitzhugh Avenue, Richmond, Va., was charged on two counts of reckless boating, resisting arrest, cursing and abuse of police officers, and disturbing the peace during a four hour chase between his 38-foot cabin cruiser and police and Coast Guard marine units.

According to officials Dolan refused to allow police officers and Coast Guardsmen to board his boat and threatened those attempting to place him under arrest before he was finally subdued by police and Coast Guardsmen.

Judge P.B. White convicted Dolan of the Charges in Municipal Court July 8, although Dolan was not present, and fined him $400 plus a 30-day suspended sentence.

Prior to the adjournment of Court Judge White was informed of a previous agreement for a continuance of the case, which had not been known by the Court. White's conviction was set aside and the case rescheduled for July 15.

Judge White then disqualified himself from further proceedings and the case was rescheduled for July 22, before Judge Thomas F. Betz, Jr.

Circuit Court Judge Philip L. Russo was then requested by Dolan's attorney to prohibit any further Municipal Court proceedings against Dolan on grounds that to do so would place his client under double jeopardy.

Judge Russo denied the writ of prohibition by defense counsel on the contention that to rehear the case would place Dolan under double jeopardy.

Judge Russo's decision was based on the code of Virginia and previous holdings of the Court that so long as the orders or decrees, have not become final, the case would still be under jurisdiction of the court.

Russo's decision further indicated that it was clear at the time the judge of Municipal Court decided to rehear the case the judgement of the court was not final. It would only have become final after the expiration of ten days of the date of the judgement.

Officials of the U.S. Coast Guard District Headquarters in Portsmouth conducted an investigation into Dolan's possible violation of the maritime section of the U.S. Code, and forwarded their findings to U.S. Attorney Roger Williams to determine if Dolan should face any prosecution by the Federal Government.

Williams said Wednesday he has not completed his evaluation of the Coast Guard findings.

THE WOMEN

VIRGINIA BEACH SUN

Thursday, July 23, 1970

"I've finished three sweaters already this week..."

"Next year I'll bring an umbrella."

"Oops, here comes the rain again."

What do you do at an art show?

What do you do at an art show? That depends on who you are.

Exhibitors wait, and hope and try to keep from becoming bored during five days on the Boardwalk. And at times their main concern was in ducking showers.

Art lovers view the art displayed with a critical and appreciative eye, always looking for just the right piece.

Tourists come out of curiosity and often come away with art.

But whatever the reason for being there, sales of the 1970 Boardwalk Art Show topped those of 1969 -- despite thunderstorms on the first and last days. The show was a success.

Although final figures have not been released, show officials held out hopes of breaking all previous records.

And so, until next summer ... and another show.

"It's a dog's life."

'You're a mean mommy'

"Can I have my cookies now? I'm hungry," declared the seven-year-old.

"I thought I just saw you getting some cookies."

"That was Betty," she protested.

"Alright, but don't get anything else."

"I'm thirsty. Can't I get some grape drink?"

"You kids have gone through two big cans of it in two days. I can't afford it. Drink water if you're thirsty."

"I don't like water."

"Too bad."

"Mommy," said the six-year-old. "Can I have some raisins?"

"We're all out."

"How come?"

"Because you ate them all, that's how come."

"But I didn't get but one box."

"Too bad."

"Mommy," said the nine-year-old. "Can I have my cookies now?"

"Susie said you just got some."

"Those weren't for me, they were for Sally."

"Well why didn't Sally get some from her own house?"

"Her mother wouldn't give her any."

"Well I'm not going to feed the whole neighborhood."

"Mommy, when can Becky and Janie spend the night?"

"What do you mean? You just had Ann and Betsy spend the night last week. I don't see their mothers inviting you over. Sometimes I feel like charging room and board around here."

"Mommy," said the six-year-old. "Ronnie wants to use our bathroom."

"Where is he?"

"In the front yard."

"Well, he's as close to his house as to ours."

"His mother won't let him in."

"Neither will yours."

"You're a mean mommy."

"I sure am."

A time and a place for everything.

"I wish I could remember her Zip Code."

Sorting colors and pre-treating badly soiled areas are probably second nature to you in laundering permanent press garments. Here's another pre-washing suggestion that can prolong the life of those garments. Simply turn clothing inside out before laundering to reduce wear along crease lines.

Mrs. Joyner

Lee-Joyner wedding

Miss Margaret Ann Lee, a Virginia Beach teacher, became the bride of Oliver Key Joyner, Jr. in a double ring ceremony Sunday, July 19 at 4 p.m. in Pious Baptist Church in Paoletus, N.C. with the Rev. William Edwards officiating.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Noel Lee, Jr. of Washington, N.C.

The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Key Joyner, Sr. of Woodland, N.C. and Virginia Beach.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of ivory summer satin fashioned with an empire bodice highlighted with appliques of Alencon lace embroidered with seed pearls. She also wore a full length mantilla of illusion bordered in Alencon lace.

Mrs. Edward Earl Lee of Washington, N.C., the bride's sister-in-law, was matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Miss Helen Ray Baker of Charlotte, N.C., Mrs. Robert Irvin Young of Richmond, Va. and Mrs. Luther Culpepper of Woodland, N.C.

The bridegroom's father was best man. Groomsmen were Noel Lee III of Washington, N.C., the bridegroom's brother, Ronald Hugh Vassar of Richmond, Va. and Powell Joyner, Jr. of Virginia Beach.

Following a reception at the moose lodge in Washington, N.C., the couple left on an undisclosed wedding trip. The couple will live in Virginia Beach where she is a teacher at Lynnhaven Elementary School and he is manager of Dundee Inn.

Mrs. Joyner is a graduate of East Carolina University where she was a member of Delta Zeta social sorority.

Mr. Joyner is a graduate of Florida Central Academy and attended Richmond Professional Institute.

Frame it? Then hang it

A bare wall is an invitation to creativity. It can be decorated in any manner since, like the rest of the home, it is a reflection of what the lady of the house likes. There are no rules about what to hang on walls. The Picture and Frame Institute says that if it can be framed, it may be hung.

It's always safe to make the group even across top and bottom, but the Picture and Frame Institute assures that with careful balancing borders can be uneven and the arrangement will still have good design. Remember not to hang pictures too high and never to hang one small picture alone on a large wall area.

CATALONIAN FISH in almond sauce is a delicacy nicely spiced with bay leaves, basil, pepper, onion and garlic. Delicious with rice.

Fish is for everybody

"The sea hath fish for every man" it has been said for centuries and, according to the most recent report of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the UN, the oceans are still a great source of food for man, with the world's total haul of fish 141,056,000 pounds for 1968.

Even more impressive than the statistics is the ingenuity with which the world's fishing countries prepare their catches. Every country has its secrets, particularly in the way of seasoning.

Peruvians love pickled fish—seviche—spiced with red and green chili peppers, onion, black pepper and parsley. Japan's world famous raw fish—sashimi—consists of paper-thin slices of fish marinated in a gingered sauce. China loves to combine soy, sherry, garlic and ginger in fish as well as meat cookery. The flavor of Norwegian fish soup would be more familiar to American palates since it is spiced with bay leaf, pepper, corns, celery and parsley.

Depending on country and region, fish and seafood will be seasoned to taste with a battery of other spices: thyme, tarragon, oregano, mint, parsley, coriander, cumin, tumeric, saffron, nutmeg, mace, mustard and blends such as chili and curry powder.

To show you how delicious fish can be do try these recipes for Squette and Michha Trong Kroeung from the test kitchens of the American Spice Trade Association.

Fads are fashion

Bleach-outs, tie dyes, ponchos, and fringe--fad or fancies? They're fads and that's what makes them fashion with the young generation.

What's happening right now in fad fashions is a trend toward the casual, the rugged and the costume.

Bleach-out cotton denim, a look that originated when kids poured liquid bleach on their blue jeans, are showing up all over the country. Fabric houses have authentically duplicated the bleached effect and the soft brushed hand that gives the fabric its worn look.

The costume look takes many turns, according to the National Cotton Council. Fringes appear on everything from stoles and capes to pants and skirts. One latest twist is the printed poncho, teamed to a hat and duffle bag, and worn over cotton denim jeans or skirts.

Body jewelry paired to mini skirts, western vests worn with jeans, scarves tied around the waist in abundance, jeans cut off to look ragged, all are making the scene. They may look like fads, but they're really new fashions.

Preserve foliage

Foliage for arrangements during the winter months, may be preserved now by using glycerin. The leaves of many plants may be used to make interesting arrangements when flowers are not available from the garden.

The procedure is simple. All you need to do is stand the stems or leaves in a mixture of one part glycerin and two parts water.

Midsummer is a good time to get started on this project. The leaves will be in an active stage of growth and will absorb the glycerin rapidly. This usually takes about two or three weeks.

Many kinds of leaves may be preserved by the glycerin process. Trees such as beech, birch, peach, plum and poplar are satisfactory. Of the shrubs try barberry, forsythia, blueberry, privet, rhododendron and rose. The leaves of many perennial herbaceous plants may be used such as aspidistra, canna, coral bells, geraniums, iris, ivy and lily-of-the-valley.

Select only perfect specimens and wash the foliage with water to remove dirt or spray residue. If the material has woody stems, cut off the lower inch with a sloping cut before starting the treatment. Stand the stems or leaves upright in a jar of the glycerin solution.

The leaves will change color as the solution is absorbed. Allow the stems to remain in the solution until the color is the same all the way to the edge of the leaf. This indicates that the absorption is complete.

Good air circulation and warm weather will speed up the absorption. Wipe the leaves occasionally with a cloth dampened with the solution. This will help prevent drying before the glycerin reaches the edge of the leaves.

The leaves may become wilted if left in the solution too long. If this occurs, wipe them off and hang upside down to dry.

The effect of the treatment on the color of the dried foliage depends on the kind of plant, and its relative maturity. Barberry gathered in the spring will turn red, whereas in late summer and fall it turns brown. Beech, crab-apple, plum and forsythia retain their natural color if treated early in the season. With some leaves such as flowering plum, a few drops of red food coloring added to the solution will give a glossy red color.

The leaves of small herbaceous plant material such as ivy and lily-of-the-valley, may be submerged completely in a half and half glycerin-water solution.

Leaves preserved by glycerin should be stored in boxes to protect them from damage and dirt. Before storage, wipe the leaves carefully with a soft cloth to remove excess moisture. Check the boxes frequently during the first few weeks, to be sure there is no leakage from the leaves which might cause mold.

Cotton is static-free.

Wild Pony To Become Gift Horse

Some lucky boy or girl at the annual Chincoteague Pony Penning and Auction, scheduled for Wednesday and Thursday, July 29 and July 30, will look a gift horse in the mouth and find a "wild pony."

The first pony to reach Virginia's mainland after a half-mile swim from Assateague Island, where the tiny horses live the year-round, will be given away. Tickets for the drawing, priced for penny-bank budgets, go on sale the night before the swim and can be purchased right up until "post time," that is when the horses take the plunge.

The drawing will be held after the ponies are corralled on the Carnival Grounds on S. Main Street here in Chincoteague; the holder of the winning number must be on hand to claim his prize.

The channel swim, which usually has a field of 250 to 300 ponies, is scheduled to begin at approximately 10 a.m. on Wednesday, July 29. The ponies will be auctioned off the next day, Thursday, July 30, from 8 a.m. to noon. Usually 75 to 100 ponies, which are docile and easy to train despite their description as "wild," are sold. Prices range from $50 to $150. Proceeds from the event, which climaxes a two-week carnival sponsored by the Chincoteague Volunteer Fire Department, are used for the purchase and maintenance of life-saving equipment. Ponies that are not sold swim back to the free life of Assateague on Friday.

Chincoteague, via the Chesapeake Bay Bridge-Tunnel, is about 90 miles from Virginia Beach and is easily reached by taking the Chesapeake Bay Bridge-Tunnel; U.S. Highway 13, now completely four-laned, and Virginia Highway 175 which intersects Route 13 just north of Oak Hall.

The ponies have inhabited Assateague Island since the days of the Indians. According to legend, a Spanish ship loaded with mustangs was wrecked off the island, in the 16th century. Sailors who survived were helped to the mainland by the Indians, but a small, wiry horse swam to the safety of the island where they or their descendants have lived ever since.

In the 18th century, the horses began swimming across the narrow channel separating Assateague and Chincoteague, foraging for food on the settler's land. The first penning began in self-defense as a result of these "raids."

Centuries later, when the waterway between the islands became too wide for the ponies to swim voluntarily, Assateague was threatened with being overrun with the multiplying livestock. It was then that firemen undertook their annual event.

To insure a continuing supply of ponies for the modern day round-up, the Chincoteague Fire Department several years ago purchased an 80 head herd and turned it loose on Assateague Island.

Families who plan to go to the pony penning in camper vehicles are advised that Bridge-Tunnel regulations permit such vehicles to carry two 20-pound capacity tanks of I.C.C.-approved compressed cooking or refrigerating gas if the tank valves are completely shut off and if the tanks are securely attached to the vehicle. The tanks can be full, partially full or empty. Most tunnels ban all vehicles carrying compressed gas.

DE Survey Scheduled Division Requested For Water

The Distributive Education Service of the Virginia Beach Public Schools will begin a city-wide survey of local distributive businesses.

The survey will serve a two-fold purpose as described by Robert J. Parr, supervisor of the DE department.

One of the objectives of the survey will be to determine the educational needs of the local distributive businesses and to discover prospective instructors for adult distributive classes.

The DE department offers courses of instruction on three levels--management, supervisory, and employee--for adults already employed in distributive occupations or those who wish to enter the field.

In addition, specialized courses are available for specific types of distributive businesses such as Real Estate, Hotel-Motel, Hardware and many other areas.

The second objective of the survey will be to determine the employment trends in the community and to identify businesses willing to participate as co-partners in education by providing on-the-job experience for the high school student. The DE student attends regular classes in the morning including one class of DE. In the afternoon and on weekends, he puts into practice what he has learned in his DE class by working in a sales or sales supporting job with local distributive businesses.

This fall, in addition to the seniors who have already had one year of experience in distribution, there will be over 400 juniors placed in training stations by the teacher-coordinator.

Division Requested For Water

City Manager Roger Scott has been requested by the Virginia Beach Safety Council to establish a "Water Safety Division" within the City's organization.

Council president Donald I. Fentress based the request on findings of the Council.

Fentress outlined his request to Scott by saying, "Like highway safety, we need a commission or division to pursue a vigorous water sports and boating safety program in Virginia Beach. As you know, the increased water sports and boating activity in our city has made some of our water areas very hazardous. We are a water-oriented city which should have a formal Water Safety Division to help coordinate the efforts of various groups to keep Virginia Beach's waterways and beach front safe."

The request also included a recommendation from Ben Wroton, chairman of the Safety Council's Water Safety Committee, that Officer F. Scarborough assigned to the police department's marine patrol unit be assigned to any Water Safety Division the city establishes.

Milk Loss Detected

Some half-gallons containers of milk distributed in Virginia Beach by a Norfolk dairy and a Virginia Beach dairy had less than the required amount of milk, the head of the consumer protection bureau disclosed Friday.

Reeves E. Johnson, head of the new bureau, said that no charges have been filed against the offending dairies because "they probably weren't aware of the fact that their containers were short."

He said that the Virginia Beach dairy was checked for milk shortages during a routine investigation and it was discovered that there were 3,190 glass bottles used for home delivery that were in error.

Johnson said that the bottles were about one ounce short and were ordered destroyed.

The Norfolk-based dairy was checked by both Norfolk and Virginia Beach inspectors and it was found that 2,210 lots of quart and half-gallon containers were short three-fourths of an ounce to 3 1/4 ounces.

Johnson said that the machines used to fill the cartons may have been in error. Since there was no apparent reason to suspect fraud, he refused to name the dairies.

Eddie L. Whitehurst, Johnson's assistant and the Assistant Sealer of Weights and Measures, said there were six supermarkets checked in June, in which 3,755 lots of produce and meats were checked and 571 lots rejected.

He attributed the rejections to weight loss due to dehydration of the items.

ASTRO-ADVICE

By Raymond Williams
astrologer

NOTE: In my answer to E.M.S. in last week's column, the line which read "It always angers me..." should have read "It always amazes me..." You see, just as the typesetter was setting this line one of the mini-skirted office girls walked past. I think we can forgive his inability to concentrate at the time.

Q: The son of a friend of mine is causing untold problems to his family and is driving his mother to the verge of a breakdown with his lawless ways. She is unable to break through his wall of uncaring, indifference. Can you tell me what kind of a person he is and what can be done to reach him before he gets into serious trouble?

A: This is a chart of a young man seventeen years of age. His horoscope holds within it all the potential for creating a very difficult and violent person. This young man can, and will, unless something is done to reach him, become a complete social misfit. To begin with, the Sun (individuality) is in the sign of Aries. This is a very aggressive sign and under good aspects is the pioneer and trail blazer. Under bad aspects, however, it can produce an aggressive nature which becomes socially rebellious. The planet Venus, which rules the affectional nature, is also in the sign of Aries, and in close conjunction to the Sun. The meaning of this is immediately clear to anyone with a cursory understanding of astrology. Being this close to the Sun his feelings will be spotlighted and since it is under the influence of the sign of Aries he will be quite aggressive in his expression of those feelings.

So far, it would seem that the young man is one who has a great deal of feelings and that he is quite ardent in his expression of them. The problem arises, however, when we see that these two planets are directly opposite the planets Neptune and Saturn. Now the nature of Neptune is such that it puts a cloud over anything with which it comes in contact. The nature of Saturn is that it restricts anything with which it comes in contact. In fact one of the key words to describe Saturn is "lack". Now if we add up the pieces we have so far it is not a very promising picture. The Sun and Venus conjunct in Aries, a very aggressive and ardent person who does not know how he feels, the veil of Neptune, and who is not capable of feeling a great deal of affection, Venus in opposition to the limiting Saturn, but who is very aggressive about the feelings he does have.

So far we have only drawn a picture of a rather confused, if somewhat aggressive person. When we add the next part of the puzzle the outlook becomes somewhat more complicated. The planet Mercury (the mind) and the Moon (the emotional nature) are in the seclusive withdrawn and somewhat sensual sign of Pisces. This deepens the feelings considerably but provides no point of release. In fact it is the mark of one who harbors feelings in the mind and in view of what has been stated before, one must feel that there is a mass of frustrated feelings lying just below the surface waiting for something to cause explosion.

In addition to this, these two planets are in a very difficult aspect to the Ascendant (the temperament) which will only complicate matters since it will cause him to be misunderstood at times. There are certainly redeeming points in the chart, such as the Sun and Venus, in good relationship to the planet Pluto. As it often happens in charts like this, however, while they are in good aspect to the planet Pluto, the violent and extremely aggressive planet Mars is in adverse aspect to the same planet. This will almost certainly nullify the good influences of Venus and the Sun. There is a great deal more that could be said about the natal chart of this young man, but I would like to comment on the progressions.

If the birth time given me was correct, and this is always important, he will be experiencing some rather difficult times over the next few years. For the next three years the progressed ascendant (the temperament) will be passing over the erratic and unpredictable planet Uranus. This is certain to make this young man very difficult to understand. It would seem that these next three years will be the crises period. If it is possible to get him to someone who is able to understand what is taking place within the mind of this young man and who really cares about people, rather than theories, it is possible that he can be helped. If he does not receive some guidance it is almost certain that he will spend a considerable time in protective custody. The ideal person to help would be a psychiatrist who understands astrology and is aware of the other-than-physical bodies which we possess.

My feeling is that if we fail with this young man we will be guilty of one more terrible indifference. It is you and I who make up the society that he is forced to live in and we therefore are responsible. We have been terribly indifferent in the past and this indifference is what has brought about the mass of young people we see around these days. Not all are potentially violent but surely a wasted life is just as tragic, even if it is not a threat to us.

Q: I was born Jan. 19, 1951 and am seriously involved with a Gemini. What is our future? Signed AGS

A: This is an extremely interesting question and is so indicative of what happens to young people. It would almost seem that nature is the compelling force if we consider the natures of the planets involved. To begin with you have a most powerful configuration taking place in your progressed horoscope just now, and it would be impossible for you not to be in love, even if you were stranded on a deserted island.

The planet Venus (love) has moved to a conjunction with the benefic and expansive planet, Jupiter. This is certain to expand the affectional nature to such a point that you sometimes feel that you will burst from the tremendous feelings involved. The young man has the Sun (individuality) in the sign of Gemini and you have the Moon (emotional nature) in the same sign. This is a very strong attraction. In addition to this the Sun is in a very good relationship to your Venus. Very simply this is the mark of two people who must respond to a powerful attraction and affection.

His Venus is in good aspect to your Jupiter and Mercury. This is another testimony of a deep and expansive attraction. His Mars is in almost perfect aspect to your Sun. This is extremely important, since Mars governs his masculine nature and in good relationship to your Sun (individuality) you are sure to feel a very strong physical attraction, which is very important in a happy marriage.

There are a few areas of the two charts that indicate some friction, but two enlightened people can grow together if they realize that it takes friction to reach new understandings. One of the most difficult problems can be money. This, in addition to the fact that Mars, not too close a planet, is in the house govern-

City Is Finalist As All-American City

Seatack community leader Aaron Parsons (right) and City Planner Jim Wilson join in a congratulatory hand-shake on the successful completion of the "Clean-Up Campaign" in the Seatack region. Parsons and Wilson exerted untiring efforts in assisting in coordinating work in the massive face lifting program. See complete story on page 9.

Noted Scientist:

Hard Problem Needed

Dr. Leonard Reiffel, noted scientist familiar to many through his "Science Report" on CBS, said here Tuesday that he has "great faith in the public. The mass of people have got to realize they have to attempt hard problems," said Dr. Reiffel. "It doesn't matter what—just so it's hard."

"Science and technology are like a big balloon. The whole gets bigger and more competent to attack the next problem when one is completed."

He added that it wouldn't have made much difference if the United States had decided to go to the moon or inhabit the bottom of the ocean—just as long as the project was completed.

"The thing the public is ready to do should be done so they'll be ready to handle more difficult problems," Dr. Reiffel said.

Dr. Reiffel, who is also chairman of the board of Instrumental Dynamics Incorporated, subsidiary of IDI concerned with research and development, and president of TELESTRATOR Industries, Incorporated, was in Virginia Beach Monday and Tuesday to participate in a seminar on utilization of instructional television sponsored by the Bureau of Naval Personnel and hosted by the Guided Missile School at Dam Neck.

He said that he does not believe that the present cutback in space exploration funds is permanent and that more funds will be appropriated when the "desirability to exploit the space program becomes obvious."

As an illustration he told a solution, which he said is not original, that "the thing to do is to get Russia to launch the Leningrad Symphony Orchestra into space. Then we'll launch the audience."

In his opinion the future of educational TV is "extremely bright."

"It's one of the few ways one has to educate and re-educate the people," said Dr. Reiffel. "I believe that in the future people will have three to five careers in a lifetime. It is a facility to bring education to the person in the home."

He said that one way "possibly the best" to develop an effective educational TV program for the country is to get the best talent in the country to get together and develop a national curriculum. He pointed out that often small school systems cannot afford any educational TV at all or not an effective system.

Educational TV, he said, could be developed by private and/or government funds with local school systems. "There needs to be a radical reorientation of public values," commented Dr. Reiffel.

He said an economic incentive is needed to develop love and talent in educational television. "There's got to be as much money devoted to love and education as to soap ads."

Before flying back to Chicago Tuesday, Dr. Reiffel was given a plaque making him an "honorary missileer" by Capt. A.H. Galvani, commanding officer of the Guided Missiles School.

The entry states that Virginia Beach has a median family income of $9,700, a non-white population of approximately 8 per cent and a current rate of unemployment among civilian workers of 3 per cent.

It explains that Virginia Beach is the state's fastest-growing city "but she is prouder of her reputation for solving problems before they become acute."

In addition to the three projects selected for emphasis, the application makes mention of the citizens' work on the 170-bed, $3.6 million expansion of the citizen-owned General Hospital after Hill-Burton funds were denied; the Atlantic Mental Hygiene Center; the Center for Effective Learning; the United Drug Action Committee; the Mayor's Youth Job Corps; construction of the new SPCA shelter; the establishment of an Arts Museum; house-to-house opinions in development

By RUBY JEAN PHILLIPS

The participation of private citizens in three major improvement and development projects in Virginia Beach has placed the city among the 22 communities from across the nation named as finalists in the 22nd annual All-America Cities Awards Competition.

The city's entry was based primarily on the volunteer efforts in the Seatack Action Plan; the economic development contributions by the Virginia Beach Development Council, Committee of 100 and other citizen groups; and the successful operation of the Servicemen's Hospitality House.

These were the three projects selected as the main points but a number of other community undertakings were included in the entry.

The All-America City Award, co-sponsored by the National Municipal League and Look Magazine, is based on notable improvements in community living brought about by "citizen action."

The competition covers any major aspect of city life, such as government, education, housing, employment, industry, health, urban renewal and community relations.

Virginia Beach is the only city in the state selected as a finalist although Norfolk and other Virginia Communities were reportedly among the 100 or so entrants.

The finalists were announced by William W. Scranton, president of the League and former governor of Pennsylvania.

Official announcement from the city was made last night at a reception at the Bay Harbor Club attended by about 50 city officials, councilmen, civic leaders, commanding officers of the city's military installations, and news media representatives.

The entire reception was sponsored by Virginia Beach Enterprises, Inc., a group of 120 businessmen which recently purchased the White Heron Motel and Bay Harbor Club. The city must now join the other finalist communities in making a presentation before a 12-member jury in Portland, Oregon August 24-25. If Virginia Beach is favored by the jury, a group of investigators will arrive here to make a final analysis of the city's merits before the 11 award recipients are actually named early next year.

Virginia Beach is scheduled to make its pitch for the award on August 25 at 11:40 a.m. The presentation will be both verbal and pictorial, possibly incorporating the use of slides.

It will be made by Lawrence A. Sanello, as a private citizen; Vice Mayor Robert B. Cromwell, as an elected official; and City Manager Roger Scott as an appointed official.

The official entry that placed Virginia Beach among the 22 finalists was compiled by Assistant City Manager David B. Norman and Frank L. Creasy, the city's newly appointed public information officer.

It points out that the city's population was jumped from 42,277 in 1950 to 85,218 in 1960 and, primarily because of the 1963 merger with Princess Anne County, to 166,066 in 1970.

The entry states that Virginia Beach has a median family income of $9,700, a non-white population of approximately 8 per cent and a current rate of unemployment among civilian workers of 3 per cent.

It explains that Virginia Beach is the state's fastest-growing city "but she is prouder of her reputation for solving problems before they become acute."

In addition to the three projects selected for emphasis, the application makes mention of the citizens' work on the 170-bed, $3.6 million expansion of the citizen-owned General Hospital after Hill-Burton funds were denied; the Atlantic Mental Hygiene Center; the Center for Effective Learning; the United Drug Action Committee; the Mayor's Youth Job Corps; construction of the new SPCA shelter; the establishment of an Arts Museum; house-to-house opinions in development of land use for all boroughs; an amendment of the City's Charter to remove partisan political labels from councilmanic elections; a new subdivision ordinance; and a strict new Building Code.

Following is a resume of the three main projects as outlined in the application:

1. SEATACK IMMEDIATE ACTION. Except in a natural disaster situation, it would be impossible for any citizenry to spontaneously, tangibly express more concern than Virginia Beach did in Seatack community between 11-1-69 and 6-13-70. A full-fledged community renovation, all accomplished with volunteer labor, included the razing of 30 structures; removal of more than 200 rusty, vermin-infested vehicle bodies; clearing 8 miles of drainage ditches; disposing of 370 tons of debris and garbage; installing new mercury vapor lights on all streets and construction of a 5-acre playground. Jaycees, volunteers from the city's military bases, off-duty city employees, civic league members and "just citizens" pitched in. Private companies, the military and the city gave materials and the use of heavy machinery.

2. ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT. A citizens' organization, the Virginia Beach Development Council, during 1969, forcefully substituted action for talk. The 35-member group, using its own funds, produced an accurate profile of the city's natural resources, labor market and other data. Then in August the Development Council held refined suggestions before City Council.

Three months later virtually all of the proposals, including creation of a Department of Economic Development and professional coordination of all promotional efforts, were incorporated into the city manager's administrative reorganization and adopted unanimously by City Council. Also, a YBDC idea led to formation of an industry-hunting "Committee of 100," and there is evidence of a new unity between the Chamber of Commerce, innkeepers and restaurant associations, Homebuilders and other groups.

3. SERVICEMEN'S HOSPITALITY HOUSE. A single-story, 20-room wooden building used as municipal offices for 24 years was tagged "surplus property" in April 1969, and was scheduled to be knocked down for a parking lot. But, businessman Almy W. Cohen and the Ministerial Association mustered public opinion to stop the bulldozer and talked the city into a $1-a-year lease. By July 1, 1969, the renovated structure was open as a servicemen's "home away from home." All labor, materials and furnishings were donated by clubs and private citizens.

Jaycees Hopeful But...

While City Manager Roger M. Scott's report to City Council Monday may have indicated that a surfing contest will be held at Camp Pendleton Aug. 29 and 30, Virginia Beach Jaycees, sponsors of the East Coast Surfing Championships, aren't committed.

"We stand a fairly good chance," said H. Jack Jennings, a Jaycee closely associated with the Jaycee-sponsored Virginia Surfing Association. "But I don't have anything to back that up."

Jennings said that what appeared to be an announcement by Scott that the area had been secured was actually premature because Gov. Linwood Holton hadn't even received the request for use of the National Guard camp.

"We're waiting to hear his response," Jennings said, "but what people have to realize is that we've been working on this project for the past several months and it's just now beginning to surface."

In a meeting with city and state officials at the camp, Jennings said that the Jaycees were told that if the contest were to be held there, increased traffic controls would have to be instituted, sanitary facilities made available, drink and food concessions established and a guarantee for safety given.

If the contest, now scheduled to be held at Sandbridge in the Little Island surfing area, is moved to Camp Pendleton, contest chairman Ray S. (Buddy)

Opposes Busing

Speaking at a press conference during the Virginia Beach Jaycees "press night" Tuesday, U.S. Senator Harry F. Byrd, Jr., discusses busing and what he termed artificially balanced school systems. Byrd also said that the recent acceptance by Egyptian President Gamal Nasser of a Middle East peace proposal should be examined critically before it is to be accepted as sincere.

City Position Filled

A. James DeBellis, 46, has been named the City's first Director of Economic Development. City Manager Roger M. Scott Jr. announced Monday.

The move is part of a major administrative re-organization, part of Scott's plan to streamline city administration.

Scott also announced that Samuel W. Scott Jr. is being promoted from his position as director of the Civic Center to head of the Tourist Division within the economic development department. Scott will assume his new duties immediately.

According to a proposed plan for re-organization released last year, the director of economic development would be charged with increasing retail and tourist trade within the city, encouraging increased industrial expansion and location in the city as well as developing new tourist attractions for the city.

DeBellis is now a public relations manager of the Potomac Edison Company in Hagerstown, Md., having served with that company for 18 years. He has also served as an area development representative, a senior industrial representative, a community development coordinator, a commercial development specialist and as a farm representative.

Besides the tourist division, the new Department of Economic Development will also include the Industrial Division. During the next several months DeBellis will double as department director and head of the Industrial Division.

The Industrial division's functions include promotion and development of Rudee Inlet, general commerce, new industries, and a new airport.

The Tourist Division's responsibilities include management of the Civic Center, convention solicitations, operation of city-owned marinas, tourist attractions and tourist promotions.

DeBellis is a native of Pittsburgh, Pa., and earned a B.S. degree in commerce from Grove City College.

He belongs to several professional organizations such as the Public Utilities Association of the Virginias (a past chairman), the Southeastern Electric Exchange and the Engineering Society of Pennsylvania. His fraternal ties include the Rotary Club, Lions Club, Delta Iota Kappa and Pi Kappa Delta.

DeBellis is married to the former Sally Jane McKinley and they are parents of two daughters, 16-year-old Margaret Jane and 12-year-old Barbara Frances.

He will assume his new position September 1.

Horse Show

Is Planned

The 4th Annual Bayside Fraternal Horse Show, sponsored by Bayside Charity Lodge, will be held August 15-16 at Greenbrier Farms, Military Highway, Chesapeake.

In case of rain, the show will be the following weekend.

Program Explores Astronomy

The Virginia Beach City Public Schools Planetarium program for the public during the month of August will be "The Planets."

This program is one of the continuing series in the history of astronomy in which we will explain the theories of the origin of the planets, and discuss the planets. August's program is directly related to the two previous programs "Celestial Mechanics of the Solar System" (how the planets stay in orbit), and "Of Life and Light" (our sun, the source of all our energy).

Through the use of the planetarium, the audience will see the paths of the planets through the star field—specifically the constellations of the Zodiac. With the aid of slides telescopic views of some of the planets will be shown.

The program dates and times are as follows: Sunday, 8 to 9 p.m., on the 23rd and 30th; Tuesday 7:30 to 8:30 p.m., on the 18th and 25th.

There will be no programs on Sunday 2, 9, 16 or Tuesday 4 and 11 as the director will be attending a planetarium workshop in Pennsylvania for that two week period.

The planetarium is air conditioned, seats 120, and is easily accessible from the 44 tollroad by taking the Lynnhaven exit to Lynnhaven Road. Telephone the main office at the Plaza Junior High School office 486-1971 for reservations. Admission free.

In commemoration of the anniversary of the first manned lunar landing of Armstrong, Aldrin, and Collins on July 20, 1969, the Virginia Beach City Public Schools Planetarium offers to the public the NASA 1/3 scale command and lunar modules on display in the student commons of the Plaza Junior High School. Doors open Monday through Friday to the public until 3 p.m.

For Miss America, Pamela Ann Eldred, Virginia Beach has often represented a place for a brief respite from her hectic schedule of appearances. Thus it was that she chose Virginia Beach as her base last Wednesday when she visited Tidewater to participate in opening ceremonies at the new First and Merchants National Bank in Chesapeake.

Safety Clinic Is Sat.

Boaters, swimmers, water skiers and other water sport enthusiasts are invited to attend a "Water Safety Clinic" this Saturday.

The clinic is being sponsored by the Virginia Beach Safety Council and will feature instruction in various fundamentals of general boating and water sports.

The clinic will be in operation on a continuous basis from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the public boat ramp at the end of 64th Street. Those desiring to participate in the clinic may reach the area by car by driving through Seaside State Park or by boat through waters of the "Narrows."

In the event of inclement weather the clinic will be rescheduled at the same location during the same hours next Saturday, Aug. 6.

Astro-Advice

ing marriage, indicates the possibilities of some rather strong points of conflict.

It would seem that you must decide if you know what love is. I do not say this lightly, since it is my experience that not many people have a very clear picture of the nature of love. If you feel that you love each other and are mature enough for the difficulties that even a very good marriage will present, you can have a wonderful life together.

Q: My life has been filled with heartache, heartbreak and frustration and just plain "bad luck." May I expect any good "happenings" before I pass on? Signed GEM

A: One of the really sad things about being an astrologer, but one of the things that make it all worth while, is receiving letters such as this.

You are one of those people born with an extremely difficult horoscope and it is evident that you have suffered the pangs of disillusionment and the frustration of every hope you have ever had. It is for this very reason that I become somewhat infuriated when I hear people with good horoscopes say we can make life beautiful through positive thinking and faith. I am sure you have tried all that. I will bet that given the horoscope you have they would not have fared any better.

The key point in your horoscope is the planet Mars. This is the planet of tremendous energy, and is the vital force in your horoscope. In your chart it is located in the house dealing with the home. Stationed there, it is sure to have presented many periods where the home has not been so sweet. Two of these aspects are nearly exact malefic aspects to the planet Venus and the planet Jupiter. Venus is placed in the sign of Virgo and is in the house dealing with your personal affairs. Venus is the planet of beauty and love, and if it had been there, well, aspected, you would have seen life as a beautiful and loving experience.

Jupiter is in the house dealing with the marriage and partner relationships. Since it is receiving a powerful malefic aspect from Mars this has surely made any partnerships you have had less than perfect. Combining the influences of the three planets, and their relationships, we see a picture of a sensitive person who has longed for a happy home and a loving partner, but has received ashes for her reward.

The area dealing with finances, in the chart, is not so badly afflicted but there is an indication that money has been quite elusive at times. While you have probably had enough to eat, you have not had a soft and cushioned life. I must state that some of the problems have been of your making, however, basically through a lack of self-understanding. With Venus in the sign of Virgo, the sign of the virgin, and Mars in the easy going sign of Sagittarius, in adverse relationship to each other, it is obvious that you have not been consistent where your affections were concerned. You were not too wise in that department of your life, I might add.

As far as your future is concerned it would seem certain that since you are sixty seven years of age, you are no longer seeking employment. It is possible that you are still seeking the purpose of life and the meaning of love, however, I would like to offer a thought on these points if I may be permitted to do so. After years of talking with people who have lived with horoscopes such as you have, it has become clear to me that there is a reason for having the difficulties you obviously have had. That reason is beautifully and completely described by the prophet Gibran, in his discourse on Pleasure and Pain. He states that your pain is the breaking of the shell that encases your understanding.

The last few years have been difficult, I am sure, but you still have ample time left to make many discoveries. The next year or two can still be difficult, but you should have a period of relative calm thereafter. If you will take this time to investigate some of the great wisdom that has been handed down to man through the centuries it can be a rewarding experience. I will be happy to see that you get some books on these subjects if you are interested. All you need do is drop me a note.

Servicemen Two Join Larasan

Get More Insurance

The President has just signed into law a bill which automatically increases life insurance coverage from $10,000 to $15,000 for more than 3,500,000 servicemen, the Veterans Administration has reported.

The new law also covers about 1,000,000 reservists and members of the National Guard and the Reserve Officers Training Corps (ROTC), the Roanoke VA Regional Office said today.

However, these groups are protected only during certain training activities, and while they are traveling to and from training areas, VA said.

Servicemen on active duty will now pay $3 instead of $2 monthly for the increased $15,000 coverage, while premiums for reservists, members of the ROTC and National Guard will be $1.80 per year.

The law also extends from 120 days to one year the insurance of full-time servicemen who are totally disabled at the time of military separation, if their condition remains unchanged.

Reservists, members of the ROTC and National Guard are insured for 90 days after a training period, if they suffer a serious disability while training.

Insurance coverage for most servicemen continues for 120 days after separation, during which time they may convert to individual policies to continue protection indefinitely. The life insurance program for servicemen is supervised by the VA, but is provided under a commercial life insurance policy in which about 600 companies participate.

He Prefers Short Hair

While lengths for stylish hair appear to be growing longer, a Virginia Beach barber who won second place in a statewide hair styling contest says that long locks aren't necessary and that he doesn't like them.

"I like it short," said Gus Kolantis, who took the second place award during a hair styling contest at the 13th annual Associated Master Barber and Beauticians of Virginia educational convention.

Kolantis said that "some of the teenagers call us old-timers but I still like it short."

And while his political point of view isn't known, Kolantis does agree with Vice Pres. Agnew on the influence of the media.

"The kids watch television and they see the stars come out with the long hair that's been styled. Then they grow theirs long."

But Kolantis said that what the young people fail to realize is that the personalities had just left a makeup and hairstyling session before they appeared.

Kolantis said that the publicity has been good for the hairstylists but has been generally bad for haircutters, which he likes to call himself.

"What's hurt is that people aren't getting their hair cut like they used to. Now people go for three months without haircuts instead of 10 to 14 days like they used to."

"They all think that you have to have long hair to get it styled, and that isn't true," he said. "A good hairstyle should be full on the sides, long in the back, and layered on top."

But he said that when he says long in back, he actually means down to the natural hair line where the hair stops growing. That, he said, gives the hair a shaped look but actually follows the natural look since it is where it "intended" to stop.

And as far as the long hair on top goes, if it's layered properly, it shouldn't be longer than three inches.

The 45-year-old Cypriot said that when a customer comes in, he may suggest a hairstyle, but the final decision as to how the hair will be cut lies with the client.

"He's the one who has to put up with it," he said, "but I still like to make suggestions."

Kolantis said he learned how to be a haircutter from his father, brother and uncle when he lived in Cyprus. "I was the one who cut all of my friends' hair and all of the people who couldn't afford to have a haircut."

"That was the way I learned and I started at the bottom. When I first went in, I swept the floors."

Learning hairstyling, however, was a bit more difficult, he said, because of the various styles.

And besides, I like to be individual about my work. I take a little from here, a little from there, and then put it my imagination does the rest of the work," said Kolantis.

Kolantis said he had entered the hairstyling contest twice before and both times lost. "I wasn't going to enter this one but I talked to my model and decided to go ahead." With the deadline for entry only 30 minutes away, Kolantis had to send for his tools at the Plaza Trail Barber Shop.

Once in the contest area, however, Kolantis said he didn't have any troubles. There were about 200 people watching, but he said he knew he had to concentrate. Otherwise, "I don't know what I would have done, I get nervous when people watch me cut hair."

Kolantis said the judges came around to examine the models before the show to see if they had been "pre-cut" so there would be no cheating.

"About the only thing we could do is wash their hair before the show," he said that the only way to style hair is to have it perfectly clean, otherwise it will not be cut properly.

However, for a simple haircut, it's best to have the hair oily because it can be cut easier.

"They gave us 25 minutes to cut the hair and then they examined that. Then we had 20 minutes to style it."

"The judges, they just walked around and didn't tell us anything about how we were doing. When I found out I had won, I was really surprised."

Even with the new trophy in the window, it hasn't made much difference to Kolantis or his business. "I like to cut hair better than style it," and for the number two hairstylist in the state, that's a big admission.

New Traffic Program To Be Studied

An operational study on a new traffic program, which will include Virginia Beach, is scheduled to get under way this week under the sponsorship of the Southeastern Virginia Planning District Commission.

The Traffic Operations Program to Increase Capacity and Safety, abbreviated as TOPICS, is being conducted in cooperation with the Virginia Department of Highways and the Bureau of Public Roads. It will also cover the cities of Chesapeake, Norfolk, Portsmouth and Suffolk.

The TOPICS program has been formulated by the Federal Government in recognition of the increasing traffic congestion problems prevalent in the nation's cities and towns. Under this program Federal funds are made available for the improvement of urban arterial streets and highways that were not previously eligible for federal aid under existing programs.

TOPICS does not involve major new construction, but is intended to maximize the efficiency and safety of traffic flow on existing streetsystems. Types of improvements considered under this program are chiefly operational in nature and can usually be implemented within existing rights-of-way, although reconstruction and roadway widening outside of existing right-of-way limits are considered in some cases.

The engineering firm of Tipper - Abbott - McCarthy - Stratten has been retained to conduct the study under a $290,000 contract. The firm has completed TOPICS programs in such cities as Dover and Somersworth, New Hampshire; Charleston, West Virginia and New Castle, Pennsylvania. It conducted a number of simi-

A Great Honor

National recognition has come to Virginia Beach at long last, not for its highly praised ocean-front and resort area but for its "citizen action" achievements. It is primarily because of three major citizen-sponsored projects that Virginia Beach has been named among the 22 finalists in the All-America City title.

The recognition is especially significant for a city as large and as wide-spread as Virginia Beach. A city basically comprised of satellite communities seldom achieves the unity necessary for such accomplishments.

It is also significant that this honor has come in just seven years after the merger of the small resort city of Virginia Beach and the primarily agricultural Princess Anne County. The combining of two such unrelated communities into one large, rambling city was a monumental task and the lack of severe problems can only be attributed to proper guidance, good leadership and exceptional citizen support.

There have been problems, of course, and there will continue to be problems. The city acknowledged these in its application for the title. To have done otherwise would have presented Virginia Beach as an unrealistic Utopia rather than an average American city that tackled its failings head-on and took steps not only to solve existing problems but took constructive action to offset potential problems.

The application makes note of the fact that the city is faced with such rapid growth and development (22 per cent of Virginia's 1969 construction was in Virginia Beach) that there is considerable need for extended water and sewer utilities and that lack of large industry has affected job opportunities. The main point, however, is that the city does not ignore these hurdles; that constructive steps have already been taken in each of these areas.

Virginia Beach has not yet won the All-America City title. Only 11 of the 22 finalists will achieve that honor. Before the winners are announced next January each of the finalists must make a presentation before a jury of experts and must be subjected to an on-the-scene investigation.

It is hoped, of course, by all its citizens that this city will be a final winner. But regardless of the outcome, Virginia Beach has accomplished a great honor and congratulations are due all those who have helped her achieve this status.

The Spirit of Seatack

While Virginia Beach as a whole is basking in the glory of having been selected as a finalist in the All-America City competition, the Seatack community is basking in its own hard-earned glory. The clean-up campaign that started a year ago has been completed and its success far surpasses the anticipated goal.

The city's honor was greatly influenced by this one project for it is on just such community spirit as shown in Seatack that the national award is based.

But those who initiated and carried to completion the clean-up campaign would have deserved praise from the citizens of this city regardless of the national honor that has come to Virginia Beach. It is a tremendous accomplishment and should be recognized on its own merit.

The deplorable conditions in Seatack first came to light in June of 1969 when the city held a public hearing on a land use plan for the total area. The Virginia Beach Jaycees picked up the ball and called for support from civic leagues, military officials and city employees. Women's groups and hundreds of private citizens heeded this cry for help and by November the clean-up project was under way.

In the weeks that followed, Seatack became a beehive of activity. Up to 300 volunteer workers at a time spread across the community collecting and hauling away tons of trash and old abandoned automobiles from the area. Volunteer firemen demolished condemned buildings, garden club members obtained donated plants and shrubs and supervised their planting, homeowners and non-resident volunteers scraped and painted and improved homes and fences, women prepared and served meals to the workers.

They all worked side by side, the men and women, the young and old, the military and civilian, the white and non-white. More than 25,000 manhours and thousands of dollars worth of donated materials and equipment brought the project to a successful close.

What took place in Seatack is unquestionable proof of what can be accomplished when private citizens band together for one cause, when old prejudices give way to concern for one's fellowman, when personal interests are set aside for community progress.

The Seatack project had generated untold rewards, not the least of which is the great sense of pride it has given those who have known only despair.

Opposes School

To the Editor:

Recently, the city of Virginia Beach School Board announced their decision to construct an elementary school on a site located in the Seashore State Park, adjacent to Fort Story. The city obtained the land by leasing it for one dollar a year from the State Parks commission. The Board has spent many months in preparation for this project, however, they have been able to keep it entirely under-the-rapids until quite recently. This was, I suppose, because of expected opposition from the residents of the north end of Virginia Beach. I believe their opposition to the project is wrong; who could argue against the following reasons.

The site in question is a tract of land, located in Seashore State Park, adjacent to Fort Story. It consists of thirty-foot sand dunes, swamps and marshes, beautiful trees and shrubs, and abundant wildlife. For the site to be firm enough to allow a school to be built there, the area would have to be bulldozed over, filled to the treeline with sand, and then paved over. Along with several prayers that the school will not sink during the next ten years; the beauty of the area will be destroyed, all the wildlife will be driven out, and the cost of such a project will dig deeply into the city and eventually the tax-payers pocket.

One other fact persists, a survey showed that the elementary-age school children in question do not live in an area close to the school the larger percentage of the children are found in the area around 31st Street.

Another fact puzzles me, how is it that the city school board is allowed to rent the land from the State Parks commission? Where does the commission obtain the authority to lease our state-owned land, at one dollar a year, for the exclusive use of the school board? Suppose the commission decided to lease the land to anyone who felt they had a valid reason for using it. I am afraid there would not be too much recreation land left in the future.

The Virginia Beach School Board says the school will be built on the Seashore State Park site. If they are allowed to go ahead with their plans, it will be at a high expense to lovers of nature, taxpayers, and even mother nature herself. James Eldridge

Praises City Officials

To the Editor:

Recently Mr. White and I had occasion to spend several days at Virginia Beach in an ocean-front hotel. It has been several years since we were there last. We wish to commend your city and your splendid Police Officers for the outstanding improvement in the whole atmosphere of the beach area. The cleanliness on and around the beach was most remarkable—no litter, no insects, no bad odors! The behavior of the public, day and night, was quite different from what we remembered there formerly—no drinking, no drums, no loud talking or acting. The Public seemed to have re-discovered respect for themselves and others.

We are not trying to flatter you, but we do want to express appreciation for the good job you folks are doing, and we have had much to say about it since we have returned home. True, we saw several officers in uniform, and patrol cars up and down the beach and walks—but they were not "after" anyone! We cannot help wondering how you do it? Nancy H. and Burton K. White Danville, Virginia

Favor Pop Event

To the Editor:

I do not have a clipping from the Va. Beach Sun to accompany this letter, but I do wish to express my views about the pop festival at Pungo. I have many friends at Pungo that I have spoken to about this suggestion, among them some friends from Norfolk. By a complete majority vote of fifteen persons, all voted for the pop festival. I hope you can come through with this suggestion. I am sure you have our vote and many others. Ray Alexander

To the Editor:

I think a pop festival at Pungo would be very good, both for business and for pleasure. Speaking for myself and the teenagers that I know, we would love a pop festival. Everyone can relax and enjoy the music and really rap with people their own age.

I approve of this motion completely and will be a very willing part of it. Rosey McBride

From Virginia Beach Library

A PARENT'S GUIDE TO CHILDREN'S READING, by Nancy Larrick.

How many times have you as a parent asked "Are my children reading the books that are appropriate for their reading level?" This question has been asked frequently at the library, particularly with the summer reading program underway. There is a handbook for parents written by Nancy Larrick and sponsored by the National Book Committee entitled A PARENT'S GUIDE TO CHILDREN'S READING, which describes specific activities to help children read with greater skill and pleasure.

The book begins with a baby who is eight or nine months old who finds delight in simple nursery rhymes. It proceeds to the 12 year old youngster, who usually likes humorous books such as CHITTY - CHITTY - BANG - BANG, animal stories such as LASSIE COME HOME, by Eric Knight, and historical books written with a keen sense of the dramatic, such as THE STORY OF D-DAY: JUNE 6, 1944, by Bruce Bliven, Jr. The annotated lists for the different age groups and the discussion or dictionaries, atlases, and encyclopedias are especially helpful. A PARENT'S GUIDE is an interesting and knowledgeable discussion of how parents can help their children to know and enjoy books.

KEEP OFF THE GRASS

By W. A. Lovell, Ph.D.

Reassurance From Americans

Do you ever have the feeling that you must be all alone in what you believe? Do you ever wonder if everyone else could be deaf, dumb and blind?

This morning I had such a feeling. It started when I got up and read my morning newspaper. I don't have much choice if I wish to read a fairly current morning newspaper. I can have my choice of two in this state. One is a dedicated, open heart, super liberal New Left chain paper that makes my blood pressure boil every time I read its distortion of current events. The other is just an ordinary paper that leaves much to be desired. Since both practice the fine art of overlooking some news they don't like, I read them both just to be sure I don't miss anything. This morning they both were in rare form.

Of course it didn't help matters when I watched the national news on TV. I get the impression all three networks have decided to prove Vice-President Agnew correct in saying they are slanting the news. Goodness knows, if they aren't, we have gone well down the road to ruin and damnation.

My big mistake was in going downtown this morning. You see, I live in one of those areas where most of the people believe the worst sin in the world is to get involved in anything. Most of the local people have lost what courage and self respect they ever had. When you can get one to express an opinion, they seem to feel freedom is not worth a single life or any effort. I don't believe most of them would defend their country, their family, or themselves if an enemy landed on the dock down by the sardine factory. I think they would just stand around and say "Peace Brother" or go about their business and ignore the whole thing. For the most part, they are not "Dores," they are more like "Hummingbirds."

This once hallowed freedom has degenerated to a frightened flock of second class citizens. They are afraid to have an opinion, much less stand up for it.

When I got disgusted and returned home I picked up one of the mass circulation picture magazines and beat me over the head with its super liberalism and modern version of the way to peace and plenty through riots and violence.

As if that was not enough, one of my acquaintances in the academic community called me and wanted me to serve on some committee dedicated to the cause of peace by doing away with all our armed forces and outlawing war by an act of Congress.

The next went on to tell me what a wonderful new University they could build once the grand and glorious students finished burning the present one down. He seemed shocked when I told him I didn't want anything to do with him, his committee or his new University.

By this time I had that feeling. Could the great America I know and love have silently folded its tent and slipped away during the night? Could someone have put something into the water to dissolve the backbone of the people in their mad rush to the altar of liberalism to be sacrificed like so many sheep?

Then the miracle happened. The mail came. The postman handed me a stack of letters and soon all was back to normal. My faith was restored and my fears were quelled.

In my mail were letters from all over the country. They were from cities, towns and many with rural route numbers for return addresses. These letters were from REAL Americans, the ones who still care and who are concerned.

Many simply wanted to express approval of a column they had read or to say "Well Done." Some had ideas they felt would make good background for future columns.

The ones that really gave me faith in the future were the ones that said how they felt and asked what they can do to help bring this great country back to the road of lasting freedom, under God and with the hope of not just a tomorrow but a bright tomorrow.

I can't reply to each individual letter so let me say to all those real Americans who want to know if they can do anything—YES, THEY CAN DO SOMETHING! They still have two great freedoms—freedom of speech and the vote. Good people, say what you feel, be concerned, inform yourself, take part in the process of your government, write letters, get out and work for the political candidates of your choice and most important of all...VOTE! Cast your vote intelligently and it will be felt around the world.

Pop Festival Proves Favorable

Some of the more staid residents of Virginia Beach probably were surprised at the outcome of last week's Sun Survey question: "Would an outdoor pop festival at Pungo be beneficial to the city?"

The response was 60 per cent in favor of such an event. Some of those who voted "no" to the question were quite vehement in their opposition but others softened their response with comments of explanation.

One such reader voted against the pop festival but took the time to explain why: "Unfortunately, there are apparently a few who spoil what might be a fine assembly and fellowship for youth."

A number of those in favor made comments such as "there's not enough for young people to do in Virginia Beach." "This could put Pungo on the map." "Why shouldn't teenagers have a chance to enjoy our own music?" etc.

The supporters of the festival are probably the young people of this city, in mind if not in fact. And their comments prompted this week's Sun Survey.

Bond Sale Set Again

City Council Monday was told that the twice postponed sale of $4.75 million in school construction bonds was on again and will take place Tuesday at noon at a special Council meeting.

The sale, part of an overall $17 million bond issue approved in November, 1968, was first scheduled for August 1969 but was postponed due to poor bond market conditions.

It was rescheduled again for April but was again postponed due to market conditions. Sale of the bonds will be handled through the Virginia Beach Public School Authority.

In other action Monday, Council:

Approved a use permit application by the Hudson Oil Company to construct a service station on Princess Anne Road near Newtown Road despite a recommendation for denial of the request by the Planning Commission. Planning Director Charles C. Carrington told Council there were 11 stations within a half-mile radius of the proposed station.

Approved a loan of $150,000 to the School board for planning purposes, working drawings and the purchase of an elementary school site. The appropriation is to be repaid with funds from a future bond issue.

Approved a $15,000 loan to the Atlantic Mental Health Center to pay final construction bills for the facility.

Approved the expenditure of $18,314 for 23 portable radios and accessories for the Police Department. The approval was given so the city could receive a National Highway Safety Bureau grant for funding of the project.

Approved a use permit application by the Ott Investment Corporation to construct 140 apartment units for the elderly in the Springwood Woods area.

Local students achieving honorable mention on the Dean's List were Clara P. Barnight, Dennis P. DiCampi, Cam L. Garner, Janice L. Gordon, John Knopp, Robert A. Perry and Reginald H. Soule.

Jaycees

Twine said the major problem will be telling the surfers and spectators where it's going to be.

"I'm not talking about the people around here, though," he said. "I'm talking about the surfers up and down the coast and those in the rest of the world who might be coming."

Twine said that the Jaycees had planned to bus people from the resort strip area to the Sandbridge contest, and that the plan will probably be continued if camp use is secured.

But Twine was generally optimistic about the event. "They're waiting for a reaction," he said.

"I feel like this is a pilot. If it's approved, all the state and city officials are going to be watching the contest and looking at the conduct of the surfers and spectators."

He said that if the camp is used, he expects about 10,000 spectators will see the contest during the two day period and that he will have to cut the number of contestants off at 400.

"If it goes off, it could determine the success of surfing in the city for the next five or ten years," Twine said.

Robert L. Warren, Jaycees president, said he didn't expect that a decision would be made on the use of Camp Pendleton until some time next week. "We had hoped to keep the whole thing quiet until we had something concrete."

And until that decision is made, he said, "It's all speculation."

Alleged Concealment Resulted in Charges

James W. Taylor is scheduled to appear in Juvenile Court Friday on two charges of contributing to the delinquency of a minor in connection with the operation of a "Runaway House" in Virginia Beach.

Taylor, 22, has been identified as manager of the facility in the 300 block of 22nd Street. Officials said the "Runaway House" derived its name from the procedure of offering a sanctuary to young people who were "running away," and that the facility was permitted to operate on the grounds that when a child sought refuge in the house the child would be required to notify its parents of his or her whereabouts or police would be notified of the child's presence.

Lt. Henry Cappe, director of the police Juvenile Division, said Taylor's arrest was based on his lack of adhering to regulations established for operation of the facility.

Cappe indicated the contributing charges resulted from Taylor's alleged willful concealment of a 14-year-old Virginia Beach girl and a 16-year-old Norfolk girl, in that while the girls were given refuge in the Runaway House notification of their presence there was not made to the girls' parents or police.

When asked if he could elaborate on the method of operation of the Runaway House Cappe replied, "This operation appears to be supported by several churches in the area. However, we feel the ideas of the persons supporting this and the ideas of those persons actually operating the house differ greatly."

In responding to the question of whether any additional arrests were anticipated in connection with operation of the Runaway House Cappe said, "There is evidence in our possession to substantiate charges against other persons in connection with this operation if we so desire, but it is our intention to correct this situation with the least embarrassment to those officially or unofficially connected with this operation."

Police Round Up Dozen

Police Vice Squad investigators arrested 12 persons, eight juveniles and four adults, during a series of drug investigations in Virginia Beach last Saturday night and Sunday morning.

Two of the adults and six juveniles were arrested during an investigation on the beach and boardwalk between 22nd and 24th Streets. Each of the accused was charged with possession of marijuana, which officials said resulted from their being observed in the process of smoking marijuana cigarettes. Authorities identified the adults as David L. Ponson, 22, of Carrollton, Va., and Billy J. Phillips, Jr., 19, of Virginia Beach.

Authorities said a 16-year-old juvenile was charged with the sale of narcotics as the result of his alleged sale of hashish on three occasions. Officials said the sales allegedly occurred on 21st Street and near 22nd Street and Pacific Avenue.

Two adults and one juvenile were arrested during a drug investigation at a home in the 1800 block of Oceana Blvd. Officials said Doris Charpentier, 20, was charged with possession of marijuana following the alleged discovery of a quantity of marijuana in a suitcase belonging to her in the bedroom of the home.

Investigators said that when they entered the bedroom they discovered a 15-year-old girl and a 19-year-old male in a state of complete undress. The girl was charged with lewd and lascivious conduct while the male, identified by officials as SN David L. Woznicki attached to the Dam Neck Naval Installation, was charged with lewd and lascivious conduct and contributing to the delinquency of a minor.

Two Convicted in Court

George J. Schaum, III, and Edward T. Flynn, were convicted of violating state narcotic and drug laws in separate court trials this past week.

Schaum, 18, of Quail Point Road, pled guilty to three counts of the sale of hashish which reportedly occurred on Feb. 28 and April 3. He also pled guilty in Circuit Court to a charge of possession of narcotics in regards to incidents which occurred on April 28 and May 11, which involved his being in possession of marijuana.

Judge Paul W. Ackiss delayed sentencing of Schaum pending the outcome of an investigation of his background.

Flynn, 22, of 27th Street, was found guilty in Municipal Court of the possession of marijuana. Officials said Flynn was arrested June 27 on a charge of possession of hashish when he was discovered to be carrying a small pipe which reportedly contained traces of the drug. Flynn was arrested on the drug charge while being served with a capias warrant in regards to a previous Circuit Court proceeding.

Associate Judge Frank Butler, III, reduced the charge of possession of hashish to a charge of possession of marijuana, and fined Flynn $100 and sentenced him to 30 days

Charged in Shooting

Edward Tobaise is scheduled to appear in Virginia Beach Municipal Court on Aug. 17 on a charge of attempted murder. Police officials said Tobaise, 40, is charged with the shooting of Mary E. Gatling during an argument in the living room of his Carver Avenue home.

Tobaise allegedly shot the 43-year-old woman, who resided in a neighboring house, five times in the chest with a .22 caliber pistol. Hospital officials said the woman was making satisfactory recovery from her wounds.

Sentence Begins Sept. 1

Shelton W. Godwin is scheduled to begin serving a five years' prison sentence on Sept. 1 following his conviction of manslaughter and attempted murder charges in Circuit Court.

Godwin, 39, of Lauderdale Avenue, entered court charged with murder and attempted murder in connection with a shooting incident last March 24 at the Duck-in restaurant near Leaner Bridge on Shore Drive.

Police charged Godwin with murder in the fatal shooting of Carl C. Frey, 23, of 7th Street, and attempted murder in the wounding of Richard F. Plant, 23, attached to the Norfolk Naval Station.

According to investigators the shootings occurred outside the restaurant after an argument involving the men which began a few moments earlier inside the Duck-in.

Court proceedings were started on the attempted murder charge, with the murder charge being continued. Godwin had pled not guilty to the charge.

During jury deliberation of the testimony presented in the hearing the murder charge was reduced to manslaughter and Godwin entered a plea of guilty to both charges.

Judge Robert S. Wahab, Jr. sentenced Godwin to a five year prison sentence on the manslaughter conviction and a one year prison sentence on the attempted murder conviction with both sentences to run concurrently.

Judge Wahab allowed Godwin to remain free on $20,000 bond to put his personal affairs in order and ordered him to report to Virginia Beach City Jail on September 1 to begin serving his sentence.

Two Fined

Circuit Court Judge Paul W. Ackiss has convicted Richard W. Mandelkorn, 26, and Walter A. Holt, 21, of possession of dangerous drugs, and fined each of them $150 as well as giving both of them suspended 12 month jail sentences.

Both had been charged with possession of narcotics last April 24 when police reported finding several live marijuana plants and a quantity of hashish in the New Bridge Road home.

During their court appearance Holt and Mandelkorn pleaded guilty to a lesser charge of possession of dangerous drugs.

Case Continued 4th Time

The case of Paul J. Dolan was continued generally during Municipal Court proceedings Wednesday. This marked the fourth continuance of Dolan's trial since his arrest on July 1 following a chase involving Dolan's 36 foot cabin cruiser, the city's police patrol boat, and the U.S. Coast Guard Unit.

The five episodes resulted in Dolan, 46, of Fitzhugh Avenue, Richmond, Va., being charged with two counts of reckless boating, resisting arrest, cursing and abuse of police officers, and disturbing the peace.

Although Dolan was convicted of the charges, in his absence, in Municipal Court on July 8 resulting in his being fined $400 and being given a suspended 30-day jail sentence, his attorney

Edward T. (Ned) Caton, III, received approval of a motion to set the verdict aside and have the case continued. The approval resulted from an apparent legal oversight. The case had been rescheduled, and subjected to continuances, on each succeeding Wednesday in Municipal Court.

Circuit Court Judge Philip L. Russo had denied a writ of prohibition from Attorney Caton which contended that to rehear the case would place Dolan under double jeopardy. Russo indicated his denial was based on previous court precedent's that the decree or order on Dolan's initial trial had not become final, and therefore, the case was still under jurisdiction of the Municipal Court. This opinion of Judge Russo's, in denying the writ of prohibition, has now been appealed by Attorney Caton.

The decision to continue the case generally was made at the request of Asst. City Atty. David R. Dickerson. This request was contained in a letter to Judge of Municipal Court which stated in part that "Judge Russo has just entered an order suspending all rehearings or retrials by the Municipal Court of Paul J. Dolan until final decision, and disposition of the writ of prohibition, or until the time of perfecting and appeal has expired."

by police units in the Ocean View region of Norfolk.

Coffield said his investigation indicates the three suspects previously escaped from custody at the Bon Aire Diagnostic Center in Chesterfield County, and went on a 15 day "crime spree" before their arrival in Virginia Beach.

According to Coffield the three are believed to have substituted by making use of stolen credit cards, using stolen automobiles for transportation, and through the larceny of food and money.

One of the two suspects in custody is being detained by officials in Chester, Va., while the other is in custody at Roanoke. A search is continuing for the remaining suspect.

"The happy I am when I'm straight is more beautiful than the happy I seemed to be when I was stoned."

The girl in the picture is named Chris. For over a year, she was on amphetamines, powerful drugs known as "speed." This is how she describes it:

"I think 'speed' is a lot worse than heroin. Kids have got to know about it, because they can fall so easily into taking it through the diet pill hassle, or needing something to help them study. You know, that's crazy. Because the combination of amphetamines and no sleep just blows your memory completely. There are whole sections of my life which I just can't remember. It got to be just 'do a little more, do a little more,' until that was all there was. And the 'crashing'... sometimes the 'crashing' is just really awful!

"For me to stop taking it, I had to feel that people were caring. And they were. I was really lucky. I was very close to two people that were really into amphetamines very deeply, and I loved them a lot. But as far as they were concerned, the only thing that they had was the 'meth,' and that was their life. And they're both dead now."

"Dexies," "bennies," "meth" are all called "speed" these days. And people who know "speed" know "speed" kills!

After only two years

Local migrant program is pace setter

By CAROLYN McALLEN

"You can see a change from the first day."

And that's what it's all about.

The comment was Herman Reid's. He is the program coordinator for the Virginia Beach educational program for children of migrant workers.

"Some are hostile when they come here," said Reid. "It just shows that if a person is nice to you it'll change your attitude."

The program is in its second year at Court House Elementary School operating under a federal grant of $52,000 from the State Department of Education.

One question about the value of the program is commonly raised by outsiders Reid said, and that is if a few weeks in the Virginia Beach program will have any lasting value in the children's lives. Reid said that one of the main purposes of the program is to instill an pany; also one to the Norfolk Museum. Then they will have a week of swimming lessons. "We're only concerned with the kids," commented Reid.

Last Friday the classes made a field trip to a restaurant for lunch. None had ever been in one before. Teachers had prepared them long in advance not only with the proper way to eat but to prepare them for stares from the public and the proper action to take (or not to take) if there were some food they did not like on their plates.

There are presently about 48 children enrolled in the program, but this figure varies from day to day as families leave the area following the crops and others come in. The youngest enrolled is just over two. "If they're toilet trained we'll take them," Reid said smiling.

"If he (the two-year-old) wasn't here he'd be in the fields, so we got him," added Mrs. Louise Powell, one of the teachers.

One of the accomplishments of the program is that there is no longer any problem of a child not having records, both scholastic and medical. A standard data bank has been established in Little Rock, Ark. The day the children leave Virginia Beach a copy of their record is forwarded to Little Rock. A second copy goes to Richmond and a third goes with the child. This helps the child maintain a more continuous educational program as well as avoiding the duplication of immunizations.

"Some of them are afraid of doctors because they've had so many shots," said Reid. "Everywhere they go everybody wants to help." The local Public Health Department gives what shots are needed.

Each child is given an initial physical examination followed by a dental check. Treatment, if needed, is prescribed. One child, on examination, was discovered to have been injured when struck by a truck two weeks earlier. Many suffer from infected insect bites.

Next each child is given two outfits of clothing. At the beginning of the program in late June, Sear's opened its doors an hour and a half early so that each child could be fitted. Later they were treated to a snack in the coffee shop in the store.

"Once you can communicate with them you see they appreciate everything you do for them," said Robert P. Stenzhorn, director of federal programs for the Virginia Beach Schools. "The parents of these children are just as interested in their children as any others—but they've never had anything to give them."

In just two years the Virginia Beach program has left its mark. "As a result of last year, word went back to Florida and we have more children than last year," said Stenzhorn.

Another important result of the two summers will be the complete curriculum guide for the migrant child which Virginia Beach educators are now compiling. It will be shared with the other states.

Stenzhorn said that each state has a migrant director which helps maintain the continuity in the educational program. In addition a bureau in Washington, D.C. coordinates the whole program. As recently as last Thursday teachers in the migrant program throughout the state met for an inservice conference.

Time is short since migrant workers in many areas are being replaced by automation. The goal is to prepare them for a better way of life -- or at least their children.

School Supt. E.E. Brickell has taken a special interest in the program. Stenzhorn said. He was keynote speaker on a conference on migrant education which drew about 450 people to Virginia Beach in May.

A typical day begins with a short assembly, then breakfast at 8 a.m. at the school, followed by a shower and change of clothing. The clothing is laundered at the school. The children also brush their teeth after each meal. "We drill them on taking care of their bodies and teeth," said Reid.

Classroom time is spent in language arts and enrichment, physical education, basic mathematics and field trips. The children also receive lunch and an early supper before being returned to the migrant camps. Included on the program staff are a full-time nurse, a reading specialist and a speech therapist. Many of the children have dialect problems so that they are difficult to understand. Although the local migrant workers are mostly Negro, on the Eastern Shore there are some 400 - 500 migrant workers who are Mexican-Americans from Texas.

Stenzhorn explained that a migrant is defined as a child of parents who travel from state to state harvesting crops. The migrants are divided into "streams." The Eastern Stream begins in Florida, travels through South Carolina, through Virginia and on to upstate New York and New Jersey and eventually to Maine. Those on the Eastern Shore belong to the Central Stream which starts out from Texas and travels mostly through the central states. The Western Stream also has Texas as a home base but follows crops through California and Oregon. Others come from as close as North Carolina. "Most specialize in a particular crop," explained Stenzhorn, who also works with the program on the Eastern Shore.

Showers were added to Court House Elementary School just for the program, along with a washing machine and dryer. Classes are held in portable classrooms at the school since they are air conditioned and the school is not.

"You get attached to them and hate to see them go," Reid said. He said they begin to arrive during the last of June and first of July and stay through the latter part of August. "If the crops are good they'll stay until they are finished," Reid explained, although he told of a sister and brother who came on Thursday and left the following Tuesday.

The staff was hand picked, Stenzhorn said for their "outstanding job" in the regular classroom. They visited migrant schools in Florida and observed many of the children now here, he added.

The local children are divided into three groups with a teacher and aide according to age. Because of the small size of the groups they are able to receive individual attention.

Reid, a six-foot-four former college football player, concluded by saying, "If you can just get a smile from these kids or a hug, then you know it's worth the tax money."

It's a long day for the cafeteria staff which prepares three meals daily for the children.

A stitch in time saves $$$

Never start sewing for your family. There's just no stopping it!

The nine-year-old has very definite ideas of what she wants--both in styles and colors. The plaid, which I thought was beautiful, turns out to be "icky" in her estimation. Nor can she understand why long sleeves and corduroy are more practical for fall and school wear than sleeveless dresses and culottes.

For everything I finish for the older one, the seven-year-old waits two. "You never make anything for me," she says. The fact that she has all her sister's hand-me-downs doesn't impress her in the least, even though I have made her several new things for her to shut her up.

Then little brother got into the act. He decided he was being neglected. So what choice did I have but to make him some bell bottoms? Not really. But I do have them cut out. His problem is that they don't make slim patterns for skinny little boys.

At first they weren't too enthusiastic about my sewing for them. Now, all of a sudden, they can hardly wait to get to me first with their requests. I'll be working on their wardrobe for 1970 through 1972!

I made one smart move. I didn't put them in any of the dresses. At least they can't outgrow them before school starts. Of course, I'm going to have a busy week when school does start.

But to top it all off, on our wedding anniversary recently, would you believe what my husband gave me? Material for myself. All I need now is time to do something with it.

New books are fun.

Rose Hall's Antiques

BRIDAL LANE

CIRCA 1920 By Eric Myatt

Do you believe in horoscopes or fortune tellers? Patricia Decker claims she didn't really but went to see a well known teller-of-fortunes at the Beach "just for fun." She was told (among many other things) that she would soon meet the man of her dreams and would be married.

Miss Uecker

Patti didn't put too much faith in this information, but, lo and behold, one night she was dragged away to a card party and there he was! Eventually it dawned on Patti that William J. Dewey, Jr., was exactly the bridegroom forecast for her.

Ironically, Patti's mother also sent to see the same fortune teller two weeks after Patti's visit, and many things were predicted for her—good and bad—which also came true. In fact, Patti's mother met and married as predicted her present husband, William F. Provost.

Patti and Bill are scheduled to be married at St. Pius Catholic Church on Aug. 29.

And would you believe it? Patti's mother met Mr. Provost—you guessed it—at a card party! Wonder if we could get in on the deal?

One of our new brides decided to start married life off right by inviting a few friends in for a fancy dinner, in order to break in all her new crystal, china and silver.

Her table was beautifully set, dinner went well and much to her satisfaction the dinner itself was quite good. Her ego was growing by the minute. Banana pudding was the dessert she had chosen, and this she served with a flourish, content that all had gone well for her first dinner party.

However, as she began to eat, she was a bit disappointed because her banana pudding didn't seem to taste quite as Mother had always turned out. But she couldn't figure out why it had such a bland taste.

After a bite or two it finally dawned on her what was wrong. "Yes, we have no bananas!"

Mother-in-law problems? Not this girl! Niki Christie is a lucky girl and for more reasons than one. When she visited Rose Hall to make the final decision on her bridesmaid's gowns, her future mother-in-law went along with her. They were so compatible, they seemed more like mother and daughter and finally the story of her engagement and approaching marriage to Robert A. Snowden unfolded.

Niki worked for Mrs. Snowden's doctor and evidently made quite an impression on Mrs. Snowden. So much so that on Robert's leave home from service he went to church with his parents where Mrs. Snowden spied Niki and pointed her out to her son saying, "There she is, that's the pretty girl I've been telling you about." Mrs. Snowden says Robert's eyes haven't been the same since. He evidently agreed with his mother because that night Niki received a phone call from Robert. They have been dating and corresponding for two years.

Their wedding date has been set for September. Robert still has a few more years in service and is presently stationed in Pensacola, Fla. Niki is taking her time with all her wedding plans so she will not leave out a detail. Smart girl, Niki! She plans to enjoy every minute of shopping, parties, showers, etc., with all the major decisions on wedding plans already behind her.

It's always especially nice to have the assistance of your mother AND your future mother-in-law, their good will and a lot of love while making plans for a new and happier future.

Niki says Robert looks like a Greek god he is so handsome and Mrs. Snowden says it's also unusual for her son to change his mind. He often remarked, "Oh, Mother, I don't want to marry a Greek girl," but in Niki's case it wasn't hard for Robert to change his mind.

Evie's Pointers to the Bride: Paper of plastic flowers are never considered in good taste for weddings.

Luncheon Honors C.O.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Gibbs hosted a luncheon at the Thunderbird Motel for Col. and Mrs. Daniel Byrnes, who have received orders to another post.

Col. Byrnes is commanding officer of Ft. Story. Several presentations were made to the colonel, who has been very active in local civic affairs. A plaque was presented by Charles C. Kirkpatrick of Rosewood Memorial Park on behalf of the Tidewater Veterans Association.

Col. Byrnes was instrumental in the planning and promotion of programs for ceremonies held on Memorial Day, Veterans Day, and Pearl Harbor Days at the Tidewater Veterans Memorial Gardens.

Mayor Frank Dusch was among those present at the luncheon.

Planting a new lawn? Mid-August to mid-September is the best time in the entire year to do so. But be sure you don't plant seeds too thickly. There are over 2 million seeds to a pound of bluegrass and, if this much seed is distributed evenly over one thousand square feet of well-prepared ground, it will produce an excellent stand of grass.

exhibited for sale at this three day show. Among the many outstanding pieces will be a Sheffield silver gallery tray, the mate to which is in the Victoria and Albert Museum in London.

There'll be an assortment of fine pieces of furniture - both period and primitive - in beautifully aged woods. A large selection of rare and unusual antique jewelry and quality pieces of early brass, copper and pewter will be available; one item is a signed bronze lion, approximately 27" long and 12" high, recording every detail according to scale, which was in the reception room of the first Japanese Embassy in the United States. A large selection of wall clocks of every description - mantel clocks, wall clocks and grandfather's clocks; all in perfect condition.

Items of interest to the men will include decoys, mechanical banks, primitive items, old tools, bottles, old post cards and other memorabilia, a rare collection of horse prints done by Vanderbilt Allen in 1893, Indian artifacts, mettich steins, coins, etc.

A $25 Gift Certificate will be given away each day of the show and can be redeemed for merchandise at any booth during the show. And, a new innovation at antiques shows - BankAmericard will be honored at most booths.

Hours of the show will be from noon to 10 p.m. on Friday and Saturday and from noon to 8 p.m. on Sunday, the last day.

Weather-weary folks are sure to chirk up at the sight of Sangria, whether it appears in a tall, tinkling glass or a bowl-shaped version.

Travelers to Spanish-speaking lands usually bring back a taste for this fruit-wine beverage and an ardent desire to duplicate it at home. Traditionally, Sangria calls for a dry red wine, combined with sugar syrup and sliced citrus fruit. La Fonda del Sol, popular Spanish restaurant in New York City, reports a brisk demand for pitchers of Sangria made with white wine.

This newly-tested recipe circles the sugar syrup, yet produces a delightfully smooth Sangria. You'll enjoy it also with Lake Country White dinner wine or Taylor New York State Rhine Wine. Serve it with Arroz con Pollo (described here) for a truly Spanish evening.

Seatack Clean-Up Campaign Comes To A Successful End

By LES LEHIGH

One of the most highly organized and unusual projects ever undertaken in Virginia Beach came to a successful conclusion this past week with the climax of an intensive clean-up campaign in the Seatack region of the resort city.

The project involved ten months of back breaking labor in the gigantic "face lifting" program which included the clearing of structures declared unfit for habitation; the hauling away of junked and abandoned cars and miscellaneous debris; the repairing of homes; and the clearing of thick underbrush from areas which previously were health hazards by serving as havens for insects and rodents.

Perhaps the most unusual aspect of the project was its being completed primarily through the use of volunteers from all walks of life who "bent their backs" and used their hands in activities which many of them had never before engaged in. A wide variety of heavy duty equipment required in such an undertaking was donated along with the operators of the machinery, who instructed people in the use of various hand tools which many had never seen before.

Officials connected with the direction of the project and the overseeing of its operation agreed that one of the most rewarding feelings about the project was its completion without injuries to any of the volunteers who participated.

Those connected with the direction of the project say there is no concrete method of arriving at a figure representative of the number of people who volunteered their services. They not only came from among the 3,500 Seatack residents but from the various military installations located in the city as well as civic and business groups and women's organizations from outside the Seatack community.

It has been conservatively estimated that more than 25,000 man hours, many of these on weekends, were given to the many tasks required of the volunteers.

While it is difficult to fully evaluate the worth of the project, especially from the aspect of what it means to the people of the Seatack Community and the inner pride which those who took part must certainly feel, perhaps the only yardstick usable is one which everyone eventually comes to understand...that of dollars and cents. It has been estimated that if Virginia Beach had undertaken the project on the basis of a city renewal project its cost would have approached $250,000.

This figure includes such costs as the salaries of those engaged in the planning and direction of the project; the salaries which would have had to be paid as compensation for labor obtained on a volunteer basis; and other expenses, such as renting heavy duty equipment and machinery, the hauling of debris and junk, and the cost of land donated for a new recreation park, as well as the plants and shrubs donated for beautification of the area.

During the program 30 condemned and vacated buildings were demolished or burned under the supervision of the Seatack Volunteer Fire Department; the property on which the buildings had stood was graded and cleared; 200 abandoned cars and 350 tons of debris was hauled from the area; VEPCO completely updated the street lighting; and more than 30 linear miles of ditches were cleaned and graded.

One of the major projects carried out in the massive clean-up campaign was accomplished solely by Seatack residents themselves, and for which they can feel justifiably proud...that of repairing their homes and improving the appearance of their property.

This work included making program.

The Seatack Community Multipurpose Park on S. Birdneck Road is a visible testimonial to the cooperation which carried the Seatack Clean-Up Campaign to such a successful completion.

The recreational site, when completed, will contain a regulation size Pony League baseball field; basketball and volleyball courts; picnic areas complete with tables and grills; children's play areas with a variety of equipment; and parking spaces for private vehicles.

The five acres of land on which the park sits was once a wooded area with dense undergrowth. Volunteers from the Seatack Community, various civic leagues, and business groups, joined with men from the various military installations in clearing and grading the land. The park was designed as a neighborhood recreational area for all residents of Seatack, and is operated unnecessary repairs, repainting homes and fences, and planting shrubs and flowers to beautify their surroundings.

Nearly 50 homes in the community saved for their occupants in a friendly contest staged among residents of Seatack in a home beautification der guidance of the Parks and Recreation Department of Virginia Beach.

It has been estimated that if the City of Virginia Beach had borne the full cost of constructing the park, including the cost of acquiring the necessary land, the amount would have been about $50,000.

Last December a delegation of civilian and military representatives from Yorktown, Va., visited Seatack to learn more about the clean-up campaign to determine if a similar program might be used to upgrade the community around Lackey, Va. The group toured the area witnessing work crews in operation and studying demolition and hauling methods used.

The visitors expressed amazement over the way many people from varied walks of life cooperated in carrying out the clean-up campaign and said they hoped to undertake a similar program to solve the problems in the Lackey area.

A special ceremony was held last week at the Seatack Community Center during which residents of the community expressed their appreciation to everyone who took part in the massive campaign.

The ceremony was marked by the presentation of special "Community Awards" plaques to those organizations and persons who volunteered so much of their time, labor, and efforts to the project. The awards were sponsored by the Seatack Civic League and presented to recipients by Seatack Volunteer Fire Department Chief Aaron Parsons.

Those receiving awards, and the organizations which they represented, were Mayor A. Frank Dusch, City of Virginia Beach; Capt. William A. Schoeder, Jr., Oceana Naval Air Station; Cmdr. Russell Myers, Jr., Amphibious Construction Batalion #2, Little Creek Naval Amphibious Base; Col. Daniel K. Byrne, Fort Story; Cmdr. Grant H. Pollock, FAAWTC; Dam Neck; Mrs. Arthur H. Gallagher, Council of Garden Clubs of Virginia Beach; Mrs. James P. Quinn, Chesapeake Colony Garden Club; Mrs. Larry Sandillo, Tidewater Homebuilders Auxiliary; Robert Warren, Virginia Beach Jaycees; and City Planner Jim Wilson.

Capt. Schoeder was given much of the credit for coordinating the work performed by hundreds of men from the various military installations who volunteered their time and labor, as well as obtaining the use of most of the heavy duty equipment and qualified operators required in the project.

Parsons and Wilson collaborated on direction of the overall program, guiding it to completion by the scheduling of tasks which had to be completed and assigning crews of volunteers to specific duties.

In reflecting over the months required to complete the project, Parsons was high in his praise for everyone who contributed to the program, and added he was especially "grateful for the fine support that the ladies of the STOP Program Community Action Workers gave throughout the clean-up drive".

One of the main contributions to the program made by the women was the supplying and serving of food for volunteers on the job. These meals varied from simple snacks to complete hot lunches and drinks.

Wilson said "The attitude of the (Seatack) community is very positive in wanting to promote the image of their region, and want more enforcement of the City Code (regarding living conditions) to keep the situation status quo in their community."

This photo shows some of the "junk" items which were removed from yards and fields in the Seatack clean-up campaign.

'Friendship' Unites Women

The old adage about the "woman behind the man" certainly holds true in Seatack.

The women have been behind the men, along side of them and working on their own besides.

First members of the Auxiliary to the Seatack Volunteer Fire Department and members of the Virginia Beach Council of Church Women organized a tremendous food program to feed the many volunteers who showed up each Saturday to take part in the clean up program. There is really no telling how many hamburgers were prepared and consumed. Hot coffee was kept brewing to thaw out cold men during the winter.

Next the women undertook a project of their own—to raise money to build an addition to the Seatack Community Center to house a day care center for the children of working mothers. Funds have been raised slowly but steadily in a number of ways including bake sales, talent shows and an African mass. Officially named "Project Friendship", it has also received contributions from a number of garden clubs who at Christmas decided to donate money they would have spent on exchanging Christmas presents to Project Friendship instead.

Project Friendship was initiated by the Council of Church Women, but has gained the interest and support of many other besides.

A personal loan enabled the group to purchase additional land at the Community Center for the day care center.

Then Chesapeake Colony Garden Club undertook the landscaping of the Community Center which included replacing of shrubbery and the planting of flower beds. Much of the original shrubbery was lost in weeds.

The club's efforts won them first place in the Sear's sponsored HANDS (Home and Neighborhood Development Sponsors) contest.

The Virginia Beach Council of Garden Clubs, Inc. contributed $50 toward equipment for the two new playgrounds built in Seatack.

It has not been one group, one race or one creed doing all the work. But it has truly been a uniting of people in a community effort supported by all.

Volunteers were "rewarded" for their efforts with plenty of good food and hot coffee.

OVERLOADING

The extra weight can be dangerous to your health. That is particularly true when it comes to pleasure boating. Vessel casualties accounted for 551 of the 1260 persons who drowned in boating accidents last year. Why so many casualties? Statistics show that chief among the reasons therefor was improper boat loading or overloading. It happens all too frequently; perhaps there are many more cases where boats are overloaded and nothing happens. They're lucky. But this is not always the case.

It was a beautiful August day on an inland lake. The wind was almost calm; the water surface was flat with no waves. It was a day with temperatures in the 80s and the water was warm. The family had borrowed a 14-foot, 9-inch boat for a day's outing on the lake. They invited along a friend and his wife.

The boat was a safely constructed one, powered by an outboard motor rated at the maximum recommended horsepower by the manufacturer. An ample number of approved lifesaving devices were aboard. The computed safe weight carrying capacity of the boat, including the motor, was 822 pounds. Weight of the motor was 240 pounds. The actual weight of the persons on board was not determined, but is known that there were six of them. Two adults and one three-year-old were sitting on the front seat, while two adult ladies and a five-year-old were sitting in the rear seat. The six life preservers were stowed under the foredeck. There were also four Coast Guard approved buoyant cushions being used as seat cushions.

All was going well. The boat had just completed making a turn when the engine suddenly stopped. The operator - sitting in the front seat - went aft to inspect the motor. Almost immediately the boat started to chop water over the transom, or stern. At this time the three-year-old was standing between the front seats holding on to the windshield. The operator immediately rushed forward to get the life preservers out of the foredeck, but had only enough time to get one, which he gave to one of the ladies as the boat sank. The other lady and the five-year-old clung to buoyant cushions and were safe. The other adults swam to shore.

The sunken boat was found the next morning in about 70 feet of water - 150 feet from shore. The body of the three-year-old was also found - in the boat under the foredeck with five lifesaving devices. But not wearing one!

Examination of the boat revealed no visible hull damage. The boat was of double bottom construction with a flotation chamber of unknown capacity in the bottom. The flotation chamber was provided with drain plugs, but the condition of the plugs and the integrity of the chamber were not determined when the boat was recovered. The boat was not equipped with a plate showing safe weight carrying capacity. WHAT HAPPENED?

Hindsight, is, of course, better than foresight. But it's the only experience we have. And it is the only way by which we can try to determine what NOT to do the next time. The story above is from actual accidents files. Examine the elements of that case and ask yourself what could have been done to prevent the actual outcome. Was the boat overloaded?

Since there was no plate on the boat listing the safe load carrying capacity, it would be difficult to prove that it was overloaded. However, by best estimates the six persons aboard, plus the weight of the motor, would have exceeded the calculated weight capacity of the boat. There is no requirement for a manufacturer at present to affix a capacity plate to his product. (Note: Legislation has been introduced in both houses of Congress which could be applied to make this a requirement on the part of the manufacturer). In the case in point, there was no way for the operator to know whether or not he was overloaded.

Were the lifesaving devices readily accessible? The quickness with which the boat sank would indicate that the lifesaving devices might better have been available were they not under the foredeck. The operator had the right idea when he rushed to get them upon seeing the water come in the boat - but he didn't have time.

Could the tragedy have been avoided? Probably. Should children and non-swimmers wear lifesaving devices? Yes. Should the operator know whether or not the boat is overloaded and therefore unsafe? Yes, if possible. If there is any doubt, find out. Was one of the reasons for shipping water over the stern due to the operator's moving aft to check the motor? Perhaps. Improper loading accounts for many casualties. By moving aft in this case, the boat probably became improperly loaded, that is, the weight was not equally distributed.

MORAL

There are many lessons to be learned from cases like this. Almost 60% of all boating fatalities can be attributed to the fault of the operator. Was this the case in this story?
